LANDLORD AND TENANT (

STOP PRESS:

The Mortgage Repossessions (Protection of Tenants etc) Act 2010 makes provision so as to protect persons whose tenancies are not binding on mortgagees and to require mortgagees to give notice of the proposed execution of possession orders. The Act received the royal assent on 8 April 2010 and comes into force on a day or days to be appointed. For details of commencement, see the COMMENCEMENT OF STATUTES table in the Current Service Noter-up booklet.

Section 1 makes provision in respect of the power of the court to postpone the date for delivery of possession of a property where a mortgagee under a mortgage of land, which consists of or includes a dwelling-house, brings an action in which the mortgagee claims possession of the mortgaged property and there is an unauthorised tenancy of all or part of the property. By virtue of s 2, where a mortgagee under a mortgage of land, which consists of or includes a dwelling-house, obtains an order for possession of the mortgaged property, the order may be executed only if the mortgagee gives notice at the property of any prescribed step taken for the purpose of executing the order, and only after the end of a prescribed period beginning with the day on which such notice is given. Section 3 deals with interpretation. Section 4 deals with commencement, extent and the short title.

1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT

(1) CREATION OF TENANCY

1. General principles.

The relationship of landlord and tenant arises as a rule<sup>1</sup> when one person ('the landlord') grants to another ('the tenant') a right to the exclusive possession of land<sup>2</sup> for a term less than that which the landlord has in the land<sup>3</sup>. The grant or demise must be either for a time which is subject to a definite limit originally, as in the case of a lease for a term of years certain, or for a time which, although originally indefinite, may be made subject to a definite limit by either party as of right by that party giving appropriate notice to the other, for example a tenancy from year to year<sup>4</sup>. The interest in the property which remains in the landlord is called the reversion, and, as a rule, there is incident to it the right to receive from the tenant payment of rent<sup>5</sup> for the use of the property.

The relationship of landlord and tenant was originally one of contract only, but from early times the contract conferred an estate in the land on the tenant without losing all its contractual characteristics<sup>6</sup>.

1 The relationship of landlord and tenant has also been created by statute: see PARA 5 post.

2 'Land' may include both corporeal hereditaments such as land, mines and buildings and incorporeal hereditaments such as easements, profits à prendre, franchises etc. See further PARA 17 post.

3 See PARA 99 et seq post.

4 A grant for an uncertain duration cannot create a lease: see Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] 2 AC 386, [1992] 3 All ER 504, HL; and PARA 238 post.

5 As to the nature and the reservation of rent see PARA 242 et seq post. The rent need not be a monetary rent, although in modern times it usually is, and services are not regarded as rent for the purposes of the Rent Acts unless they have been quantified by the parties in monetary terms: Barnes v Barratt [1970] 2 QB 657, [1970] 2 All ER 483, CA (no quantification); Montague v Browning [1954] 2 All ER 601, [1954] 1 WLR 1039, CA (services quantified and equated to a monetary rent). Where a payment by the occupier is not specifically designated as rent, the court must consider all the circumstances of the case to determine whether the payment is in respect of rent: Bostock v Bryant (1990) 61 P & CR 23, [1990] 2 EGLR 101, CA (payment by occupier of gas and electricity bills held not to constitute the payment of rent). In order to create a tenancy, it is not essential that a rent should be reserved: Knight's Case (1588) 5 Co Rep 54b at 55a; 2 Platt's Law of Leases 82; Ashburn Anstalt v Arnold [1989] Ch 1, [1988] 2 All ER 147, CA (overruled on another point by Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] 2 AC 386, [1992] 3 All ER 504, HL); Birrell v Casey (1989) 58 P & CR 184, CA; Skipton Building Society v Clayton (1993) 66 P & CR 223, 25 HLR 596, CA. Consequently, where no rent is intended to be paid, there is no object in adopting the practice of reserving a peppercorn rent. The acceptance of the lease by the tenant is a sufficient consideration for the contract.

6 As to the origin and nature of leasehold tenure see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 100 et seq; and as to the application to leases of the contractual doctrines of frustration and repudiation see PARA 601 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(1) CREATION OF TENANCY/2. Tenancy by contract.

2. Tenancy by contract.

A contract of tenancy may be created by writing or orally by any words which express the intention of entering into legal relations and which grant exclusive possession for a fixed or periodic term<sup>1</sup>, or by conduct<sup>2</sup>. A legal estate for a term of years<sup>3</sup> may be created by a lease by deed for any term<sup>4</sup>, or by a written or oral tenancy agreement for a term not exceeding three years taking effect in possession at the best rent that can be reasonably obtained without taking a fine<sup>5</sup>. It is not necessary for the full establishment of the relationship of landlord and tenant that the tenant should have entered on the land<sup>6</sup>. Any other written or oral contract of tenancy of which specific performance may be ordered creates an agreement for a lease<sup>7</sup> and, in addition, if the tenant enters and pays rent at a yearly rate, creates by operation of law a legal estate, namely a yearly tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

1 Where the indicia of a tenancy are present, then, save in exceptional circumstances, the court will infer that a tenancy is created even if the parties do not intend that legal consequence: Street v Mountford [1985] AC 809, [1985] 2 All ER 289, HL. As to the requirement of the reservation of rent see PARA 1 note 5 ante; as to the intention to enter into legal relations see PARA 8 the text and note 1 post; and as to the grant of exclusive possession see PARA 6 post.

3 A term of years absolute is one of the two legal estates in land capable of subsisting or of being conveyed or created at law (see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 1(1); and REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARAS 45, 100 et seq), and means a term of years, taking effect either in possession or in reversion whether or not at a rent, with or without impeachment for waste, subject or not to another legal estate, and either certain or liable to determination by notice, re-entry, operation of law, or by a provision for cesser on redemption, or in any other event (other than the dropping of a life, or the determination of a determinable life interest); but does not include any term of years determinable with life or lives or with the cesser of a determinable life interest, nor, if created on or after 1 January 1926, a term of years which is not expressed to take effect in possession within 21 years after its creation where required by the 1925 Act to take effect within that period (s 205(1) (xxvii)). 'Term of years' includes a term for less than a year, or for a year or years and a fraction of a year or from year to year: s 205(1)(xxvii). As to commonhold see PARA 18 post.

4 See ibid ss 52(1), (2)(d), (g); and PARA 102 post (deed in general necessary for the creation of a legal estate); but exceptions to this rule exist in the case of a lease or tenancy agreement falling within s 54(2) (see the text to note 5 infra; and PARAS 101-102 post), or a tenancy arising by operation of law. See further DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 14-15.

6 See ibid s 149(2); and PARA 118 post.

8 See PARA 209 post.

3. Attornment.

A person in occupation of property may establish the relationship of landlord and tenant between himself and another person by attornment, that is to say by acknowledging that he is tenant to that other person<sup>1</sup>. Where the occupier is a tenant and agrees to hold of a new landlord during the currency of the agreement without any change in the terms of the tenancy, this is a mere attornment<sup>2</sup>; but if it is more than a mere acknowledgment of a new landlord in that it contains new or different terms of tenancy, it is a lease or an agreement for a lease<sup>3</sup>. Attornment both estops the tenant from disputing the landlord's title<sup>4</sup> and is evidence of that title as against future occupiers even though not claiming through the tenant<sup>5</sup>.

Attornment was formerly necessary upon a grant of the reversion in order to establish the grantee's title, but not in the case of a devise<sup>6</sup>. Attornment is no longer necessary upon the grant of a reversion, but the tenant may safely pay rent to his original landlord until he receives notice of the grant<sup>7</sup>.

Attornment is also appropriate when an owner in occupation of property conveys the property to another under whom he becomes tenant, and an attornment clause can be inserted in mortgages by an occupying owner in order to give the mortgagee the remedies incident to the position of landlord<sup>8</sup>; but usually an attornment clause in a mortgage is of little value because the mortgagee may not in general exercise the remedy of distress unless the clause is registered as a bill of sale<sup>9</sup> and does not need an attornment clause in order to obtain summary judgment<sup>10</sup> for possession<sup>11</sup>.

4. Tenancy by estoppel.

A lease of land is created by estoppel when the grantor or landlord has no legal estate or interest in the land at the time of the grant<sup>1</sup>; and, although a title by estoppel, such as the landlord or grantor in this case possesses, is good only against the person estopped by his own deed, namely the tenant or the grantee, yet as against the person estopped it has all the elements of a real title<sup>2</sup>. It has been judicially stated that 'tenancy by estoppel' does not, however, describe an agreement which would not otherwise be a lease or tenancy<sup>3</sup> but which is treated as being one by virtue of an estoppel. The estoppel arises when one or other of the parties wants to deny one of the ordinary incidents or obligations of the tenancy on the ground that the landlord had no legal estate; and the basis of the estoppel is that having entered into an agreement which constitutes a lease or tenancy, he cannot repudiate that incident or obligation. Thus on this analysis it is the fact that the agreement between the parties constitutes a tenancy that gives rise to an estoppel and not the other way round<sup>4</sup>.

A tenant who holds under a lease by a deed between parties is estopped from disputing his landlord's title<sup>5</sup> both during and after the expiration of his term unless he has been evicted by title paramount<sup>6</sup>. The estoppel continues after the tenant has gone out of possession with respect to breaches of covenant committed during the lease<sup>7</sup>.

See also Bell v General Accident Fire & Life Assurance Corp Ltd [1998] 1 EGLR 69, [1998] 17 EG 144, CA (the foundation of a tenancy by estoppel is that neither the landlord nor the tenant is allowed to deny the other's title); and Newham London Borough Council v Phillips [1998] 1 FLR 613, (1997) 30 HLR 859, CA.

As to the circumstances in which a tenancy by estoppel is good against a mortgagee see PARA 34 the text and note 4 post. Where a tenant under a periodic tenancy purports to grant a subtenancy for a term certain the duration of which would extend beyond the period for which the tenant can then be assured that his tenancy will last, the subtenancy is effective as a tenancy by estoppel only in respect of the subsequent period, that is to say for such period of the term certain as would extend beyond the earliest date at which the grantor's own periodic tenancy might be determined by notice to quit; as each date upon which that notice to quit may be given passes, so the tenancy by estoppel is 'fed' and becomes fully effective until the next such date. Cf the position where a tenant purports to sublet for a term certain which exceeds the duration of his own term certain: see PARA 107 post.

3 Eg an agreement which does not grant exclusive possession (a licence). A 'lease' or 'tenancy' is a contractually binding agreement, not referable to any other relationship between the parties, by which one person gives another the right to exclusive occupation of land for a fixed or renewable period or periods of time, usually in return for a periodic payment in money. An agreement having these characteristics creates a relationship of landlord and tenant to which the common law or statute may then attach various incidents: see Bruton v London and Quadrant Housing Trust [2000] 1 AC 406 at 413, [1999] 3 All ER 481 at 485-486, HL, per Lord Hoffmann; and see eg Street v Mountford [1985] AC 809, [1985] 2 All ER 289, HL; and PARA 6 et seq post. As to estoppel between licensor and licensee see ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 1040.

4 See Bruton v London and Quadrant Housing Trust [2000] 1 AC 406 at 415-416, [1999] 3 All ER 481 at 488, HL, per Lord Hoffmann.

A tenancy by estoppel is, it seems, subject to the operation of the Rent Acts if, apart from the manner of its creation, its terms are such as to fall within those Acts (Stratford v Syrett [1958] 1 QB 107 at 112-113, 115, [1957] 3 All ER 363 at 365, 367, CA); but no estoppel as to the terms of any tenancy can operate so as to give a court jurisdiction under those Acts which it would not otherwise possess, or to oust its jurisdiction under those Acts (see PARA 813 post).

5. Tenancy arising under or by reason of statute.

Although at common law the relationship of landlord and tenant is based on contract, there are now circumstances in which, by operation of statute<sup>1</sup>, that relationship is continued after the expiry of any contractual relationship<sup>2</sup>, other situations in which a landlord and a tenant are obliged by statute to enter into a new contractual relationship<sup>3</sup>, and others where the tenancy is prolonged<sup>4</sup> or is converted by statute into a different type of landlord and tenant relationship<sup>5</sup>. In a few instances the relationship of landlord and tenant is thrust upon parties by statute where previously no contractual relationship had existed between them at all<sup>6</sup>, although some form of contractual relationship (whether that of landlord and tenant or that of licensor and licensee<sup>7</sup>) had existed between the occupier of the premises and some other person. The origins of any existing landlord and tenant relationship can, therefore, be traced to a contract, albeit between different persons, and the incidents of the tenancy will largely be defined by that contract<sup>8</sup>.

1 As to the general scope of legislative intervention in the field of landlord and tenant see PARA 45 et seq post.

2 In the case of statutory tenants under the Rent Act 1977 s 2 (as amended) (see PARA 831 post) and s 3 (see PARA 837 post) and statutory periodic tenants under the Housing Act 1988 s 5 (as amended) (see PARAS 1067-1071 post). As between the statutory tenant and his landlord the relationship of landlord and tenant subsists, but their contract is not continued by the statute, so that in contrast to a tenant at common law (or in equity) a statutory tenant has no estate in the demised premises, but has a purely personal right deriving from statute to retain possession of those premises until an order for possession is made by the court, that right to occupy being the right to occupy upon the terms of the former contract in so far as those terms are consistent with the statutory provisions: see the Rent Act 1977 s 3(1); Roe v Russell [1928] 2 KB 117 at 131, CA; Carter v SU Carbuter Co [1942] 2 KB 288 at 291, [1942] 2 All ER 228 at 231, CA; and PARAS 832, 837 post. In the case of a statutory periodic tenant, the tenancy arising by statute is deemed to have been granted by the person who was previously the landlord to the person who was previously the tenant: see the Housing Act 1988 s 5(3)(b). As to the terms of the statutory periodic tenancy see PARAS 1068-1070 post.

3 In the case of premises to which the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post), the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Pt I (ss 1-37) (as amended) (see PARA 1389 et seq post), the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (ss 118-188) (as amended) (see PARA 1795 et seq post) and the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 Pt I Chs I, II (ss 1-62) (as amended) (see PARA 1532 et seq post) apply.

4 In the case of (1) tenancies of agricultural holdings to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies, where the tenancy is converted to or continued as a tenancy from year to year by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 ss 2, 3, with restrictions imposed on the efficacy of notices to quit (see AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 373 et seq); (2) restricted contracts entered into before 28 November 1980 where, by virtue of the Rent Act 1977 ss 102A-106 (as amended), the operation of any notice to quit is suspended if reference is made to a rent tribunal and that tribunal has power in certain circumstances to curtail the suspension or to confer suspension (see PARA 1002 et seq post); (3) restricted contracts entered into on or after 28 November 1980 where, by virtue of s 106A (as added), on the making of an order for possession of a dwelling house, the court may stay or suspend execution of the order or postpone the date of possession (see PARA 1008 post); (4) business tenancies which are continued by operation of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 24 (as amended) (see PARA 713 post); (5) long tenancies of certain residential premises, which are continued by s 3 (as amended) (see PARA 1209 post) or by the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 186(1), Sch 10 para 3 (see PARA 1248 post); in the latter case, such a tenancy may be terminated by a landlord's notice and replaced by an assured tenancy arising by virtue of Sch 10 para 9 (see PARA 1254 post).

5 Eg (1) the conversion of certain licences into tenancies under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 2 (see AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 327); (2) the conversion of copyhold into leasehold interests, the copyhold interests which corresponded in duration to leasehold interests or which were for a life or lives being converted into leasehold interests with effect from 1 January 1926 (Law of Property Act 1922 s 133(1), (3) (repealed); Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(6) (as amended); and see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 39); (3) a tenant's right of first refusal to purchase the landlord's interest under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt I (ss 1-20) (as amended) (see PARA 1744 et seq post); and (4) the right of certain public and social housing sector tenants to purchase the freehold or to have a long lease under the Housing Act 1988 (see PARA 1795 et seq post).

6 Eg in the case of subtenants who are thrust upon their superior landlord as direct tenants by the operation of the Rent Act 1977 s 137 (as amended) (see PARAS 975-977 post). In such a case, however, there was a contract between the occupier of the premises (who had become the statutory tenant) and someone else (that is to say the former head tenant) in the first place.

7 As to the position of licensees of mobile homes and their statutory protection see PARA 1267 et seq post.

8 There may also be terms implied by common law or implied, modified or annulled by statute. The first place to look to see what are the terms of a tenancy is, however, always the most recent agreement made between the landlord and the tenant (or their predecessors in title), which sometimes may mean looking right back to the original agreement which set in motion the chain of events which launched any statutory process of continuation or conversion. As to the abolition of the doctrine of privity of contract between landlords and tenants in relation to tenancies beginning on or after 1 January 1996 see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995; and PARAS 554, 578 et seq post.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(2) LEASES DISTINGUISHED FROM LICENCES TO OCCUPY LAND/6. Nature of grant of exclusive possession.

(2) LEASES DISTINGUISHED FROM LICENCES TO OCCUPY LAND

6. Nature of grant of exclusive possession.

There can be no tenancy without the grant of exclusive possession. Exclusive possession enables the tenant to exclude strangers and to exclude also the landlord unless the landlord is exercising rights to enter the land granted to him under the tenancy agreement<sup>1</sup>. Where the agreement is made in writing, the court analyses the substance of the rights and obligations in the agreement in order to determine whether exclusive possession has been granted<sup>2</sup>. The terms of the true bargain may not, however, be wholly the same as that of the bargain appearing on the face of the agreement, even though the agreement as a whole is not a sham<sup>3</sup>.

Where the owner of land enters into separate agreements with a number of persons for them to share residential accommodation, there is a grant of a joint right to exclusive possession and thus a joint tenancy where the agreements are identical and interdependent<sup>4</sup>. Where, however, there are separate agreements entered into at different times and on different terms, there is no grant of a joint right of exclusive possession<sup>5</sup>.

A contract granting the right to erect and maintain advertising hoardings at specified sites has been held to create a licence and not a tenancy since there was no exclusive possession of any of the sites; the sites were undefined areas in which the hoardings and their concrete bases were to be placed<sup>6</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(2) LEASES DISTINGUISHED FROM LICENCES TO OCCUPY LAND/7. General principles for determining whether agreement creates lease or licence.

7. General principles for determining whether agreement creates lease or licence.

Save in exceptional circumstances<sup>1</sup>, an agreement creates the relationship of landlord and tenant and not that of licensor and licensee where the following three hallmarks are present:

- 1 (1) there is the grant of exclusive possession<sup>2</sup>;
- 2 (2) the grant is for a fixed or periodic term<sup>3</sup>;
- 3 (3) there is a stated rent<sup>4</sup>.

Where the agreement is made in writing, the question whether it creates a tenancy or a licence is determined by a consideration of the substantive terms of the agreement and not by the labels or terminology used<sup>5</sup>. The professed intentions of the parties are irrelevant in determining whether the agreement creates a tenancy or a licence<sup>6</sup>. Similarly, the effect of statutory security of tenure or other protection is irrelevant in determining whether an agreement creates a tenancy or a licence<sup>7</sup>. The court is, however, required to be astute to detect and frustrate sham devices and artificial transactions whose only object is to disguise the grant of a tenancy and to evade the occupier's claiming statutory protection<sup>8</sup>.

It has been judicially stated that where two substantial parties of equal bargaining power and with full legal advice have agreed that a contract does not create a tenancy, it is surprising and unedifying that one party should seek to argue otherwise<sup>9</sup>.

- 1 As to the circumstances which negative the presumption of a tenancy see PARA 8 post.
  - 2 As to the nature of the grant of exclusive possession see PARA 6 ante.
  - 3 As to the requirements of a fixed or periodic term see PARA 238 post. The grant of a term for an uncertain duration cannot create a lease: see Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] 2 AC 386, [1992] 3 All ER 504, HL; and PARA 238 post.
  - 4 Street v Mountford [1985] AC 809, [1985] 2 All ER 289, HL. As to the necessity of the reservation of a rent see PARA 1 note 5 ante. The principles applied in determining whether a grant creates a tenancy or a licence are the same irrespective of whether the premises are for residential or business purposes: see London & Associated Investment Trust plc v Calow (1986) 53 P & CR 340, [1986] 2 EGLR 80; but see Dresden Estates Ltd v Collinson (1987) 55 P & CR 47, [1987] 1 EGLR 45, CA. The observations in Street v Mountford supra were directed primarily to a case in which the three hallmarks were the factors of overriding importance and in which the landlord had deliberately set out to try to exclude Rent Act protection for the tenant and those observations cannot be applied indiscriminately, and particularly not in a case in which there are other, equally significant factors to be taken into account in addition to the three hallmarks: Mehta v Royal Bank of Scotland plc (1999) 32 HLR 45, [1999] 3 EGLR 153.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(2) LEASES DISTINGUISHED FROM LICENCES TO OCCUPY LAND/8. Circumstances which negative the presumption of a tenancy.

8. Circumstances which negative the presumption of a tenancy.

If the parties do not intend to enter into legal relations at all, no tenancy can be created<sup>1</sup>. The circumstances which negative any intention to create a tenancy include a family arrangement or an act of friendship or generosity<sup>2</sup>. The surrounding circumstances may show that the right to exclusive possession is referable to a legal relationship other than a tenancy, such as occupancy under a contract or an intended contract for the sale of the land<sup>3</sup>, occupancy pursuant to a contract of employment<sup>4</sup>, or occupancy referable to the holding of an office<sup>5</sup>. The grant of a right to occupy pursuant to a statutory duty does not, however, negative the presumption of a tenancy<sup>6</sup>. Where a tenant holds over after the expiry of an existing tenancy, it is an open question whether it is right and proper to infer from all the circumstances, including any payment of rent, that the parties had agreed to enter into a new tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

1 'There is one golden rule which is of very general application, namely, that the law does not impute intention to enter into legal relationships where the circumstances and the conduct of the parties negative any intention of the kind': Booker v Palmer [1942] 2 All ER 674 at 677, CA (owner of cottage gave oral permission for person whose house had been destroyed by bombing to occupy the cottage rent-free for duration of war; occupier held to be licensee). ## 9. Creation of licence.

A licence is normally created where a person is granted the right to use premises without becoming entitled to exclusive possession of them<sup>1</sup>, or where exceptional circumstances exist which negative the presumption of the grant of a tenancy<sup>2</sup>. If the agreement is merely for the use of the property in a certain way and on certain terms while the property remains in the owner's possession and control, the agreement operates as a licence<sup>3</sup>, even though the agreement may employ words appropriate to a lease<sup>4</sup>.

Legislation may determine whether a tenancy or a licence exists. For example, under the immigration and asylum legislation a resident of an accommodation centre will not be treated as acquiring a tenancy of or other interest in any part of the centre, whether by virtue of an agreement between the resident and another person or otherwise<sup>5</sup>.

10. Nature of licence.

A mere licence does not create any estate or interest in the property to which it relates<sup>1</sup>; it only makes an act lawful which otherwise would be unlawful<sup>2</sup>. A person cannot grant a licence to himself, nor to himself jointly with another<sup>3</sup>. A purely personal licence is not assignable<sup>4</sup>. A gratuitous licence is revocable by notice at any time<sup>5</sup>, and is revoked by the death of either party or by an assignment of the land over which the licence is granted<sup>6</sup>.

Where a licence is granted by contract, the resulting right to occupy land is usually described as a 'contractual licence', but it is not an entity distinct from the contract which brings it into being, but merely one of the provisions of that contract<sup>7</sup>. A contractual licence may be revocable (and, if revocable, may be made revocable by a specified period of notice<sup>8</sup>) or may be irrevocable according to the express or implied terms of the contract between the parties<sup>9</sup>, and may be assignable or not assignable according to the terms of the contract<sup>10</sup>. Where the land the subject matter of the licence is owned jointly, the licence may be revoked by one co-owner only<sup>11</sup>. In order to establish a contractual licence there must be a promise which is intended to be binding and is either supported by consideration, or is intended to be acted upon and is in fact acted upon<sup>12</sup>. Thus, where a house was purchased by a father with the aid of a mortgage as a house for his son and daughter-in-law, and the father took the conveyance in his own name but promised that, if the son and daughter-in-law paid all the mortgage instalments, the house would be their property, the son and daughter-in-law were held to be contractual licensees and not tenants, but to be entitled to continue in occupation so long as they paid the instalments<sup>13</sup>. Similarly, where a married couple vacated their own house in which they had been protected by the Rent Acts and came to look after the wife's mother in return for an express promise that they should be permitted to reside for life in her home after her death, they were held to have a contractual licence so to reside<sup>14</sup>.

If the licensee under a revocable licence has brought property onto the land, he is entitled to notice of revocation<sup>15</sup> and to a reasonable time for removing his property and in which to make arrangements to carry on his business elsewhere<sup>16</sup>. Even if a notice specifies an unreasonably short time for the licensee to vacate the premises, it may nevertheless be effective in revoking the licence although it cannot be enforced until a reasonable time has elapsed<sup>17</sup>. If, after the revocation of a licence, the licensee quits the premises and then re-enters, his re-entry constitutes a trespass even though the revocation of the licence was wrongful<sup>18</sup>. If the revocation of the licence is a breach of contract, the licensee may recover damages for the breach<sup>19</sup>. Where there are mutually dependent licences, the grantor of one of the licences may not revoke the licence granted by him while retaining the benefit of the licence granted to him<sup>20</sup>. In the absence of any express or implied stipulation, a licensee may not be compelled to remove buildings erected under the licence<sup>21</sup>.

If by his own act it becomes impossible for the grantor of the licence to give facilities for its exercise, and the licence was given for valuable consideration, the grantor is liable to the licensee in damages for breach of contract<sup>22</sup>.

Since a licence does not create an interest in land, it is not binding upon a successor in title of the original grantor unless the circumstances are such as to give rise to a constructive trust<sup>23</sup>.

1 Nevertheless, the grantor owes a duty of care to the grantee: see PARA 475 post.

Consequently an agreement for a licence is not an agreement for an interest in land such as is now required to comply with the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended) (see PARA 79 post): see Wells v Kingston-upon-Hull Corpn (1875) LR 10 CP 402 at 409. A licence to occupy land does not give to the licensee or persons claiming through him the protection of the Rent Acts: see Foster v Robinson [1951] 1 KB 149, [1950] 2 All ER 342, CA; Marcroft Wagons Ltd v Smith [1951] 2 KB 496, [1951] 2 All ER 271, CA. A person occupying residential premises under a licence cannot be an assured tenant under the Housing Act 1988: see PARAS 1019, 1035 post. As to the statutory protection of agricultural workers occupying tied cottages as part of their remuneration see PARA 1134 et seq post; and as to the limited security of tenure given to occupiers of mobile homes see PARA 1267 et seq post.

Where a licence is granted which permits works to be done on land, the licence implies that the access which is needed in order to carry out those works will be granted: see Europa 2000 Ltd v Keles [2005] EWCA Civ 1748, [2005] All ER (D) 93 (Dec) (where, however, a factual dispute as to the type of access needed was resolved in favour of the licensor). Where the licence is coupled with the grant of a lease at a premium in contemplation of such works, failure to grant the necessary access will amount to a derogation from grant: Europa 2000 Ltd v Keles supra at [31], obiter, per Chadwick LJ.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council approved the analysis of the Court of Appeal in Minister of Health v Bellotti supra in Australian Blue Metal Ltd v Hughes [1963] AC 74, [1962] 3 All ER 335, PC; and Canadian Pacific Rly Co v R supra was further distinguished as a decision which depended on the unusual circumstances of the case in Tool Metal Manufacturing Co Ltd v Tungsten Electric Co Ltd [1955] 2 All ER 657, [1955] 1 WLR 761, HL. However, in Governing Body of Henrietta Barnett School v Hampstead Garden Suburb Institute (1995) 93 LGR 470 at 508, Canadian Pacific Rly Co v R supra was said to be a persuasive authority where the same or similar facts apply; in that case a nine-month notice to a body conducting a public function but occupying land as a licensee was held to be invalid where that public body needed to give two years' notice of cessation of activity. In Winter Garden Theatre (London) Ltd v Millennium Productions Ltd [1948] AC 173 at 197, [1947] 2 All ER 331 at 340, HL, Lord Porter expressed the provisional view that a licence is prima facie terminable at once after notice to determine has been given, but that the licensee must be given a time reasonable in the circumstances to vacate the premises, while Lord Uthwatt at 199 and 341 and Lord MacDermott at 206 and 345 were of opinion that in the circumstances of the case the notice given must be a reasonable notice. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(2) LEASES DISTINGUISHED FROM LICENCES TO OCCUPY LAND/11. Instances where grant conferring exclusive possession has been held to operate merely as a licence.

11. Instances where grant conferring exclusive possession has been held to operate merely as a licence.

The following are examples of cases where, notwithstanding the grant of exclusive possession, the occupier has been held to be a licensee only<sup>1</sup>. As a requisitioning authority<sup>2</sup> has no estate or interest in the requisitioned land, it cannot grant a lease, and any grant by the authority can take effect only as a licence<sup>3</sup>, so that an agreement permitting a farmer to occupy and use part of a Royal Air Force airfield as agricultural land was held to create merely a licence<sup>4</sup>. The right to occupy a filling station and garage, where the grantor's products only were to be sold and where a right of control was reserved to the grantor<sup>5</sup>, the right to occupy a room in an elderly persons' home, although the occupier was permitted to furnish the room himself<sup>6</sup>, and benevolent permission to live in a house without payment, where occupation lasted for 16 years<sup>7</sup>, have all been held to be situations where a licence was created. Similarly, a deserted wife, although enjoying certain statutory protection<sup>8</sup>, is to be regarded as the licensee and not the tenant of her husband.

Family arrangements may include an irrevocable grant of the right to exclusive possession, but the grantee may nevertheless be a licensee and not a tenant<sup>9</sup> so that he will not acquire title based on adverse possession<sup>10</sup>; and a person may be allowed temporary rights of exclusive possession to alleviate hardship or to express gratitude for services rendered in the past, and the grant may be construed as a licence, notwithstanding the fact that the occupier or a person claiming under him is thereby deprived of the protection of the Rent Acts<sup>11</sup>. Where, however, a purchaser is allowed into possession pending completion, he is normally regarded as a tenant at will and not a licensee<sup>12</sup> unless it has been expressly stipulated that he is to be a licensee<sup>13</sup>. An agricultural worker who occupies a tied cottage as part of his remuneration is a licensee<sup>14</sup> although he is now accorded some statutory protection<sup>15</sup>. A person who occupies an almshouse under a charitable trust is also a licensee<sup>16</sup>.

The following examples are of transactions in which exclusive possession was not conferred upon the grantee, and accordingly no tenancy can have been created<sup>1</sup>; an agreement for standing room in a factory for lace machines, the owner of the factory supplying steam power and reserving the right to enter for the purpose of attending to the running gear<sup>2</sup>; the letting of bookstalls on a railway platform<sup>3</sup>; the letting of space for a stall in an exhibition<sup>4</sup>; permission to use a shed for particular purposes<sup>5</sup>; a right for directors of one company to use a boardroom on premises of another company<sup>6</sup>; an exclusive right to put pleasure boats on a canal<sup>7</sup>; a licence to search for and get copperas stone on certain land at a yearly rental, with a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent<sup>8</sup>; power to dig for fireclay<sup>9</sup>; liberty to fasten a coal-hulk to a mooring in a river<sup>10</sup>; liberty to lay and stack coals on land<sup>11</sup>; liberty to search and dig for coal<sup>12</sup>; an agreement giving permission to erect or affix advertisements<sup>13</sup>; a right for an owner of adjoining property to enter premises and build up windows in default of the owner of the premises so doing<sup>14</sup>; and a licence to erect and maintain advertising hoardings on specified sites<sup>15</sup>.

13. Licence coupled with grant of interest.

A licence coupled with a grant of an interest in property is not revocable<sup>1</sup>. Such a licence is capable of assignment<sup>2</sup>, and covenants may be made to run with it<sup>3</sup>. A right to enter on land and enjoy a profit à prendre or other incorporeal hereditament is a licence coupled with an interest<sup>4</sup> and is irrevocable. Formerly it was necessary that the grant of the interest should be valid; thus, if the interest was an incorporeal hereditament, such as a right to make and use a watercourse, the grant was not valid unless made by deed, and the licence, unless so made, was, therefore, a mere licence and was revocable<sup>5</sup>; but since 1873<sup>6</sup> the court has been bound to give effect to equitable doctrines and it will restrain the revocation of a licence coupled with a grant which should be, but is not, made by deed<sup>7</sup>.

14. Licences coupled with proprietary estoppel.

As developed from common law estoppel by representation<sup>1</sup>, proprietary estoppel has been described as follows. The owner of land, A, in some way leads or allows the claimant, B, to believe that he has or can expect some kind of right or interest over A's land. To A's knowledge, B acts to his detriment in that belief. A then refuses B the anticipated right or interest in circumstances that make that refusal unconscionable. In those circumstances, an equity arises in B's favour. This gives B the right to go to court and seek relief. The court has a very wide discretion as to how it will give effect to this equity<sup>2</sup>.

Equity thus recognises and enforces rights (sometimes referred to as 'equities of possession' or 'equitable licences') so as to restrict the revocation of licences to occupy or use premises which at common law would be regarded as revocable. The court will undertake a threefold inquiry based not on B's mistake but on an agreement between A and B or on A's encouragement of B's expectation<sup>3</sup>. The court will inquire:

- 4 (1) whether an equity in favour of B arises out of the conduct and relationship of the parties;
- 5 (2) what is the extent of the equity, if one is established; and
- 6 (3) what is the relief appropriate to satisfy the equity<sup>4</sup>.

The court considers whether the quality of the assurances giving rise to B's expectation and the extent of B's detrimental reliance on those assurances in combination make it unconscionable for A to go back on them<sup>5</sup>. Representations made in the course of subject to contract negotiations do not satisfy this test<sup>6</sup>; and a longstanding practice cannot be converted into a representation or assurance sufficient to found a proprietary estoppel merely because it might have been reasonable for the other party to incur expenditure on the basis that that practice was likely to continue into the future<sup>7</sup>.

It has been judicially suggested that in an extreme case, subsequent unconscionable behaviour by B may mean that an equitable licence will be revoked<sup>8</sup>.

Proprietary estoppel may be a cause of action but only where it involves the promise of an interest in land<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to common law estoppel by representation see ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 957. For a discussion of the development of proprietary estoppel see Cooke The Modern Law of Estoppel (OUP, 2000) pp 42-53; Pawlowski The Doctrine of Proprietary Estoppel (Sweet and Maxwell, 1996); Spence Protecting Reliance: The Emergent Doctrine of Equitable Estoppel (Hart Publishing, 1999).

3 The basis of the development of this threefold test, which replaces the traditional 'five probanda' (see ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 1089) is the dissenting judgment of Lord Kingsdown in Ramsden v Dyson and Thornton (1866) LR 1 HL 129 ('if a man, under a verbal agreement with a landlord for a certain interest in land, or, what amounts to the same thing, under an expectation, created or encouraged by the landlord, that he shall have a certain interest, take possession of such land, with the consent of the landlord, and upon the faith of such promise or expectation, with the knowledge of the landlord, and without objection by him, lays out money upon the land, a court of equity will compel the landlord to give effect to such promise or expectation': Ramsden v Dyson and Thornton supra at 170). It seems that under this analysis both parties may be mistaken as to the true situation: see Taylor's Fashions Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Trustees Co Ltd, Old & Campbell Ltd v Liverpool Victoria Friendly Society [1982] QB 133n, [1981] 1 All ER 897.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(2) LEASES DISTINGUISHED FROM LICENCES TO OCCUPY LAND/15. Employee tenant or service occupancy.

15. Employee tenant or service occupancy.

An employee in occupation of premises belonging to his employer may be a tenant or a licensee<sup>1</sup>. Such a licensee is often referred to as a 'service occupier'. A service occupier is an employee who occupies his employer's premises in order to perform his duties as an employee<sup>2</sup>. An employee is a service occupier if it is essential to the performance of his duties that he should reside in a particular property or if there is an express term in his contract of employment that he should so reside and by doing so he can better perform his duties as an employee to a material degree<sup>3</sup>. If the employee does not occupy for the better performance of his duties and there is a written agreement containing provisions which are consistent only with a tenancy, so that the substance of the agreement<sup>4</sup> is the creation of a tenancy, then the employee is a tenant even though the agreement purports expressly to negative the creation of a tenancy<sup>5</sup>.

Where, however, a person is merely permitted to occupy premises, whether as a privilege<sup>6</sup> or by way of remuneration or part payment for his services<sup>7</sup>, he occupies as tenant and not as employee<sup>8</sup>, unless he does not have exclusive possession of the premises<sup>9</sup>. The fact that a person is allowed, as part of his remuneration, to carry on his own business in the premises he is required to occupy does not by itself alter the character of his occupation into that of a tenant<sup>10</sup>. A person who, under the terms of his employment, had exclusive possession of premises as licensee and who continues to occupy those premises as a residence is protected by the provisions of the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 as if he had been or was the tenant of it<sup>11</sup>.

The expression 'service tenancy' is ambiguous and should be avoided<sup>12</sup>. The real antithesis is between those employees who occupy premises as licensees only on the one hand, and those who occupy as tenants of their employers on the other hand<sup>13</sup>. The relationships of employer and employee and of landlord and tenant may exist simultaneously between the same persons<sup>14</sup>, even though the employee occupies his employer's premises rent-free as part remuneration for his services<sup>15</sup>. If the employee occupies as a tenant, the ordinary principles of the law of landlord and tenant will apply, except that, if the premises are a dwelling house and the tenancy is a protected or statutory tenancy under the Rent Act 1977<sup>16</sup> or an assured tenancy under the Housing Act 1988<sup>17</sup>, the landlord will in certain circumstances be able to rely, as a ground for possession:

- 7 (1) under the Rent Act 1977, on the fact that he reasonably requires the dwelling house for occupation as a residence for another employee or prospective employee<sup>18</sup>; and
- 8 (2) under the Housing Act 1988, on the fact that the employee has ceased to be in the landlord's, or a previous landlord's, employment<sup>19</sup>.

Where a service occupancy exists, the employer is regarded as occupying the property vicariously through the employee<sup>20</sup>. An employee has neither estate nor interest in the premises which he occupies in that capacity<sup>21</sup>. Where an employee is entitled as part of his remuneration to occupy premises as a licensee, his right of occupation is a term of his contract of employment and ceases upon the cessation of that employment<sup>22</sup>, subject to the statutory provisions which apply in respect of agricultural workers<sup>23</sup>.

Where a service occupancy comes to an end and the former employee remains in occupation of accommodation owned by the former employer, the question whether the parties intend to enter into fresh legal relations arises. If they do so intend, then, save in exceptional circumstances, if the former employee has exclusive possession of the premises for a term and at a rent, he will become a tenant<sup>24</sup>.

16. Lodger's interest and rights.

A lodger<sup>1</sup> who has no separate apartment is only a licensee<sup>2</sup>. Even where he has a separate apartment, if the landlord retains the general control and dominion of the house<sup>3</sup> including the part occupied by the lodger, so as to prevent the lodger from having exclusive possession<sup>4</sup> he is, therefore, in the position of a licensee only; if, however, the landlord exercises no control over that part, the occupier is a tenant<sup>5</sup>. The occupier does not become a lodger merely by reason of the fact that the landlord resides on the premises and retains control of the passages and staircases and other parts used in common<sup>6</sup>.

In the absence of any agreement to the contrary, a lodger is entitled to the use of the general conveniences of the house in which he resides<sup>7</sup>. The proprietor of lodgings or of a boarding house is bound to take reasonable care of the goods of his lodger or guest<sup>8</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY/(i) Subject Matter/17. Land; in general.

(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY

(i) Subject Matter

17. Land; in general.

A tenancy may be granted of land or any part of land. 'Land' generally includes mines and minerals and other strata under the surface, and buildings erected upon the surface; and all these are corporeal hereditaments<sup>1</sup>. Consequently tenancies may be granted of the surface of land, with the minerals and strata below and buildings above it, or of the surface alone<sup>2</sup>, or of the minerals and strata<sup>3</sup>, or of buildings or any part of a building<sup>4</sup>. Leases may also be granted of interests in land which involve the right to some use of or benefit from or privilege incident to land, but which do not involve exclusive possession, and are, therefore, called incorporeal hereditaments, such as easements<sup>5</sup>, profits à prendre<sup>6</sup>, manors<sup>7</sup> and franchises<sup>8</sup>. Offices<sup>9</sup> which concern the administration of justice and dignities and honours are incapable of being leased<sup>10</sup>. Agreements which confer the right of exclusive possession of goods for a limited time are sometimes called leases<sup>11</sup>, but the term 'lease' is properly restricted to corporeal and incorporeal hereditaments<sup>12</sup>.

1 Cf the Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(ix) (amended by the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996, s 25(2), Sch 4) ('land' includes land of any tenure, and mines and minerals, whether or not held apart from the surface, buildings or parts of buildings (whether the division is horizontal, vertical or made in any other way) and other corporeal hereditaments; also a manor, an advowson, and a rent and other incorporeal hereditaments, and an easement, right, privilege, or benefit in, over, or derived from land').

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY/(i) Subject Matter/18. Commonhold units.

18. Commonhold units.

It is not possible to create a term of years absolute<sup>1</sup> in a residential commonhold unit<sup>2</sup> unless the term satisfies prescribed<sup>3</sup> conditions<sup>4</sup>. The conditions may relate to<sup>5</sup> length<sup>6</sup>, the circumstances in which the term is granted<sup>7</sup>, or any other matter<sup>8</sup>.

A term of years absolute in a residential commonhold unit or part only of a residential commonhold unit must not:

- 9 (1) be granted for a premium;
- 10 (2) be granted for a term longer than seven years<sup>9</sup>;
- 11 (3) be granted under an option or agreement if:
  - 1 (a) the person to take the new term of years absolute has an existing term of years absolute of the premises to be let;
  - 2 (b) the new term when added to the existing term will be more than seven years; and
  - 3 (c) the option or agreement was entered into before or at the same time as the existing term of years absolute;
- 2 (4) contain an option or agreement to renew the term of years absolute which confers on the lessee or on the lessor an option or agreement for renewal for a further term which, together with the original term, amounts to more than seven years;
- 13 (5) contain an option or agreement to extend the term beyond seven years; or
- 14 (6) contain a provision requiring the lessee to make payments to the commonhold association<sup>10</sup> in discharge of payments which are due, in accordance with the commonhold community statement, to be made by the unit-holder<sup>11</sup>.

A term of years absolute in a residential commonhold unit or part only of a residential commonhold unit may, however, be granted for a term of not more than 21 years to the holder of a lease which has been extinguished<sup>12</sup> if the term of years absolute:

- 15 (i) is granted of the same premises as are comprised in the extinguished lease;
- 16 (ii) is granted on the same terms as the extinguished lease, except to the extent necessary to comply with relevant statutory provisions<sup>13</sup> and excluding any terms that are spent;
- 17 (iii) is granted at the same rent as the rent payable under, and including the same provisions for rent review as were included in, the extinguished lease as at the date on which it was extinguished;
- 18 (iv) is granted for a term equivalent to the unexpired term of the lease immediately before it was extinguished or, if the unexpired term of the lease immediately before it was extinguished is more than 21 years, for a term of 21 years;
- 19 (v) takes effect immediately after the lease was extinguished; and
- 20 (vi) does not include any option or agreement which may create a term or an extension to a term which, together with the term of the term of years absolute, would amount to more than 21 years or which may result in the grant of a term of years absolute containing an option or agreement to extend the term<sup>14</sup>.

An instrument<sup>15</sup> or agreement is of no effect to the extent that it purports to create a term of years in contravention of the above prohibition<sup>16</sup>. However, where an instrument or agreement purports to create a term of years in contravention of that prohibition, a party to the instrument or agreement may apply to the court<sup>17</sup> for an order<sup>18</sup>:

- 21 (A) providing for the instrument or agreement to have effect as if it provided for the creation of a term of years of a specified kind<sup>19</sup>;
- 22 (B) providing for the return or payment of money<sup>20</sup>;
- 23 (C) making such other provision as the court thinks appropriate<sup>21</sup>.

An instrument or agreement which creates a term of years absolute in a commonhold unit which is not residential<sup>22</sup> has effect subject to any provision of the commonhold community statement<sup>23</sup>.

Regulations<sup>24</sup> may impose obligations on a tenant<sup>25</sup> of a commonhold unit<sup>26</sup> and enable a commonhold community statement to impose obligations on a tenant of a commonhold unit<sup>27</sup>. The regulations may, in particular, require a tenant of a commonhold unit to make payments to the commonhold association or a unit-holder in discharge of payments which are due in accordance with the commonhold community statement to be made by the unit-holder or are due in accordance with the commonhold community statement to be made by another tenant of the unit<sup>28</sup>. Regulations may also modify a rule of law about leasehold estates (whether deriving from the common law or from an enactment) in its application to a term of years in a commonhold unit<sup>29</sup>.

1    Ie a leasehold: see PARA 2 note 3 ante.

2    For the meaning of 'commonhold unit' see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 330. A commonhold unit is residential if provision made in the commonhold community statement by virtue of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 14(1) (see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 311) requires it to be used only for residential purposes, or for residential and other incidental purposes: s 17(5). For the meaning of 'commonhold community statement' see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 311.

3    For the purposes of ibid Pt 1 (ss 1-70), 'prescribed' means prescribed by regulations: s 64(1). As to the making of regulations under Pt 1 generally see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 301.

For the meaning of 'joint unit-holder' see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 331. Regulations made under s 19(1) (see the text and notes 24-27 supra) may, in particular, provide: (1) for the amount of payments under s 19(2) to be set against sums owed by the tenant (whether to the person by whom the payments were due to be made or to some other person) (s 19(3)(a)); and (2) for the amount of payments under s 19(2) to be recovered from the unit-holder or another tenant of the unit (s 19(3)(b)).

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY/(ii) Illegal or Immoral Purposes/19. Lettings for an unlawful purpose.

(ii) Illegal or Immoral Purposes

19. Lettings for an unlawful purpose.

Where at a time of a letting the premises are to the landlord's knowledge intended to be used for an illegal purpose, the lease is wholly unenforceable and the landlord may not recover the rent or sue upon the tenant's covenants<sup>1</sup>. Formerly it was held that the same results followed where the known intended use was to be immoral, as opposed to illegal, but it is now doubtful whether this is so or, alternatively, what conduct would be held to be sufficiently immoral for the lease to be rendered unenforceable<sup>2</sup>. Where, by reason of illegality or immorality, a lease is unenforceable, then, although the landlord is not at first aware of the improper use, if he has the power of terminating the tenancy and omits to do so after this use has come to his knowledge, he may not afterwards enforce the tenant's obligation<sup>3</sup>.

A letting for the use of the demised premises for a purpose for which planning permission is necessary is not illegal if the parties contemplate that permission should be obtained, and the legality of the letting is not affected by the refusal of planning permission<sup>4</sup>; but, once planning permission for the use of the premises for the requisite purpose has been refused, the court will not order the grant of a new tenancy<sup>5</sup>, as to do so would be to compel the landlord to permit a breach of planning control<sup>6</sup>, and the court will not grant specific performance of an agreement to let for an illegal or an immoral purpose<sup>7</sup>. There is, however, no term implied in a lease that the tenant will not use the demised premises for immoral purposes<sup>8</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY/(ii) Illegal or Immoral Purposes/20. Effect of a letting for an unlawful purpose.

20. Effect of a letting for an unlawful purpose.

Where a lease has been granted but is unenforceable because it was made for an unlawful purpose, the tenant cannot be obliged to pay rent or perform his covenants but is entitled to remain in occupation until the expiry of the term granted by the lease unless the landlord can prove that the grant of the lease was induced by fraudulent misrepresentation on the tenant's part<sup>1</sup>. It seems, however, that the landlord might obtain an order for possession under the proviso for re-entry if the tenant committed a breach of covenant or if the tenant had successfully resisted a claim for rent on the ground that the lease was void<sup>2</sup>. Where a lease contains a covenant against illegal user but no proviso for re-entry and the landlord evicts the tenant for breach of the covenant, the tenant cannot obtain an injunction against the landlord<sup>3</sup>. If a tenant pays rent in ignorance of the fact that the letting is unenforceable, he may not recover the rent so paid unless he pleads and proves fraud on the landlord's part<sup>4</sup>. Where an agreement for a lease is not in itself illegal, an innocent party is not debarred by the other party's fraudulent intention from enforcing the agreement or lease if he so wishes<sup>5</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY/(ii) Illegal or Immoral Purposes/21. Supervening illegality.

21. Supervening illegality.

By permitting the use of premises for certain purposes the landlord does not warrant that the premises may be used for those purposes<sup>1</sup> nor that it will continue to be legal so to use them<sup>2</sup>. If the rent is payable immediately and the intended use does not become prohibited until a subsequent time, the rent continues to be payable<sup>3</sup>. Where premises are let for the purpose of a business which can be conducted in a lawful manner, the landlord is entitled to assume that it will not be conducted in an unlawful manner<sup>4</sup>.

It is for the tenant, if he does not protect himself by an express warranty, to satisfy himself that the premises are fit for the purpose for which he wants to use them, whether that fitness depends upon the state of their structure or the state of the law or any other relevant circumstances: Edler v Auerbach [1950] 1 KB 359 at 374, [1949] 2 All ER 692 at 699, cited and approved in Hill v Harris supra at 614-615 and at 360. Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(3) SUBJECT MATTER AND PURPOSE OF TENANCY/(ii) Illegal or Immoral Purposes/22. Use of premises as brothel.

22. Use of premises as brothel.

It is an offence for the lessor or landlord of any premises or his agent:

- 24 (1) to let the whole or part of premises with the knowledge that it is to be used, in whole or in part, as a brothel<sup>1</sup>; or
- 25 (2) where the whole or part of the premises is used as a brothel, to be wilfully a party to that use continuing<sup>2</sup>.

It is an offence for the tenant or occupier, or person in charge, of any premises knowingly to permit the whole or part of the premises to be used as a brothel<sup>3</sup>. It will invariably be a breach of covenant against immoral user for the premises to be used for prostitution or as a brothel<sup>4</sup>; and in cases where the landlord relies upon that user as a breach of covenant entitling the landlord to forfeit the lease the court will be circumspect in granting relief from forfeiture<sup>5</sup>.

Where the tenant or occupier of any premises is convicted of knowingly permitting the whole or part of the premises to be used as a brothel<sup>6</sup>, the lessor or landlord may require the tenant to assign the lease or other contract under which the premises are held by him to some person approved by the lessor or landlord, whose approval may not be unreasonably withheld<sup>7</sup>. If the tenant fails to do so within three months, the lessor or landlord may determine the lease or contract, but without prejudice to the rights or remedies of any party thereto accrued before the date of the determination<sup>8</sup>; and, where the lease or contract is so determined, the court by which the tenant was convicted may make a summary order for delivery of possession of the premises to the lessor or landlord<sup>9</sup>.

Where the tenant or occupier of any premises is so convicted<sup>10</sup> and either:

- 26 (a) the lessor or landlord, after having the conviction brought to his notice, fails or failed to exercise his statutory rights<sup>11</sup> in relation to the lease or contract under which the premises are or were held by the person convicted; or
- 27 (b) the lessor or landlord, after exercising his statutory rights so as to determine that lease or contract, grants or granted a new lease or enters or entered into a new contract of tenancy of the premises to, with or for the benefit of the same person, without having all reasonable provisions to prevent the recurrence of the offence inserted in the new lease or contract, then, if subsequently an offence is committed in respect of the premises during the subsistence of the lease or contract referred to in head (a) above or, where head (b) above applies, during the subsistence of the new lease or contract, the lessor or landlord is deemed to be a party to the offence unless he shows that he took all reasonable steps to prevent the recurrence of the offence<sup>12</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'brothel' see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 218. Premises are to be treated, for the purposes of the Sexual Offences Act 1956 ss 33-35 (see the text and notes 2-12 infra), as a brothel if people resort to the premises for the purpose of lewd homosexual practices in circumstances in which resort to them for lewd heterosexual practices would have led to the premises being treated as a brothel for the purposes of ss 33-35: Sexual Offences Act 1967 s 6. For an example of a case in which forfeiture was sought by reason of the use of premises as a homosexual brothel see Central Estates (Belgravia) Ltd v Woolgar (No 2) [1972] 3 All ER 610, [1972] 1 WLR 1048, CA.

It is also an offence for the tenant or occupier of any premises knowingly to permit the whole or part of the premises to be used for the purposes of habitual prostitution (see the Sexual Offences Act 1956 s 36 (as amended); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 221); but a conviction under s 36 does not enable the landlord to determine the lease under s 35(2).

(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES

(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies

23. In general.

An owner absolutely entitled in fee simple who is an individual and is under no personal incapacity has, as incident to his right of disposition, power to grant tenancies to such persons and for such periods and on such terms and conditions as he pleases<sup>1</sup>, provided that in doing so he does not discriminate against any potential tenant on the grounds of that person's sex<sup>2</sup>, race<sup>3</sup> or mental or physical disability<sup>4</sup>. Persons entitled to limited or defeasible or partial interests in property<sup>5</sup>, and persons under disability, trustees and corporations, may grant tenancies to the extent permitted by law in each particular case<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the power to grant a term of years absolute in registered land by means of a registered disposition, and as to the principle that an unregistered disposition of an interest in registered land creates only an equitable interest, see LAND REGISTRATION; as to leases which require registration for completion see PARA 100 post; as to transactions at an undervalue, preferences and transactions defrauding creditors see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 653 et seq; as to the rectification of leases see PARAS 155-158 post; and MISTAKE vol 77 (2010) PARA 57 et seq; and as to compensation for loss suffered by a person taking an underlease due to undisclosed land charges see the Law of Property Act 1969 s 25 (as amended); and LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 617.

2 As to discrimination on the grounds of sex see PARA 48 post; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 337 et seq.

3 As to discrimination on the grounds of race see PARA 49 post; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 436 et seq.

4 As to disability discrimination see PARAS 50-51 post; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 507 et seq. An agreement relating to the lease of any property which comprises or includes a dwelling may not prohibit or restrict its occupation by, or the provision in it of accommodation for, persons with mental disorders: see the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 89; and PARA 50 post.

5 In general, where persons are so entitled, the land in question is settled land or is held on a trust of land. As to land in which a minor has a beneficial interest see PARA 25 post; and as to the powers of leasing of tenants for life, and persons having the powers of tenants for life in the case of settled land, and of trustees of land see PARAS 30-31 post.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/24. The Crown.

24. The Crown.

Subject to certain special provisions applying to particular types of lease<sup>1</sup>, the Crown Estate Commissioners<sup>2</sup> may lease any land of the Crown Estate for any purpose whatever for any term not exceeding 100 years<sup>3</sup>.

The Chancellor and Council of the Duchy of Lancaster<sup>4</sup> may lease land forming part of the possessions of the Duchy on such terms as they think fit; but no lease may be so granted unless the Chancellor and Council are satisfied that the consideration for the grant of the lease is in all the circumstances the best consideration in money or money's worth which can reasonably be obtained or that the lease is for public or charitable purposes<sup>5</sup>. Special powers of leasing also apply in relation to land of the Duchy of Cornwall<sup>6</sup>.

Crown private estates may be leased as freely as if they were owned by ordinary subjects<sup>7</sup>.

The following statutory provisions apply in relation to Crown land<sup>8</sup> as in relation to other land:

- 28 (1) specified provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 relating to service charges, insurance and managing agents<sup>9</sup>;
- 29 (2) Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>10</sup>;
- 30 (3) Part IV of the 1987 Act<sup>11</sup>;

- 31 (4) specified provisions of the 1987 Act requiring information to be furnished to tenants<sup>12</sup>;
- 32 (5) the provisions of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 relating to management audit<sup>13</sup>;
- 33 (6) the statutory restriction on the termination of a tenancy for failure to pay a service charge etc<sup>14</sup>;
- 34 (7) the statutory right of a recognised tenants' association to appoint a surveyor<sup>15</sup>; and
- 35 (8) specified provisions<sup>16</sup> of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002<sup>17</sup>.

Other specified provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>18</sup> apply to a tenancy from the Crown<sup>19</sup> if there has ceased to be a Crown interest in the land subject to it<sup>20</sup>. Where there exists a Crown interest in any land subject to a tenancy from the Crown and the person holding that tenancy is himself the landlord under any other tenancy whose subject-matter comprises the whole or part of that land, those provisions apply to that other tenancy, and to any derivative sub-tenancy, notwithstanding the existence of that interest<sup>21</sup>.

8 Land is Crown land if there is or has at any time been an interest or estate in the land (1) comprised in the Crown Estate; (2) belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Duchy of Lancaster; (3) belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall; or (4) belonging to a government department or held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 172(2).

19 For these purposes, 'tenancy from the Crown' means a tenancy of land in which there is, or has during the subsistence of the tenancy been, a Crown interest superior to the tenancy; and 'Crown interest' means (1) an interest comprised in the Crown Estate; (2) an interest belonging to Her Majesty in right of the Duchy of Lancaster; (3) an interest belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall; (4) any other interest belonging to a government department or held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department: ibid s 56(4).

In so far as relating to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 ss 42A, 42B (as added) (see PARA 353 post), at the date at which this title states the law the amendments made by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 172(6) were not in force.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/25. Persons under disability.

25. Persons under disability.

A contract made by a person who at the time lacked the capacity to make it is binding upon him in every respect unless he can show that the other contracting party knew of the incapacity at the time<sup>1</sup> or knew of such facts and circumstances that he must be taken to have known of the incapacity<sup>2</sup>. A disposition made during a lucid interval by a person who is mentally incapable of contracting at other times is valid<sup>3</sup>, even if he is liable to be detained at the time<sup>4</sup>. Where a person's property and affairs have become subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Protection<sup>5</sup>, he cannot deal with them in any way which is inconsistent with the court's powers<sup>6</sup>. Where a patient<sup>7</sup> is entitled to property, provision for making leases and tenancy agreements in relation to the property is made by statute<sup>8</sup>.

A lease may be set aside if it was granted upon inadequate consideration by a person of weak intellect, although not mentally disordered<sup>9</sup>, or by a person in a state of habitual intoxication<sup>10</sup>.

A minor is incapable of holding a legal estate in land<sup>11</sup> and cannot, therefore, grant a lease or tenancy to take effect in law. If a minor is beneficially interested in possession in land, the land, unless held on a trust of land<sup>12</sup>, is settled land<sup>13</sup>. The trustees where the land is held on a trust of land have all the powers of an absolute owner, and the personal representatives in whom the settled land is vested or the trustees of the settlement, as the case may be, have all the powers, including powers of leasing, conferred on tenants for life and trustees of settlements<sup>14</sup>.

A tenancy purported to be granted by a minor can at best operate to confer on the tenant an equitable interest which is liable to be overreached by a disposition made by the trustees in whom the legal estate is vested<sup>15</sup>. Such a tenancy is void if it is necessarily to the minor's prejudice<sup>16</sup>, and at the most binds his equitable interest unless avoided by the minor on attaining his majority or shortly afterwards before confirming the tenancy by conduct or otherwise<sup>17</sup>.

An alien may acquire, hold and dispose of real property in the United Kingdom<sup>18</sup> in the same manner as a British citizen<sup>19</sup> and may, therefore, grant leases or tenancies of his property.

There is no limitation on the power of a person convicted of a criminal offence and sentenced to imprisonment to grant a lease or tenancy of his property<sup>20</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/26. Corporations and companies.

26. Corporations and companies.

A statutory corporation, including a company regulated by the Companies Act 1985<sup>1</sup>, has such powers of leasing as are conferred by its constitution or implied from the nature of its objects<sup>2</sup>. The requirements of the statute must be strictly complied with<sup>3</sup>. A corporation not created by statute has the same powers as an individual unless those powers are restricted by its constitution<sup>4</sup>. Formerly, a corporation generally could not dispose of its property except by deed sealed by the common seal of the corporation<sup>5</sup>, except in trivial matters of daily occurrence or matters of unimportance<sup>6</sup>. Now, however, subject to the provisions which require a lease for a term exceeding three years to be by deed if the legal estate is to pass<sup>7</sup>, any land of a company regulated by the Companies Act 1985 may be let or demised orally or by writing not by deed by a person acting under the company's authority, express or implied<sup>8</sup>; and any body corporate which is neither formed nor registered under that Act nor an existing company<sup>9</sup> may contract through the instrumentality of any person acting under its authority, express or implied, as if it were a private individual<sup>10</sup>.

The power of ecclesiastical corporations, aggregate and sole, to make leases is governed by statute as regards the property that may be let, the consents which are necessary, the term that may be granted and the provisions of the lease<sup>11</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/27. Local and public authorities.

27. Local and public authorities.

Local authorities<sup>1</sup>, and parish trustees acting with the consent of the parish meeting<sup>2</sup>, are in general authorised, with the consent of the Secretary of State<sup>3</sup> or, in Wales, of the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>4</sup>, to let any land which they may hold for any term; without such consent they may dispose of land only by the grant of a term not exceeding seven years or by the assignment of a term which at the date of the assignment has seven years or less to run, and, in the case of parish or community councils or parish trustees, for the best consideration that can reasonably be obtained<sup>5</sup>. A local education authority which wishes to let any land held by it is subject to the same restrictions<sup>6</sup>.

Green Belt land may be let only for purposes of recreation, agriculture, camping or other authorised purposes<sup>7</sup>; and restrictions are imposed on disposals by local authorities of land held for planning purposes<sup>8</sup> and disposals by development corporations<sup>9</sup>.

In general the consent of the Housing Corporation<sup>10</sup> or, in relation to Wales, of the Assembly or the relevant Welsh minister, is necessary to a lease of land by a registered housing association or of grant-aided land by an unregistered housing association<sup>11</sup>.

3    le one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. The office of Secretary of State is a unified office, and generally in law each Secretary of State is capable of performing the functions of all or any of them: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 355. In practice, at the date at which this title states the law it is the Secretary of State for Communities and Local Government who is largely responsible for housing, urban regeneration and local government matters. The Department for Communities and Local Government maintains an internet site on the World Wide Web, accessible at the date at which this title states the law at www.communities.gov.uk.

4    The functions of the Secretary of State in relation to housing, urban regeneration, planning and local government matters, so far as exercisable in relation to Wales, have generally been transferred to the National Assembly for Wales: see the National Assembly for Wales (Transfer of Functions) Order 1999, SI 1999/672, art 2, Sch 1 (as amended), which was made in pursuance of, inter alia, the Government of Wales Act 1998 s 22 (prospectively repealed by the Government of Wales Act 2006 s 163, Sch 12). Functions which have been so transferred include the functions of the Secretary of State under (1) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 20 (see PARA 281 post); (2) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 (see PARAS 701 et seq, 1196 et seq post) (except for the certification function in ss 57(1)-(6), 58 (as amended) (see PARAS 769-770 post); (3) the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 (see PARA 1389 et seq post); (4) the Caravan Sites Act 1968 (see PARA 1267 et seq post); (5) the Mobile Homes Act 1975 and the Mobile Homes Act 1983 (see PARA 1268 et seq post); (6) the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARA 1134 et seq post); (7) the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 808 et seq post); (8) the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 (see PARAS 214-215, 653 post); (9) the Housing Act 1980 (see PARA 1009 post); (10) the Housing Act 1985 (with the exception of functions under s 5(1)(b) and the Treasury consent requirement under Sch 6A para 4(4) (as added)) (see PARA 1300 et seq post); (11) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 248 et seq post); (12) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 (see PARAS 149 et seq, 1744 et seq post); (13) the Housing Act 1988 (with exceptions not relevant to this title) (see PARA 1011 et seq post); (14) the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 (with exceptions not relevant to this title) (see PARA 1237 et seq post); (15) the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 (see PARA 1532 et seq post); (16) the Housing Act 1996 (with exceptions not relevant to this title) (see PARAS 54, 1285 et seq post). As to the National Assembly for Wales see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS.

The Government of Wales Act 2006, the majority of whose provisions are to come into force immediately after the ordinary election (under the Government of Wales Act 1998 s 3 (prospectively repealed)) held in 2007 (see the Government of Wales Act 2006 s 161(1)), provides for the formal separation of the legislative and executive branches of the devolved government in Wales. Part 1 (ss 1-44) makes provision about the legislature (which will continue to be called the National Assembly for Wales) and Pt 2 (ss 45-92) makes provision about the executive, to be known as the Welsh Assembly Government, which will consist of the First Minister or Prif Weinidog (see ss 46, 47), the Welsh Ministers, or Gweinidogion Cymru, appointed under s 48, the Counsel General to the Welsh Assembly Government or Cwnsler Cyffredinol i Lywodraeth Cynulliad Cymru (see s 49) (referred to as 'the Counsel General'), and the Deputy Welsh Ministers or Dirprwy Weinidogion Cymru (see s 50): s 45(1). In the 2006 Act and in any other enactment or instrument the First Minister and the Welsh Ministers appointed under s 48 are referred to collectively as the Welsh Ministers: s 45(2). Subject to s 162(1), Sch 11 para 31, the relevant Assembly functions are transferred to the Welsh Ministers immediately after the end of the initial period: Sch 11 para 30(1). 'The initial period' means the period beginning with the day of the poll at the 2007 election and ending with the day on which the first appointment is made under s 46: s 161(5). 'The relevant Assembly functions' means functions exercisable by the Assembly constituted by the Government of Wales Act 1998 (a) immediately before the end of the initial period, by virtue of an Order in Council under s 22 (prospectively repealed); (b) immediately before the end of that period, as a result of a designation made under the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2) by virtue of the Government of Wales Act 1998 s 29(1) (prospectively repealed); (c) immediately before the end of that period, as a result of having been conferred or imposed on it by an enactment contained in an Act, other than an enactment contained in the Government of Wales Act 1998, or by a prerogative instrument; or (d) immediately before the end of that period, as a result of having been conferred or imposed on it by subordinate legislation (including subordinate legislation made under the Government of Wales Act 1998); and for these purposes a function is 'exercisable' at any time even if the enactment transferring, conferring or imposing it has not come into force at that time: Government of Wales Act 2006 Sch 11 para 30(2). Schedule 11 came into force on 25 July 2006: see s 161(2).

Her Majesty may by Order in Council: (i) provide for (A) the transfer of any of the relevant Assembly functions to the First Minister, or the Counsel General; (B) the transfer of any of the relevant Assembly functions, other than functions of making, confirming or approving subordinate legislation, to the Assembly Commission; (c) any of the relevant Assembly functions, other than functions of making, confirming or approving subordinate legislation, to be functions of the Assembly; (D) any relevant Assembly function that is a function of making, confirming or approving subordinate legislation in relation to any matter not to be transferred to the Welsh Ministers and, unless the Assembly already has power to pass Assembly Measures in relation to that matter, the amendment of Sch 5 Pt 1 to enable the Assembly to have instead power to pass Assembly Measures in relation to that matter either in the same terms as the relevant Assembly function, or in terms differing from those terms to such extent as appears appropriate (see Sch 11 para 31(1), (2)); (ii) direct that any function transferred by Sch 11 para 30 is to be exercisable by any one or more of the First Minister, the Counsel General, the Assembly Commission and the Assembly concurrently with the Welsh Ministers (Sch 11 para 31(3)(a)); (iii) direct that any function in relation to which provision is made by Sch 11 para 31(1) (see heads (A)-(C) supra) for it to be transferred to, or continue to be a function of, any person or body is to be exercisable by any other person or body specified in Sch 11 para 31(1) concurrently with that person or body (Sch 11 para 31(3)(b)); or (iv) direct that any function transferred by Sch 11 para 30, or transferred to the First Minister or the Counsel General by virtue of Sch 11 para 31(1), is to be exercisable by the Welsh Ministers, the First Minister or the Counsel General only with the agreement of, or after consultation with, the Assembly Commission (Sch 11 para 31(3)(c)). As to the exercise of these powers see further Sch 11 para 31(4)-(8); and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS.

Any provision of an Order in Council under the Government of Wales Act 1998 s 22 (eg the National Assembly for Wales (Transfer of Functions) Order 1999, SI 1999/672 (as amended)), whether included by virtue of the Government of Wales Act 1998 s 22 or any other enactment apart from s 155(2), which is in force immediately before the commencement of the repeal of s 22 by the Government of Wales Act 2006 continues to have effect after the commencement of that repeal as if it were a provision of an Order in Council under s 58: Sch 11 para 26(1).

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/28. Building societies etc.

28. Building societies etc.

Subject to the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>1</sup>, a building society has the powers conferred on it by its memorandum<sup>2</sup>. This may include a power to lease property held for the purpose of conducting its business<sup>3</sup>. A building society may also lease land as mortgagee in possession in accordance with the statutory powers conferred on such a mortgagee<sup>4</sup>.

Registered friendly societies, or branches, if their rules so provide, have powers of leasing land<sup>5</sup>. An incorporated friendly society may invest its funds in the purchase of land<sup>6</sup>; and it may acquire and hold land for the purpose of carrying on any of its activities or for the purpose of enabling a subsidiary of the society, or a body jointly controlled by it, to conduct its business<sup>7</sup>.

Registered industrial and provident societies, unless their rules otherwise direct, have powers of leasing land; and a credit union may lease land acquired for the purpose of conducting its business<sup>8</sup>.

All property belonging to a trade union, other than a special register body<sup>9</sup>, must be vested in trustees in trust for the union<sup>10</sup>; but a trade union is capable of making contracts and suing and being sued in its own name in proceedings relating to property<sup>11</sup>.

2 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(5) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 1(3)).

3 The specific statutory power to do so conferred by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 6 (as originally enacted) was removed by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 4.

29. Universities and colleges.

The Universities of Oxford, Cambridge and Durham and the colleges in those universities and the colleges of Winchester and Eton have statutory powers of leasing similar to those conferred on a tenant for life of settled land<sup>1</sup>. Other universities and colleges, as charities, have restricted powers of leasing land<sup>2</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/30. Tenant for life under strict settlement.

30. Tenant for life under strict settlement.

A tenant for life<sup>1</sup> may lease the settled land or any part thereof<sup>2</sup>, or any easement, right or privilege of any kind over or in relation to the land, for any purpose whatever, whether involving waste or not, for any term not exceeding:

- 36 (1) in the case of a building lease<sup>3</sup>, 999 years;
- 37 (2) in the case of a mining lease<sup>4</sup>, 100 years;
- 38 (3) in the case of a forestry lease<sup>5</sup>, 999 years; and
- 39 (4) in the case of any other lease, 50 years<sup>6</sup>.

Every lease must<sup>7</sup>:

- 40 (a) be by deed, and must be made to take effect in possession not later than 12 months after its date, or in reversion after an existing lease having not more than seven years to run at the date of the new lease;
- 41 (b) reserve the best rent that can reasonably be obtained, regard being had to any fine taken, and to any money laid or to be laid out for the benefit of the settled land, and generally to the circumstances of the case;
- 42 (c) contain a covenant by the lessee for payment of the rent, and a condition of re-entry on the rent not being paid within a time therein specified not exceeding 30 days<sup>8</sup>.

A lease at the best rent that can be reasonably obtained without fine, and whereby the lessee is not exempted from punishment for waste<sup>9</sup>, may be made:

- 43 (i) where the term does not exceed 21 years, without any notice of an intention to make the lease having been duly given<sup>10</sup> and notwithstanding that there are no trustees of the settlement; and
- 44 (ii) where the term does not extend beyond three years from the date of the writing, by any writing under hand only containing an agreement instead of a covenant by the lessee for payment of rent<sup>11</sup>.

Under a court order the tenant for life may grant any other lease, not otherwise authorised, which could validly have been granted by an absolute owner<sup>12</sup>.

A settlor may confer on the tenant for life powers of leasing additional to or larger than those conferred by the Settled Land Act 1925<sup>13</sup>. Powers of leasing conferred by the settlement on the trustees or other persons are exercisable by the tenant for life<sup>14</sup>.

A lease by a tenant for life or other limited owner which is not authorised by his powers of leasing is valid only during the subsistence of his interest<sup>15</sup>; but a lease by a tenant in tail, if made by deed, takes effect in equity as a disentailing assurance<sup>16</sup>. Every power of appointment over, or power to convey or charge land or any interest therein, whether created by a statute or other instrument or implied by law, and whenever created, not being a power vested in a legal mortgagee or an estate owner in right of his estate and exercisable by him or by another person in his name and on his behalf, operates only in equity<sup>17</sup>. The extent of an express power of leasing must be governed by the settlor's intentions as gathered from the instrument creating the power<sup>18</sup>.

1 As to the tenant for life, and other persons having the powers of tenant for life, see SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 761 et seq. Subject to certain exceptions, no settlement created on or after 1 January 1997 is a strict settlement under the Settled Land Act 1925 and no such settlement is deemed to be made on or after that date: see the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996 s 2; and REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 65; SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 676.

A tenant for life, even though he may be entitled to have a vesting instrument executed in his favour, cannot, until such an instrument has been executed, create a legal estate in a tenant, and any purported lease by him will operate only in equity and as a contract for valuable consideration to grant the lease: see the Settled Land Act 1925 s 13 (as amended); and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 702. Any such purported lease should be protected by registration: see SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 702.

2 The power so conferred may be exercised as regards the principal mansion house, if any, on the settled land, and the pleasure grounds, park and lands, if any, usually occupied therewith; but such power may not be exercised without the consent of the trustees of the settlement or an order of the court (1) if the settlement is a settlement which was made or came into operation before 1 January 1926 and the settlement did not expressly provide to the contrary; or (2) if the settlement is a settlement which was made or came into operation after that date and the settlement expressly provides that the power may not be exercised without that consent or order: ibid s 65(1).

12 See ibid s 64 (as amended); and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 671. In the case of building or mining leases the court may also authorise generally or in a particular case the granting of leases for a longer term or on other conditions than those specified in the Settled Land Act 1925, if it is shown that such is the custom in the district, or that it is difficult in the district to make those leases except for those longer terms or on those other conditions: see s 46; and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 844.

13 See ibid ss 108(1), 109(1); and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 880. Particulars of such powers must appear in the vesting instrument: see s 5(1)(d); and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 690. As to the construction of express powers see POWERS vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 232 et seq.

An unauthorised lease does not operate to give any interest in the land, and operates only by estoppel between the parties: Yellowly v Gower (1855) 11 Exch 274 at 294-295. Such a lease may, however, be validated under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 152: see PARA 145 post.

16 See the Fines and Recoveries Act 1833 ss 15, 40 (amended by the Statute Law Revision (No 2) Act 1888; the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1969). If not made by deed, the lease is void as regards persons entitled after the estate tail (Co Litt 45b; Andrew v Pearce (1805) 1 Bos & PNR 158 at 162), but as against the issue in tail it is voidable only (Co Litt 45b; Earl of Bedford's Case (1586) 7 Co Rep 7b). RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/31. Trustees of land.

31. Trustees of land.

For the purpose of exercising their functions as trustees, the trustees of land<sup>1</sup> have in relation to the land subject to the trust all the powers of an absolute owner<sup>2</sup>. Where in the case of any land subject to a trust of land each of the beneficiaries interested in the land is a person of full age and capacity who is absolutely entitled to the land, the powers so conferred on the trustees include the power to convey the land to the beneficiaries even though they have not required the trustees to do so; and where land is conveyed by virtue of this provision:

- 45 (1) the beneficiaries must do whatever is necessary to secure that it vests in them, and
- 46 (2) if they fail to do so, the court may make an order requiring them to do so<sup>3</sup>.

The trustees of land have power to acquire land under the power conferred<sup>4</sup> by the Trustee Act 2000<sup>5</sup>.

In exercising these powers, trustees must have regard to the rights of the beneficiaries<sup>6</sup>; and the powers so conferred must not be exercised in contravention of, or of any order<sup>7</sup> made in pursuance of, any other enactment or any rule of law or equity<sup>8</sup>. Where any other enactment confers on trustees authority to act subject to any restriction, limitation or condition, trustees of land may not exercise the powers conferred by these provisions to do any act which they are prevented from doing under the other enactment by reason of the restriction, limitation or condition<sup>9</sup>. Further, the duty of care under the Trustee Act 2000<sup>10</sup> applies to trustees of land when exercising these powers<sup>11</sup>.

Trustees of land have other miscellaneous powers to dispose of land<sup>12</sup>.

The legal estate in the land is vested in the trustees jointly<sup>13</sup> but a beneficiary may be entitled to occupy the land<sup>14</sup>.

Personal representatives have, as respects the real estate, all the functions conferred on them<sup>1</sup> by Part I of the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996<sup>2</sup>. An executor may grant a lease before probate<sup>3</sup>, but an administrator only after taking out letters of administration<sup>4</sup>. A lease must be made by all executors who have proved, but not by executors who have not proved, even if power has been reserved to them to prove<sup>5</sup>. The powers of personal representatives as such to lease cease when they assent to the legal estate vesting in beneficiaries or trustees<sup>6</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/33. Charities and ecclesiastical bodies.

33. Charities and ecclesiastical bodies.

Trustees of a charity have statutory<sup>1</sup>, express and common law<sup>2</sup> powers of leasing. Subject to certain exceptions, however, no land held by or in trust for a charity may be leased without an order of the court or of the Charity Commissioners<sup>3</sup>. Statutory restrictions are also imposed on the leasing powers of colleges and ecclesiastical and eleemosynary corporations over corporate property<sup>4</sup>.

A diocesan board of finance<sup>5</sup> has power to lease any diocesan glebe land of the diocese on such terms as the Church Commissioners<sup>6</sup> may approve, being terms which they consider proper and advisable<sup>7</sup>; but there is a prohibition on incumbents of benefices or any sequestrators letting certain parts of parsonage houses<sup>8</sup>; and a diocesan board of finance may require the incumbents or the sequestrators of benefices belonging to the diocese to furnish it with particulars of certain leases<sup>9</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/34. Mortgagors and mortgagees.

34. Mortgagors and mortgagees.

A mortgagor of land, while in possession, or a mortgagee, while he is in possession or a receiver has been appointed, has statutory powers of making leases<sup>1</sup>; but such powers may be excluded or varied or extended by the mortgage deed or otherwise in writing<sup>2</sup> unless the mortgaged land is agricultural land<sup>3</sup>. A lease by a mortgagor not made under the statutory power is binding on the mortgagor, and if made before the mortgage, but not otherwise, is binding on the mortgagee<sup>4</sup>. A lease made by a mortgagor whose mortgage excludes the statutory power of leasing is deemed to be made in exercise of the mortgagor's common law right to make a lease which is binding on the mortgagor but not on the mortgagee; and the making of such a lease is not, therefore, a breach of the prohibition contained in the mortgage<sup>5</sup>. Where a mortgage excludes the common law power of leasing, but does not exclude the statutory power, the mortgagor is in breach of the prohibition contained in the mortgage if he fails to comply with the conditions imposed by statute in relation to the exercise of the statutory power of leasing<sup>6</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 99 (as amended); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 345 et seq. The leases so authorised are (1) agricultural or occupation leases for any term not exceeding, in the case of a mortgage made on or after 1 January 1926, 50 years; and (2) building leases for any term not exceeding, in the case of a mortgage made on or after 1 January 1926, 999 years: s 99(3). The provisions of s 99 (as amended) referring to a lease are to be construed to extend and apply, so far as circumstances admit, to any letting, and to an agreement, whether in writing or not, for leasing or letting: s 99(17).

2 See ibid s 99(13) (as amended), s 99(14); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 347. An exclusion or restriction of a mortgagor's powers does not have effect in relation to a lease executed under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 36: see s 36(4); and PARA 756 note 6 post.

3 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 99(13A), (13B) (as added); and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 347. See also Rhodes v Dalby [1971] 2 All ER 1144, [1971] 1 WLR 1325, following dicta in Public Trustee v Lawrence [1912] 1 Ch 789 at 793.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/35. Administrators; receivers; trustees in bankruptcy.

35. Administrators; receivers; trustees in bankruptcy.

The administrator of a company has power to grant leases<sup>1</sup>.

A receiver appointed by the court may grant a lease binding on the receiver and binding on the persons beneficially interested provided that the court's consent is obtained<sup>2</sup>; but, in order to pass the legal estate in the term the lease must be made in the name of the party who would have been able to demise if the receiver had not been appointed<sup>3</sup>. A receiver appointed out of court by a mortgagee<sup>4</sup> may exercise the statutory powers of leasing if the powers are delegated to him in writing by the mortgagee<sup>5</sup>.

A trustee in bankruptcy has the same power to grant leases as the bankrupt had before his bankruptcy<sup>6</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(i) Capacity to grant Tenancies/36. The 'relevant authority'; housing associations.

36. The 'relevant authority'; housing associations.

The Housing Corporation<sup>1</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister ('the relevant authority')<sup>2</sup> may:

- 47 (1) acquire land by agreement for the purpose of leasing it to a registered social landlord<sup>3</sup> or an unregistered self-build society or providing dwellings or hostels for letting; and the Housing Corporation may be authorised by the Secretary of State<sup>4</sup> to, and the Assembly or minister may, acquire land compulsorily for any such purpose<sup>5</sup>;
- 48 (2) dispose of land in respect of which it has not exercised its power to provide or improve dwellings or hostels and on which it has not carried out ancillary development to specified bodies<sup>6</sup>;
- 49 (3) dispose of land on which dwellings or hostels have been provided or improved to specified bodies<sup>7</sup>; and
- 50 (4) lease individual dwellings to persons for their own occupation<sup>8</sup>.

The general powers of local authorities to lease houses and land may be used to help provide housing associations with houses or land; but the powers of housing associations themselves to acquire land or houses or to build or in other ways provide houses are derived from their constitutions rather than from express statutory provision<sup>9</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/37. In general.

(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies

37. In general.

An individual who is under no personal incapacity which disables him from contracting or from holding land is able to accept a lease for such periods and on such terms as he pleases<sup>1</sup>. The rights of other persons to accept leases are limited by law<sup>2</sup>.

1 An alien is under no disability in this respect: cf para 25 ante; and see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 13. As to the continuance of the liability of an alien tenant for rent, even if he becomes an alien enemy, see PARA 274 post.

2 See PARA 38 et seq post.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/38. Persons under disability.

38. Persons under disability.

A contract made by a person who at the time lacked the capacity to make it is binding upon him in every respect unless he can show that the other contracting party knew of the incapacity at the time<sup>1</sup> or knew of such facts and circumstances that he must be taken to have known of the incapacity<sup>2</sup>. A disposition made during a lucid interval by a person who is mentally incapable of contracting at other times is valid<sup>3</sup>, even if he is liable to be detained at the time<sup>4</sup>.

Where a person purports to convey a legal estate in land to a minor, or two or more minors, alone, the conveyance is not effective to pass the legal estate, but operates as a declaration that the land is held in trust for the minor or minors or, if he purports to convey it to the minor or minors in trust for any persons, for those persons<sup>5</sup>. Where a person purports to convey a legal estate in land to a minor or two or more minors, and another person who is, or other persons who are, of full age, the conveyance operates to vest the land in the other person or persons in trust for the minor or minors and the other person or persons or, if he purports to convey it to them in trust for any persons, for those persons<sup>6</sup>. Where a legal estate in land would, by reason of intestacy or in any other circumstances not dealt with above, vest in a person who is a minor if he were a person of full age, the land is held in trust for the minor<sup>7</sup>.

It has, however, been held in a county court that a minor is capable of succeeding to a statutory tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/39. Co-owners, trustees and personal representatives.

39. Co-owners, trustees and personal representatives.

A lease or tenancy agreement may be granted to two or more persons who are beneficial joint tenants or beneficial tenants in common, but any legal estate vests in the grantees, or, if they are more than four in number, in the first four, as joint tenants to be held in trust<sup>1</sup>. Any person who accepts a lease or tenancy agreement as trustee is personally liable for the rent and under the covenants but is entitled to be indemnified out of the trust property except in case of personal default<sup>2</sup>. Persons having the powers of a tenant for life may accept a lease of land convenient to be held with the settled land provided that no fine is paid out of capital money in respect of that lease<sup>3</sup>. Where an agreement for a lease is enforced against executors, the lease will be so framed as to except them from personal liability<sup>4</sup>.

A trustee cannot as a general rule, alone or jointly with others, take a lease of the trust property from himself or his co-trustees<sup>5</sup>; but a tenant for life or person having the powers of a tenant for life may take a lease of settled land from the trustees of the settlement<sup>6</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 34(2), 36(1) (as amended); and REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARAS 190, 211. Although the legal estate continues to be vested in all survivors of the original joint tenants, for the purposes of security of tenure under the Rent Act 1977 those of them who remain in residence in the demised premises will be regarded as the statutory tenant: see Lloyd v Sadler [1978] QB 774, [1978] 2 All ER 529, CA; and PARA 831 post. It is not clear, however, what the situation is if all four trustee tenants vacate but other persons named in the agreement as tenants remain.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/40. Unincorporated associations; charities.

40. Unincorporated associations; charities.

A lease may not be granted to an unincorporated association, as such a body has no legal entity. Thus, a lease may not be granted to the members of such an association from time to time, nor may a lease be granted to all the persons who at the time it was executed were members of the association, where no one has himself undertaken, or authorised anyone on his behalf to undertake, the obligations which are imposed upon a tenant<sup>1</sup>. The lease should in such cases be granted to trustees for the association.

No special rules apply in respect of leases to trustees for charitable purposes<sup>2</sup>.

41. Corporations and companies.

A statutory corporation may accept leases to the extent authorised by its constitution and a corporation created otherwise than by statute may accept leases to any extent unless its powers are limited by its constitution or by statute<sup>1</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/42. Building societies etc.

42. Building societies etc.

Subject to the provisions of the Building Societies Act 1986<sup>1</sup>, a building society has the powers conferred on it by its memorandum<sup>2</sup>. This may include the power to acquire and hold premises for the purposes of its business<sup>3</sup>.

A registered friendly society, or any branch of it, may, if its rules so provide, take any land on lease in the names of the trustees of the society or branch<sup>4</sup>; and an incorporated friendly society may acquire and hold land for the purpose of carrying on any of its activities or for the purpose of enabling a subsidiary of the society, or a body jointly controlled by it, to conduct its business and may dispose of, or otherwise deal with, any land so held by it<sup>5</sup>.

A registered industrial and provident society may, if its rules do not direct otherwise, take any land on lease in its own name; and a credit union may lease land acquired for the purpose of conducting its business<sup>6</sup>.

A trade union may take on lease land to any extent in the names of its trustees or, if it is incorporated<sup>7</sup>, in its own name.

1 See generally FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1856 et seq.

2 See the Building Societies Act 1986 s 5(5) (substituted by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 1(3)).

3 The specific statutory power to do so conferred by the Building Societies Act 1986 s 6 (as originally enacted) was removed by the Building Societies Act 1997 s 4.

4 See FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2189.

5 See the Friendly Societies Act 1992 s 15; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2137.

6 See FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2494.

7 Only a trade union which is a special register body will be incorporated. For the meaning of 'special register body' see EMPLOYMENT vol 40 (2009) PARA 854. Where, as will usually be the case, the trade union is not incorporated, all property belonging to it must be vested in the trustees: see the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss 12(1), 117(3)(c); and EMPLOYMENT vol 40 (2009) PARA 874.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/43. Local authorities.

43. Local authorities.

Local authorities may acquire land on lease by agreement whether that land is situated inside or outside their areas, provided that the land is acquired for the purposes of any of their statutory functions or the benefit, improvement or development of their areas<sup>1</sup>.

1 See LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 509 (principal councils), PARA 516 (parish and community councils). As to compulsory acquisition of land see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 510-511 (principal councils), PARA 517 (parish and community councils). Certain statutory repairing obligations do not apply to leases granted to local authorities: see PARA 419 post.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(4) CAPACITY TO GRANT AND ACCEPT TENANCIES/(ii) Capacity to accept Tenancies/44. The 'relevant authority'; housing associations.

44. The 'relevant authority'; housing associations.

The Housing Corporation<sup>1</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister ('the relevant authority')<sup>2</sup> may acquire land by agreement for the purpose of leasing it to a registered social landlord<sup>3</sup> or an unregistered self-build society or providing dwellings or hostels for letting; and the Housing Corporation may be authorised by the Secretary of State<sup>4</sup> to, and the Assembly or minister may, acquire land compulsorily for any such purpose<sup>5</sup>.

The general powers of local authorities to lease houses and land may be used to help provide housing associations with houses or land; but the powers of housing associations themselves to acquire land or houses are derived from their constitutions rather than from express statutory provision<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the Housing Corporation see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 18 et seq.

(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION

(i) In general

45. Statutory codes; in general.

The relationship of landlord and tenant and, less often, of licensor and licensee of land, has been the subject of extensive legislative intervention. A number of statutory codes now regulate that relationship to provide:

- 51 (1) security of tenure, to a greater or lesser extent, in both the private sector and the public or social housing sector, for residential tenants<sup>1</sup>;
- 52 (2) more restricted security of tenure for business tenants, tenants of agricultural holdings and tenants under farm business tenancies, together with provision for compensation in certain circumstances where the tenancy is not continued<sup>2</sup>;
- 53 (3) a degree of rent control for residential tenants and holders of restricted contracts in the private sector<sup>3</sup>;
- 54 (4) collective rights for residential tenants in the private sector with regard to service and administration charges and the management of premises<sup>4</sup>;
- 55 (5) individual and collective rights of leasehold enfranchisement and extension in both the private and the public or social housing sector<sup>5</sup>;
- 56 (6) collective rights of first refusal or of compulsory acquisition for the tenants of certain flats<sup>6</sup>.

Other statutory provisions govern such matters as the information to be given to certain tenants<sup>7</sup>, the extent to which the original landlord or the original tenant may remain liable under the covenants of the lease after assignment<sup>8</sup> and certain repairing obligations<sup>9</sup>.

The ordinary law of contract and the ordinary rules of law applying as between landlord and tenant continue to apply both in the private and the public or social housing sectors, subject to these special statutory modifications and additions. The law of landlord and tenant is, therefore, a topic of very uncertain definition and scope, and in respect of any problem which arises as between landlord and tenant it is at all times important to consider whether there are statutory provisions of general application which impinge upon the rights of landlord and tenant without being conventionally regarded as part of the law of landlord and tenant. For example, in all lettings the tenant's rights to use and develop the land which is demised are subject to the restrictions imposed on the use of land generally by the town and country planning legislation<sup>10</sup>.

(ii) Impact of the Human Rights Act 1998

46. The Human Rights Act 1998; in general.

Under the Human Rights Act 1998, it is unlawful for a public authority<sup>1</sup> to act<sup>2</sup> in a way which is incompatible with a Convention right<sup>3</sup>, unless:

- 57 (1) as the result of one or more provisions of primary legislation, the authority could not have acted differently; or
- 58 (2) in the case of one or more provisions of, or made under, primary legislation which cannot be read or given effect in a way which is compatible with the Convention rights, the authority was acting so as to give effect to or enforce those provisions<sup>4</sup>.

Neither House of Parliament is a public authority for these purposes<sup>5</sup>. However, the National Assembly for Wales<sup>6</sup> has no power, and the Welsh ministers, First Minister or Counsel General will have no power, to make, confirm or approve any subordinate legislation, or to do any other act, so far as the subordinate legislation or act is incompatible with any of the Convention rights<sup>7</sup>; but this does not:

- 59 (a) apply to an act which is not unlawful<sup>8</sup> by virtue of head (1) or head (2) above<sup>9</sup>; and
- 60 (b) enable a court or tribunal to award in respect of an act any damages which it could not award on finding the act unlawful<sup>10</sup> under the Human Rights Act 1998<sup>11</sup>.

So far as it is possible to do so, primary legislation and subordinate legislation must be read and given effect in a way which is compatible with the Convention rights<sup>12</sup>.

The following Convention rights are particularly relevant in the context of the law relating to landlord and tenant:

- 61 (i) in the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law<sup>13</sup>;
- 62 (ii) everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence<sup>14</sup>; there must be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society for, inter alia, the protection of the rights and freedoms of others<sup>15</sup>;
- 63 (iii) every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions and no one must be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law<sup>16</sup>;
- 64 (iv) the enjoyment of the Convention rights and freedoms must be secured without discrimination on any ground such as sex, race, colour, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, association with a national minority, property, birth or other status<sup>17</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'public authority' includes (1) a court or tribunal; and (2) any person certain of whose functions are functions of a public nature, but does not include either House of Parliament or a person exercising functions in connection with proceedings in Parliament: Human Rights Act 1998 s 6(3). In s 6(3), however, 'Parliament' does not include the House of Lords in its judicial capacity: s 6(4) (prospectively repealed by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 9 Pt I para 66(4), as from a day to be appointed under s 148; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). In relation to a particular act, a person is not a public authority by virtue only of the Human Rights Act 1998 s 6(3)(b) (see head (2) supra) if the nature of the act is private: s 6(5). As from a day to be appointed under the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 148, the jurisdiction of the House of Lords to hear appeals is transferred to the new Supreme Court established under Pt III (ss 23-60); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

The Human Rights Act 1998 s 6(3)(b) (see head (2) supra) does not make a body, which has no responsibilities to the public, a public body merely because it performs acts on behalf of a public body which would constitute public functions if such acts were performed by that public body itself; the fact that a public body may be fulfilling its public duty through the act of renting by a private body does not automatically change into a public act what would otherwise be a private act. Housing associations as a class are not standard public authorities, and such an association constitutes a public authority only if it performs a particular function which is a public as opposed to a private act: see Poplar Housing and Regeneration Community Association Ltd v Donoghue [2001] EWCA Civ 595 [59]-[60], [63], [65]-[66], [2002] QB 48, [2001] 4 All ER 604, considering Costello-Roberts v United Kingdom (1993) 19 EHRR 112, [1993] ECHR 13134/87, ECtHR.

2 For these purposes, 'an act' includes a failure to act but does not include a failure to (1) introduce in, or lay before, Parliament a proposal for legislation; or (2) make any primary legislation or remedial order: Human Rights Act 1998 s 6(6).

7 Government of Wales Act 1998 s 107(1), (5) (prospectively repealed by the Government of Wales Act 2006 s 163, Sch 12); Government of Wales Act 2006 s 81(1), (5) (not in force at the date at which this title states the law). The Government of Wales Act 1998 s 107(1) does not, and the Government of Wales Act 2006 s 81(1) will not, however, enable a person (1) to bring any proceedings in a court or tribunal; or (2) to rely on any of the Convention rights in any such proceedings, in respect of an act unless he would be a victim for the purposes of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (Rome, 4 November 1950; TS 71 (1953) (Cmd 8969)) art 34 if proceedings were brought in the European Court of Human Rights in respect of that act: Government of Wales Act 1998 s 107(2) (as so repealed); Government of Wales Act 2006 s 81(2) (not in force at the date at which this title states the law). The Government of Wales Act 1998 s 107(2) does not apply to the Attorney General, the Assembly, the Advocate General for Scotland, the Advocate General for Northern Ireland or the Attorney General for Northern Ireland: s 107(3) (as so repealed; amended by the Justice (Northern Ireland) Act 2002 s 28(2), Sch 7 para 6, as from day to be appointed under s 87(1)). The Government of Wales Act 2006 s 81(2) is similarly disapplied: see s 81(3) (not in force at the date at which this title states the law).

9 Government of Wales Act 1998 s 107(4)(a) (prospectively repealed: see note 7 supra); Government of Wales Act 2006 s 81(4)(a) (not in force at the date at which this title states the law).

10 See note 8 supra.

11 Government of Wales Act 1998 s 107(4)(b) (prospectively repealed: see note 7 supra); Government of Wales Act 2006 s 81(4)(b) (not in force at the date at which this title states the law).

12 See the Human Rights Act 1998 s 3; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS.

13 Ibid s 1(3), Sch 1 Pt I art 6(1) (incorporating into domestic law the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 6(1)). The following hearings relevant to this title must in the first instance be listed by the court as hearings in private under CPR 39.2(3)(c) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 6): (1) a claim by a landlord against one or more tenants or former tenants for the repossession of a dwelling house based on the non-payment of rent; (2) an application to suspend a warrant of execution or a warrant of possession or to stay execution where the court is being invited to consider the ability of a party to make payments to another party: see Practice Direction--Miscellaneous Provisions relating to Hearings PD 39 para 1.5(2), (3).

The provisions for service of documents in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23, as applied to notice of the termination of a lease, do not breach the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 6(1), despite the fact that there is no indication in those provisions that there has to be some attempted or actual delivery: CA Webber (Transport) Ltd v Railtrack plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1167, [2004] 3 All ER 202, [2004] 1 WLR 320, cited in PARA 703 note 4 post. As to challenges to possession proceedings on the ground of a breach of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 6(1) see PARA 47 post.

The provisions of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 which allow tenants to buy their freeholds (see PARA 1389 et seq post) do not infringe the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 6 despite the fact that, once the statutory criteria are satisfied, there is no court before which a landlord can challenge a tenant's right of enfranchisement on the basis of the merits of the individual case: James v United Kingdom (1986) 8 EHRR 123, [1986] ECHR 8793/79, ECtHR.

14 Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1 Pt I art 8(1) (incorporating into domestic law the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 8(1)). The concept of 'home' for these purposes is not limited to premises which are lawfully occupied; it depends on the existence of sufficient and continuous links with the premises: see Harrow London Borough Council v Qazi [2003] UKHL 43 at [11], [29], [63], [66], [68], [70], [71], [95], [99], [147], [2004] 1 AC 983, [2003] 4 All ER 461, applying Buckley v United Kingdom (1996) 23 EHRR 101, [1996] ECHR 20348/92, ECtHR and EComHR. See also Application 66746/01 Connors v United Kingdom [2004] HLR 991, (2004) 16 BHRC 639, ECtHR at para 68; Blecic v Croatia [2004] ECHR 59532/00, ECtHR at para 52 (further proceedings before the Grand Chamber (2006) 20 BHRC 1, ECtHR).

The manner in which the courts have consistently interpreted the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 11(1)(a) (repairing obligations: see PARA 416 post) is not incompatible with the Human Rights Act 1998 and the Convention right to respect for private and family life: Lee v Leeds City Council, Ratcliffe v Sandwell Metropolitan Borough Council [2002] EWCA Civ 06, [2002] 1 WLR 1488, [2002] LGR 305. Because of the public law context of, and duties imposed upon local authorities by, the homelessness regime in the Housing Act 1996 Pt VII (ss 175-218) (as amended) (see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 278 et seq), the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1 Pt I art 8 does not require the procedural safeguards of the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 (see PARA 653 post) to be followed in a case involving a licence of accommodation secured by a local authority for a homeless person in discharge of its duty under the Housing Act 1996 s 188(1) (see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 286): Desnousse v Newham London Borough Council [2006] EWCA Civ 547, [2006] All ER (D) 256 (May). The Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 2, however (see PARA 653 post), if read in a way that is compatible with the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1 Pt I art 8, applies to premises let to a tenant for mixed residential and business purposes, and the decisions in Kay v Lambeth London Borough Council, Leeds City Council v Price [2006] UKHL 10, [2006] 4 All ER 128, [2006] 2 FCR 20 (see PARA 47 post) and Application 66746/01 Connors v United Kingdom [2004] HLR 991, (2004) 16 BHRC 639, ECtHR support this purposive construction: Pirabakaran v Patel [2006] EWCA Civ 685, [2006] 23 EG 165 (CS), [2006] All ER (D) 380 (May), distinguishing National Trust for Places of Historic Interest or Natural Beauty v Knappe [1997] 4 All ER 627, [1998] 1 WLR 230, CA.

16 Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950), Protocol I art 1 (Paris, 20 March 1952; TS 46 (1954); Cmd 9221), now incorporated into domestic law by the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1 Pt II art 1. These provisions do not, however, in any way impair the right of a state to enforce such laws as it deems necessary to control the use of property in accordance with the general interest or to secure the payment of taxes or other contributions or penalties: Sch 1 Pt II art 1. See eg Application 44277/98 Stretch v United Kingdom [2004] LGR 401, [2003] All ER (D) 306 (Jun), ECtHR (applicant contracted to lease land from a local authority for a term of 22 years and, pursuant to the terms of the lease, erected at his own expense a number of buildings for light industrial use which he sublet for rent; the lease contained an option for renewal for a further 21 years but when the applicant gave notice to exercise the option, the authority took the view that its predecessor had unknowingly acted ultra vires in granting the option, which was therefore invalid; and this was upheld by the domestic courts. The European Court of Human Rights held that the applicant had to be regarded as having at least a legitimate expectation of exercising the option to renew and that might be regarded as attached to the property rights granted to him by the authority under the lease; further, the refusal to renew the lease amounted to an interference with the applicant's possessions because he was deprived in part of the consideration which he gave in entering into the agreement and that interference was not justified since the application of the doctrine of ultra vires, which provided an important safeguard against abuse of power by authorities acting beyond the competence given to them under domestic law, did not respect the principle of proportionality in that case).

The provisions of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967, which allow tenants to buy their freeholds (see PARA 1389 et seq post) do not infringe the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950), Protocol I art 1: James v United Kingdom (1986) 8 EHRR 123, [1986] ECHR 8793/79, ECtHR.

17 Human Rights Act Sch 1 Pt I art 14 (incorporating into domestic law the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (1950) art 14). It has been held that the statutory rules of succession to secure tenancies do not infringe the provisions of art 14 as read with art 8: see R (on the application of Gangera) v Hounslow London Borough Council [2003] EWHC 794 (Admin), [2003] HLR 1028, [2003] All ER (D) 200 (Apr), applied in Hounslow London Borough Council v Adjei [2004] EWHC 207 (Ch), [2004] 2 All ER 636, [2004] 2 FCR 465. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(ii) Impact of the Human Rights Act 1998/47. The impact of the Human Rights Act 1998 on possession proceedings.

47. The impact of the Human Rights Act 1998 on possession proceedings.

Possession proceedings fall within the Convention right<sup>1</sup> to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal<sup>2</sup>. It has been held that the prescribed method of service of the claim form and particulars of claim<sup>3</sup> does not contravene that right<sup>4</sup>. Although the fair trial guarantees of that right entitle a defendant to be heard, if he cannot show that his defence has a real prospect of success, or there is some other compelling reason why a trial should be conducted, there is no requirement that the procedural rules of a national court oblige the claimant in such a case to initiate further ancillary proceedings to strike out a defence or to enter summary judgment with all the concomitant expense and delay that would involve<sup>5</sup>. Moreover, although a breach of the Convention right may arise in relation to the enforcement of a judgment, which has to be regarded as part of the trial, that does not mean that enforcement involves a separate determination of civil rights and obligations which necessitate a further hearing. The right to possession is determined in compliance with the Convention right when the order for possession is made and the issue of the warrant of possession is simply a step which has to be taken to give effect to the order for possession. Such a step does not alter the legal status of the tenant or make any decision of any kind in relation to his rights<sup>6</sup>.

The coming into force of the Human Rights Act 1998<sup>7</sup> has facilitated challenges to possession proceedings on the ground that they infringe the Convention right to respect for private and family life and for a person's home and correspondence<sup>8</sup>; such proceedings have also sometimes been challenged on the additional ground that the differences in the security of tenure accorded to tenants, or to those occupying caravan sites under licence, infringe the occupiers' Convention right<sup>9</sup> not to be discriminated against<sup>10</sup>. The House of Lords has recently summarised the practical position where a local authority brings possession proceedings<sup>11</sup>. It is not necessary for the local authority to plead or prove in every case that domestic law complies with the Convention right<sup>12</sup> to respect for private and family life. Courts ought to proceed on the assumption that domestic law strikes a fair balance and is compatible with that Convention right<sup>13</sup>. If the court, following its usual procedures, is satisfied that the domestic law requirements for making a possession order have been met, the court ought to make a possession order unless the occupier shows that, highly exceptionally, he has a seriously arguable case on one of the following two grounds:

- 65 (1) that the law which requires the court to make a possession order is Convention-incompatible; and
- 66 (2) that the local authority's exercise of its power to seek a possession order is an unlawful act<sup>14</sup>.

Deciding whether the defendant has a seriously arguable case does not call for a full-blown trial but ought to be decided summarily. The procedural aim of the court is to decide that question as expeditiously as is consistent with the defendant having a fair opportunity to present his case. If the court considers the defence sought to be raised is not seriously arguable the court ought to proceed to make a possession order. Where a seriously arguable issue is raised, the court ought to decide the issue itself. Where, however, an issue arises on the application of the statutory provision<sup>15</sup> that, so far as it is possible to do so, primary legislation and subordinate legislation must be read and given effect in a way which is compatible with the Convention rights, the judge ought to consider whether it might be appropriate to refer the proceedings to the High Court<sup>16</sup>.

A defence which is based only on the occupier's personal circumstances ought, however, to be struck out. Where domestic law provides for personal circumstances to be taken into account, as in a case where the statutory test is whether it would be reasonable to make a possession order, then a fair opportunity must be given for the arguments in favour of the occupier to be presented; but if the requirements of the law have been established and the right to recover possession is unqualified, the only situations in which it would be open to the court to refrain from proceeding to summary judgment and making the possession order are as follows:

- 67 (a) if a seriously arguable point is raised that the law which enables the court to make the possession order is incompatible with the relevant Convention right<sup>17</sup>, the county court in the exercise of its jurisdiction under the Human Rights Act 1998 must deal with the argument in one or other of two ways, either by giving effect to the law, so far as it is possible for it to do so<sup>18</sup> in a way that is compatible with that right, or by adjourning the proceedings to enable the compatibility issue to be dealt with in the High Court;
- 68 (b) if the defendant wishes to challenge the decision of a public authority to recover possession as an improper exercise of its powers at common law on the ground that it is a decision that no reasonable person would consider justifiable, he ought to be permitted to do so provided that the point is seriously arguable<sup>19</sup>.

The House also considered the extent to which the domestic courts are bound to follow a domestic precedent which appears to be inconsistent with Strasbourg authority<sup>20</sup> and expressed the view that certainty is best achieved by adhering, even in the Convention context, to the rules of precedent. It is the duty of judges to review Convention arguments addressed to them, and if they consider a binding precedent to be inconsistent with Strasbourg authority, they may express their views and give leave to appeal, in that way discharging their duty under the Human Rights Act 1998<sup>21</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(iii) Discrimination Provisions/48. Sex discrimination.

(iii) Discrimination Provisions

48. Sex discrimination.

It is unlawful for a person, in relation to premises in Great Britain<sup>1</sup> of which he has power to dispose<sup>2</sup>, to discriminate against a woman<sup>3</sup>:

- 69 (1) in the terms on which he offers her those premises; or
- 70 (2) by refusing her application for those premises; or
- 71 (3) in his treatment of her in relation to any list of persons in need of premises of that description<sup>4</sup>;

but this does not apply to a person who owns an estate or interest in the premises and wholly occupies them unless he uses the services of an estate agent<sup>5</sup> for the purposes of the disposal of the premises, or publishes or causes to be published an advertisement in connection with the disposal<sup>6</sup>.

It is also unlawful for a person, in relation to premises managed by him, to discriminate against a woman occupying the premises:

- 72 (a) in the way he affords her access to any benefits or facilities, or by refusing or deliberately omitting to afford her access to them; or
- 73 (b) by evicting her, or subjecting her to any other detriment<sup>7</sup>.

There are statutory exceptions for small dwellings<sup>8</sup> and voluntary bodies<sup>9</sup> and in respect of discrimination which:

- 74 (i) is rendered unlawful by any of the statutory provisions relating to sex discrimination in the employment field<sup>10</sup> or specified statutory provisions relating to sex discrimination in education<sup>11</sup>; or
- 75 (ii) would be so unlawful but for any specified statutory provision<sup>12</sup>; or
- 76 (iii) contravenes a term modified or included by virtue of an equality clause<sup>13</sup>.

Where the licence or consent of the landlord or of any other person is required for the disposal to any person of premises in Great Britain comprised in a tenancy<sup>14</sup>, it is unlawful for the landlord or other person to discriminate against a woman by withholding the licence or consent for disposal of the premises to her<sup>15</sup>; but this does not apply if:

- 77 (A) the person withholding a licence or consent, or a near relative of his ('the relevant occupier') resides, and intends to continue to reside, on the premises; and
- 78 (B) there is on the premises, in addition to the accommodation occupied by the relevant occupier, accommodation, not being storage accommodation or means of access, shared by the relevant occupier with other persons residing on the premises who are not members of his household; and
- 79 (C) the premises are small premises<sup>16</sup>.

The above provisions are to be read as applying equally to the treatment of men, and for that purpose have effect with such modifications as are requisite<sup>17</sup>.

There are a number of general exceptions to the sex discrimination legislation<sup>18</sup>.

1 The extended meaning of 'Great Britain' set out in the Sex Discrimination Act 1975 s 82(1) ('Great Britain' includes such of the territorial waters of the United Kingdom as are adjacent to Great Britain) is of limited application in the context of landlord and tenant law. For the meaning of 'Great Britain' generally see PARA 25 note 18 ante.

'Premises' is not defined for these purposes; but it is submitted that 'premises' should include land, houses, flats and business premises. Note that accommodation in a hotel is dealt with separately under s 29 (as amended): see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 382.

2 'Dispose', in relation to premises, includes granting a right to occupy the premises, and any reference to acquiring premises is to be construed accordingly: ibid s 82(1).

3 For the meaning of 'discrimination' and related terms for these purposes see ibid ss 1(1), (4) (as substituted), s 5(1); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 344. 'Woman' includes a female of any age: ss 5(2), 82(1). Discrimination on the grounds of gender reassignment within the meaning of s 2A (as added) is not, however, included for these purposes. See further DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 348.

4 Ibid s 30(1). It has been conceded that a list of persons in need of accommodation includes a local authority housing list: see Ealing London Borough Council v Race Relations Board [1972] AC 342, [1972] 1 All ER 105, HL.

5 'Estate agent' means a person who, by way of profession or trade, provides services for the purpose of finding premises for persons seeking to acquire them or assisting in the disposal of premises: ibid s 82(1).

6 Ibid s 30(3).

7 Ibid s 30(2).

8 See ibid s 32; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 385.

9 See ibid s 34; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 383.

10 Ie by ibid Pt II (ss 6-20A) (as amended): see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 382; EMPLOYMENT.

11 Ie by ibid s 22 (as amended) or s 23 (as amended): see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 382; EDUCATION.

12 Ie but for ibid s 6(3) (repealed), s 7(1)(b), s 15(4), s 19 (as substituted), s 20 (as amended), ss 26-27 (as amended), s 28 (repealed) or Sch 4 paras 1, 2, 4: see DISCRIMINATION.

13 Ibid s 35(3). For the meaning of 'equality clause' see ss 8(1), 82(1) (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 424; EMPLOYMENT.

14 For these purposes 'tenancy' means a tenancy created by a lease or sublease, by an agreement for a lease or sublease or by a tenancy agreement or in pursuance of any enactment; and 'disposal', in relation to premises comprised in a tenancy, includes assignment or assignation of the tenancy and subletting or parting with possession of the premises or any part of the premises: ibid s 31(3). Section 31 applies to tenancies whenever they were created: see s 31(4).

15 Ibid s 31(1).

16 Ibid s 31(2). 'Small premises' means small premises as defined in s 32(2) (see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 385): s 31(2).

17 Ibid s 2(1).

18 See ibid Pt V (ss 42A-52A) (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION.

TEXT AND NOTES--Sex Discrimination Act 1975 ss 30, 31 amended: SI 2008/965.

TEXT AND NOTES 8-13--After 'in respect of discrimination' read 'or harassment': Sex Discrimination Act 1975 s 35(3) amended: SI 2008/963.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(iii) Discrimination Provisions/49. Racial discrimination.

49. Racial discrimination.

It is unlawful for a person, in relation to premises<sup>1</sup> in Great Britain<sup>2</sup> of which he has power to dispose<sup>3</sup>, to discriminate<sup>4</sup> within the meaning of the Race Relations Act 1976 against another:

- 80 (1) in the terms on which he offers him those premises; or
- 81 (2) by refusing his application for those premises; or
- 82 (3) in his treatment of him in relation to any list of persons in need of premises of that description<sup>5</sup>;

but this does not apply to discrimination, on grounds other than those of race or ethnic or national origins, by a person who owns an estate or interest in the premises and wholly occupies them unless he uses the services of an estate agent<sup>6</sup> for the purposes of the disposal of the premises, or publishes or causes to be published an advertisement in connection with the disposal<sup>7</sup>.

It is also unlawful for a person, in relation to premises managed by him, to discriminate against a person occupying the premises:

- 83 (a) in the way he affords him access to any benefits or facilities, or by refusing or deliberately omitting to afford him access to them; or
- 84 (b) by evicting him, or subjecting him to any other detriment<sup>8</sup>; and it is unlawful for a person, in relation to such premises as are referred to above<sup>9</sup>, to subject to harassment<sup>10</sup> a person who applies for or, as the case may be, occupies such premises<sup>11</sup>.

There is a statutory exception for discrimination on grounds other than those of race or ethnic or national origins in respect of small dwellings<sup>12</sup>. There is also an exception in respect of:

- 85 (i) discrimination or harassment which is rendered unlawful by any provision relating to discrimination in the employment field<sup>13</sup> or specified statutory provisions relating to discrimination in education<sup>14</sup>; or
- 86 (ii) discrimination which would be rendered unlawful by any provision relating to discrimination in the employment field<sup>15</sup> but for any specified<sup>16</sup> statutory provision<sup>17</sup>.

Where the licence or consent of the landlord or of any other person is required for the disposal to any person of premises in Great Britain comprised in a tenancy<sup>18</sup>, it is unlawful for the landlord or other person to discriminate against a person by withholding the licence or consent for disposal of the premises to him or, in relation to such a licence or consent, to subject to harassment a person who applies for the licence or consent, or from whom the licence or consent is withheld<sup>19</sup>; but this does not apply to discrimination on grounds other than those of race or ethnic or national origins if:

- 87 (A) the person withholding a licence or consent, or a near relative of his ('the relevant occupier') resides, and intends to continue to reside, on the premises; and
- 88 (B) there is on the premises, in addition to the accommodation occupied by the relevant occupier, accommodation, not being storage accommodation or means of access, shared by the relevant occupier with other persons residing on the premises who are not members of his household; and
- 89 (C) the premises are small premises<sup>20</sup>.

There are a number of general exceptions to the race relations legislation<sup>21</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'premises', unless the context otherwise requires, includes land of any description: Race Relations Act 1976 s 78(2).

2 The extended meaning of 'Great Britain' set out in ibid s 78(1) ('Great Britain' includes such of the territorial waters of the United Kingdom as are adjacent to Great Britain) is of limited application in the context of landlord and tenant law. For the meaning of 'Great Britain' generally see PARA 25 note 18 ante.

- 3 'Dispose', in relation to premises, includes granting the right to occupy the premises, and any reference to acquiring premises is to be construed accordingly: ibid s 78(1).
- 4 For the meaning of 'discrimination' and related terms see ibid s 1 (as amended), s 3(3); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 447.
- 5 Ibid s 21(1).
- 6 'Estate agent' means a person who, by way of profession or trade, provides services for the purpose of finding premises for persons seeking to acquire them or assisting in the disposal of premises: ibid s 78(1).
- 7 Ibid s 21(3) (amended by the Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1626, reg 23(2)(b)).
- 8 Race Relations Act 1976 s 21(2).
- 9 Ie in ibid s 21(1) or (2).
- 10 For the meaning of 'harassment' see ibid s 3A (as added); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 444.
- 11 Ibid s 21(2A) (added by the Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1626, reg 23(2)(a)).
- 12 See the Race Relations Act 1976 s 22 (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 464.
- 13 Ie by any provision of ibid Pt II (ss 4-15) (as amended): see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 446-454; EMPLOYMENT.
- 14 Ie by ibid s 17 (as amended) or s 18 (as amended): see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 460; EDUCATION.
- 15 See note 12 supra.
- 16 Ie but for the Race Relations Act 1976 s 4(3) (as amended), s 4A(1)(b) (as added), s 5(1)(b), s 6 (as amended), s 7(4) (as amended), s 9 (as amended) and s 14(4): see DISCRIMINATION.
- 17 Ibid s 23(1) (amended by the Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1626, reg 25(2)).
- 18 For these purposes, 'tenancy' means a tenancy created by a lease or sublease, by an agreement for a lease or sublease or by a tenancy agreement or in pursuance of any enactment; and 'disposal', in relation to premises comprised in a tenancy, includes assignment or assignation of the tenancy and subletting or parting with possession of the premises or any part of the premises: Race Relations Act 1976 s 24(4). Section 24 (as amended) applies to tenancies whenever they were created: see s 24(5).
- 19 Ibid s 24(1) (amended by the Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1626, reg 26(2)(a)).
- 20 Race Relations Act 1976 s 24(2) (amended by the Race Relations Act 1976 (Amendment) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1626, reg 26(2)(b)). The Race Relations Act 1976 s 22(2) (meaning of 'small premises': see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 464) applies for these purposes: see s 24(3).
- 21 See ibid Pt VI (ss 35-42) (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 482-487.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(iii) Discrimination Provisions/50. Disability discrimination; in general.

50. Disability discrimination; in general.

Any agreement made on or after 1 November 1993<sup>1</sup> relating to a lease<sup>2</sup> of any property which comprises or includes a dwelling<sup>3</sup>, whether contained in the instrument creating the lease or not and whether made before the creation of the lease or not, is void in so far as it would otherwise have the effect of prohibiting or imposing any restriction on:

- 90 (1) the occupation of the dwelling, or any part of the dwelling, by persons with mental disorders<sup>4</sup>; or
- 91 (2) the provision of accommodation within the dwelling for such persons<sup>5</sup>.

It is unlawful for a person with power to dispose<sup>6</sup> of any premises in the United Kingdom<sup>7</sup> to discriminate against a disabled person<sup>8</sup>:

- 92 (a) in the terms on which he offers to dispose of those premises to the disabled person;
- 93 (b) by refusing to dispose of those premises to the disabled person; or
- 94 (c) in his treatment of the disabled person in relation to any list of persons in need of premises of that description<sup>9</sup>;

but this does not apply to a person who owns an estate or interest in the premises and wholly occupies them unless, for the purpose of disposing of the premises, he uses the services of an estate agent<sup>10</sup> or publishes an advertisement<sup>11</sup> or causes an advertisement to be published<sup>12</sup>.

It is also unlawful for a person managing any premises to discriminate against a disabled person occupying those premises:

- 95 (i) in the way he permits the disabled person to make use of any benefits or facilities;
- 96 (ii) by refusing or deliberately omitting to permit the disabled person to make use of any benefits or facilities; or
- 97 (iii) by evicting the disabled person, or subjecting him to any other detriment<sup>13</sup>.

Regulations may make provision for these purposes as to who is to be treated as being, or as to who is to be treated as not being, a person who manages premises and as to who is to be treated as being, or as to who is to be treated as not being, a person occupying premises<sup>14</sup>.

It is unlawful for any person whose licence or consent is required for the disposal of any premises comprised in a tenancy<sup>15</sup> to discriminate against a disabled person by withholding his licence or consent for the disposal of the premises to the disabled person<sup>16</sup>.

There is a statutory exemption for small dwellings<sup>17</sup>.

It is similarly unlawful for any person whose licence or consent is required for the disposal of an interest in a commonhold unit in England and Wales<sup>18</sup> by the unit-holder<sup>19</sup> to discriminate against a disabled person by withholding his licence or consent for the disposal of the interest in favour of, or to, the disabled person<sup>20</sup>. Where it is not possible for an interest in a commonhold unit to be disposed of by the unit-holder unless some other person is a party to the disposal of the interest, it is unlawful for that other person to discriminate against a disabled person by deliberately not being a party to the disposal of the interest in favour of, or to, the disabled person<sup>21</sup>. Regulations may provide for these provisions not to apply, or to apply only, in cases of a prescribed description<sup>22</sup>.

Enforcement of these provisions is dealt with elsewhere in this work<sup>25</sup>.

1    le the date on which the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 89 came into force: see the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 (Commencement and Transitional Provisions No 1) Order 1993, SI 1993/2134, arts 2, 5(a).

2    For these purposes, 'lease' and 'tenancy' have the same meaning, and both expressions include, where the context so permits, a sublease or subtenancy and an agreement for a lease or tenancy or for a sublease or subtenancy but do not include a tenancy at will or at sufferance; and the expressions 'landlord' and 'tenant', and references to letting, to the grant of a lease or to covenants or the terms of a lease, are to be construed accordingly: Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 101(1), (2).

Where two or more persons jointly constitute either the landlord or the tenant in relation to the lease of a flat, any reference to the landlord or to the tenant is, unless the context otherwise requires, a reference to both or all of the persons who jointly constitute the landlord or the tenant, as the case may require: s 101(4). 'Flat' means a separate set of premises, whether or not on the same floor (1) which forms part of a building; (2) which is constructed or adapted for use for the purpose of a dwelling; and (3) either the whole or a material part of which lies above or below some other part of the building: s 101(1). A storeroom on the sixth floor of a block of flats which was let to the tenant on a separate lease was held not to be part of his 'flat' on the second floor within the meaning of s 101(1) since there was no natural or physical relationship between the storeroom and the flat: see Cadogan v McGirk [1996] 4 All ER 643, [1996] 2 EGLR 75, CA.

Any lease which is reversionary on another lease is treated as if were a concurrent lease intermediate between that other lease and any interest superior to that other lease: Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 101(8).

3    For these purposes, 'dwelling' means any building or part of a building occupied or intended to be occupied as a separate dwelling: ibid s 101(1).

4    le within the meaning of the Mental Health Act 1983: see MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 402.

5    Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 89(1), (2).

6    For these purposes, 'dispose', in relation to premises, includes granting a right to occupy the premises, and, in relation to premises comprised in a tenancy, includes (1) assigning the tenancy; and (2) subletting or parting with possession of the premises or any part of the premises; and 'disposal' is to be construed accordingly: Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 22(6). 'Tenancy' means a tenancy created (a) by a lease or sublease; (b) by an agreement for a lease or sublease; (c) by a tenancy agreement; or (d) in pursuance of any enactment: s 22(6).

7    See ibid s 22(8). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 25 note 18 ante.

8    As to when a person discriminates against a disabled person for these purposes see ibid s 24 (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 599. For the meaning of 'disabled person' see s 1(2); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 511. In the case of an act which constitutes discrimination by virtue of s 55 (as amended) (victimisation: see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 526), s 22 (as amended) also applies to discrimination against a person who is not disabled: s 22(7). Where, however, for a reason which relates to the disabled person's disability, a person with power to dispose of any premises ('the provider') treats a disabled person less favourably than he treats or would treat others to whom that reason does not or would not apply, that treatment is to be taken to be justified for the purposes of s 24(1) (as amended) in circumstances where (1) the provider grants a disabled person a right to occupy premises (whether by means of a formal tenancy agreement or otherwise); (2) the disabled person is required to provide a deposit which is refundable at the end of the period of occupation provided that the premises and contents are not damaged; (3) the provider refuses to refund some or all of the deposit because the premises or contents have been damaged for a reason which relates to the disabled person's disability, and the damage is above the level at which the provider would normally refund some or all of the deposit; and (4) it is reasonable in all the circumstances for the provider to refuse to refund some or all of the deposit: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 3.

9    Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 22(1).

10   'Estate agent' means a person who, by way of profession or trade, provides services for the purpose of finding premises for persons seeking to acquire them or assisting in the disposal of premises: ibid s 22(6).

11   'Advertisement' includes every form of advertisement or notice, whether to the public or not: ibid s 22(6).

12   Ibid s 22(2).

13   Ibid s 22(3); and see Manchester City Council v Romano, Manchester City Council v Samari [2004] EWCA Civ 834, [2004] 4 All ER 21, [2005] 1 WLR 2775, cited in PARA 1358 post.

14 Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 22(3A) (added by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 s 19(1), Sch 1 Pt 1 paras 1, 16). A commonhold association which exercises functions in relation to any commonhold premises is to be treated as a person who manages the premises for these purposes: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 8(1).

16 Ibid s 22(4).

17 See ibid s 23 (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 602.

18 See ibid s 22A(7) (s 22A added by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 s 19(1), Sch 1 Pt 1 paras 1, 17). 'Commonhold unit' has the same meaning as in the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Pt 1 (ss 1-70) (see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 330); Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 22A(5) (as so added).

19 'Unit-holder', in relation to a commonhold unit, has the same meaning as in the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Pt 1 (see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 331); Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 22A(5) (as added: see note 18 supra).

20 Ibid s 22A(1) (as added: see note 18 supra). In the case of an act which constitutes discrimination by virtue of s 55 (as amended) (victimisation: see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 526), s 22A (as added) also applies to discrimination against a person who is not disabled: s 22A(6) (as so added).

Regulations may make provision, for these purposes: (1) as to what is, or as to what is not, to be included within the meaning of 'dispose' (and 'disposal'); (2) as to what is, or as to what is not, to be included within the meaning of 'interest in a commonhold unit': s 22A(4) (as so added). 'Dispose', in relation to an interest in a commonhold unit, includes granting a right to occupy the unit, and 'disposal' is to be construed accordingly; and an 'interest in a commonhold unit' includes an interest in part only of a commonhold unit: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 8(2).

21 Ibid s 22A(2) (as added: see note 18 supra).

22 Ibid s 22A(3) (as added: see note 18 supra).

23 Ie ibid ss 22-24L (as amended); see the text and notes 6-22 supra; para 51 post; and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 600 et seq.

24 Ibid ss 22-24L (as amended) do not apply: (1) in relation to the provision of premises by a provider of services where he provides the premises in providing services to members of the public; (2) in relation to the provision, in the course of a Part 2 relationship, of premises by the regulated party to the other party; (3) in relation to the provision of premises to a student or prospective student (a) by a responsible body within the meaning of Pt IV Ch 1 (ss 28A-28Q) (as added and amended) or Pt IV Ch 2 (ss 28R-31A) (as amended) (discrimination in relation to education: see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 569); or (b) by an authority in discharging any functions mentioned in s 28F(1) (as added and amended) (duty of education authorities not to discriminate); or (4) to anything which is unlawful under s 21F (as added) (discrimination by private clubs etc) or which would be unlawful under that provision but for the operation of any provision in or made under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995: s 24M(1) (s 24M added by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 s 19(1), Sch 1 Pt 1 paras 1, 20). Head (1) supra has effect subject to any prescribed exceptions; and in that head 'provider of services', and 'providing services', have the same meaning as in the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 19 (as amended) (see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 583 et seq): s 24M(2), (3) (as so added). For the purposes of head (2) supra, 'Part 2 relationship' means a relationship during the course of which an act of discrimination against, or harassment of, one party to the relationship by the other party to it is unlawful under ss 4-15C (as amended) (see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 529 et seq); and in relation to a Part 2 relationship, 'regulated party' means the party whose acts of discrimination, or harassment, are made unlawful by those provisions: s 24M(4) (as so added). In head (3) supra, 'student' includes pupil: s 24M(5) (as so added).

25 See ibid s 25 (as amended); and DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 644.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(iii) Discrimination Provisions/51. Disability discrimination; duties of controller of premises.

51. Disability discrimination; duties of controller of premises.

With effect from 4 December 2006<sup>1</sup>, it is unlawful for a controller of let premises<sup>2</sup> to discriminate against a disabled person<sup>3</sup> who is a person to whom the premises are let or who, although not a person to whom the premises are let, is lawfully under the letting an occupier of the premises<sup>4</sup>; but this does not apply if the premises are, or have at any time been, the only or principal home of an individual who is a person by whom they are let and since entering into the letting:

- 98 (1) the individual has not; and
- 99 (2) where he is not the sole person by whom the premises are let, no other person by whom they are let has, used for the purpose of managing the premises the services of a person who, by profession or trade, manages let premises<sup>5</sup>. Nor does it apply if the premises are of a prescribed description<sup>6</sup> or where the exemption for small dwellings<sup>7</sup> applies<sup>8</sup>.

Where the above prohibition on discrimination applies and:

- 100 (a) a controller of let premises receives a request made by or on behalf of a person to whom the premises are let;
- 101 (b) it is reasonable<sup>9</sup> to regard the request as a request that the controller take steps in order to provide an auxiliary aid or service<sup>10</sup>; and
- 102 (c) either the first condition<sup>11</sup>, or the second condition<sup>12</sup>, is satisfied, it is the duty of the controller to take such steps as it is reasonable, in all the circumstances of the case, for him to have to take in order to provide the auxiliary aid or service<sup>13</sup>.

Where that prohibition on discrimination applies, and either:

- 103 (i) a controller of let premises has a practice, policy or procedure which has the effect of making it impossible, or unreasonably difficult, for a relevant disabled person<sup>14</sup> to enjoy the premises, or to make use of any benefit or facility which by reason of the letting is one of which he is entitled to make use; or
- 104 (ii) a term of the letting<sup>15</sup> has that effect, and (in either case) the specified conditions<sup>16</sup> are satisfied, it is the duty of the controller to take such steps as it is reasonable<sup>17</sup>, in all the circumstances of the case, for him to have to take in order to change the practice, policy, procedure or term so as to stop it having that effect<sup>18</sup>.

Also with effect from that date, where a person has premises to let, and a disabled person is considering taking a letting of the premises, it is unlawful for a controller of the premises<sup>19</sup> to discriminate against the disabled person<sup>20</sup>; but this does not apply in relation to premises that are to let if the premises are, or have at any time been, the only or principal home of an individual who is a person who has them to let and neither the individual nor, where he is not the sole person who has the premises to let, any other person who has the premises to let, uses the services of an estate agent<sup>21</sup> for the purposes of letting the premises<sup>22</sup>. Nor does it apply if the premises are of a prescribed description<sup>23</sup> or where the exemption for small dwellings<sup>24</sup> applies<sup>25</sup>.

A person's failure to comply with a duty with regard to let premises or premises that are to let<sup>26</sup> is justified only if in his opinion a specified statutory condition<sup>27</sup> is satisfied and it is reasonable, in all the circumstances of the case, for him to hold that opinion<sup>28</sup>.

Regulations may make supplementary provision for the purposes of the above provisions<sup>29</sup>; and the premises provisions<sup>30</sup> do not operate where certain other statutory provisions operate<sup>31</sup>.

Enforcement of these provisions is dealt with elsewhere in this work<sup>32</sup>.

1    le the date on which the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 s 13 came into force: see the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 (Commencement No 2) Order 2005, SI 2005/2774, art 4(b).

2    For these purposes, and the purposes of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 ss 24B-24F (as added), a person is a controller of let premises if he is (1) a person by whom the premises are let; or (2) a person who manages the premises: s 24A(3) (ss 24A-24M added by the Disability Discrimination Act 2005 s 13). 'Let' includes sublet; and premises are to be treated as let by a person to another where a person has granted another a contractual licence to occupy them: Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 24A(4) (as so added). Section 24A (as added) applies only in relation to premises in the United Kingdom: s 24A(5) (as so added). For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 25 note 18 ante.

Premises which are a commonhold unit of which a person is a unit-holder are to be treated as premises which are let to that person for the purposes of ss 24A-24F (as added): see the Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 9(1). Where this applies: (a) a commonhold association which exercises functions in relation to the premises is to be treated as a person who manages the premises; (b) for the purposes of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 ss 24D, 24E (as added), any reference to a term of the letting is to be treated as including a reference to a term of the commonhold community statement and any other term applicable by virtue of the transfer of the unit to the unit-holder; (c) for the purposes of ss 24C(4), 24D(1) (as added), any benefit or facility which, by reason of the letting, is one of which a relevant disabled person is entitled to make use, is to be treated as including any benefit or facility which by reason of any term referred to in head (b) supra is one of which a relevant disabled person is entitled to make use; (d) a person who is lawfully an occupier of the unit, although not a unit-holder nor a person lawfully occupying the unit under a letting of it, is to be treated as a person who, although not a person to whom the premises are let, is lawfully under a letting an occupier of them: reg 9(2).

3    For these purposes, a controller of let premises discriminates against a disabled person if (1) he fails to comply with a duty under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 24C or s 24D (each as added) imposed on him by reference to the disabled person; and (2) he cannot show that failure to comply with the duty is justified (see s 24K (as added); and note 27 infra): s 24A(2) (as added: see note 2 supra).

4    Ibid s 24A(1) (as added: see note 2 supra).

5    Ibid s 24B(1) (as added: see note 2 supra).

6    Ibid s 24B(2) (as added: see note 2 supra).

7    le where the conditions mentioned in ibid s 23(2) are satisfied: see s 24B(3) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the purposes of s 23 (as amended) 'the relevant occupier' means, in a case falling within s 24A(1) (as added), a controller of the let premises, or a near relative of his; and 'near relative' has here the same meaning as in s 23 (as amended) (exemption for small dwellings: see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 604): s 24B(4) (as so added).

8    Ibid s 24B(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

9    For the purposes of ibid ss 24C, 24D (as added: see note 2 supra) it is never reasonable for a controller of let premises to have to take steps consisting of, or including, the removal or alteration of a physical feature: s 24E(1) (as added: see note 2 supra). For these purposes and the purposes of s 24J(5) (as added) (see note 20 infra), the following are to be treated as physical features: (1) any feature arising from the design or construction of the premises; (2) any feature of any approach to, exit from, or access to the premises; (3) any fixtures in or on the premises; (4) any other physical element or quality of any land comprised in the premises; but any furniture, furnishings, materials, equipment or other chattels in or on the premises are not to be treated as physical features: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 4(1)-(3). The following are not to be treated as alterations of physical features: (a) the replacement or provision of any signs or notices; (b) the replacement of any taps or door handles; (c) the replacement, provision or adaptation of any door bell, or door entry system; (d) changes to the colour of any surface (such as, eg, a wall or door): reg 4(4).

See also notes 10, 17 infra.

10   The following are to be treated as auxiliary aids or services for these purposes, and for the purposes of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 24J(1), (2) (as added) (see note 20 infra): (1) the removal, replacement or provision of any furniture, furnishings, materials, equipment or other chattels; (2) the replacement or provision of any signs or notices; (3) the replacement of any taps or door handles; (4) the replacement, provision or adaptation of any door bell, or door entry system; (5) changes to the colour of any surface (such as, eg, a wall or door); but head (1) supra does not include the provision of any item which would be a fixture when installed: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 5(1), (2). It is reasonable to regard a request for a matter falling within head (1) supra as a request for the controller of premises to take steps in order to provide an auxiliary aid or service; and the 'controller of premises' means, in relation to the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 24C (as added), the controller of let premises and, in relation to s 24J(1), (2) (as added), the controller of premises that are to let: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 5(3), (4).

11 The first condition is that (1) the auxiliary aid or service would enable a relevant disabled person to enjoy, or facilitate such a person's enjoyment of, the premises, but would be of little or no practical use to the relevant disabled person concerned if he were neither a person to whom the premises are let nor an occupier of them; and (2) it would, were the auxiliary aid or service not to be provided, be impossible or unreasonably difficult for the relevant disabled person concerned to enjoy the premises: Disability Discrimination Act s 24C(3) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'relevant disabled person' see note 14 infra.

12 The second condition is that (1) the auxiliary aid or service would enable a relevant disabled person to make use, or facilitate such a person's making use, of any benefit or facility which by reason of the letting is one of which he is entitled to make use, but would be of little or no practical use to the relevant disabled person concerned if he were neither a person to whom the premises are let nor an occupier of them; and (2) it would, were the auxiliary aid or service not to be provided, be impossible or unreasonably difficult for the relevant disabled person concerned to make use of any benefit or facility which by reason of the letting is one of which he is entitled to make use: ibid s 24C(4) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'relevant disabled person' see note 14 infra.

13 Ibid s 24C(1), (2) (as added: see note 2 supra). Sections 24C, 24D (as added) impose duties only for the purpose of determining whether a person has, for the purposes of s 24A (as added), discriminated against another; and accordingly a breach of any such duty is not actionable as such: s 24E(2) (as so added).

14 For the purposes of ibid ss 24C, 24D (as added), 'relevant disabled person', in relation to let premises, means a particular disabled person who is a person to whom the premises are let or who, although not a person to whom the premises are let, is lawfully under the letting an occupier of the premises: s 24E(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

15 For the purposes of ibid ss 24C, 24D (as added), the terms of a letting of premises include the terms of any agreement which relates to the letting of the premises: s 24E(4) (as added: see note 2 supra).

16 Those conditions are: (1) that the practice, policy, procedure or term would not have that effect if the relevant disabled person concerned did not have a disability; (2) that the controller receives a request made by or on behalf of a person to whom the premises are let; and (3) that it is reasonable to regard the request as a request that the controller take steps in order to change the practice, policy, procedure or term so as to stop it having that effect: ibid s 24D(2) (as added: see note 2 supra).

17 Where under the terms of any lease or other binding obligation a controller of let premises is required to obtain the consent of any person to change a term of a letting and but for that requirement, it would be reasonable for the controller of let premises to change the term in order to comply with a duty under ibid s 24D(3) (as added), it is reasonable for the controller of let premises to have to request that consent, but it is not reasonable for him to have to change the term of the letting before that consent is obtained; and for these purposes 'binding obligation' means any legally binding obligation in relation to premises, whether arising from an agreement or otherwise: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 6(1), (2). Subject to that, where (1) a controller of let premises is subject to a duty under the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 24D(3) (as added) in relation to a term of the letting of a dwelling house; (2) the duty has arisen because a term of the letting prohibits the person to whom the premises are let from making alterations or improvements to the premises; (3) the terms of the letting contain no exception to that prohibition for alterations or improvements to be made with the consent of the controller of let premises; (4) the person to whom the premises are let has requested permission to make an improvement to the premises; (5) if the improvement in question were excluded from the prohibition, the term would no longer have the effect of making it impossible or unreasonably difficult for a relevant disabled person to enjoy the premises or make use of any benefit or facility which by reason of the letting is one of which he is entitled to make use; and (6) it would be reasonable in all the circumstances for the person to whom the premises are let to make the improvement in question, it is reasonable for the controller of let premises to have to take steps to change the term referred to in head (2) supra, so far as it relates to the improvement in question, so that it becomes a term which permits the making of that improvement, subject to the imposition of reasonable conditions by the controller of let premises: Disability Discrimination (Premises) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/887, reg 7(1)-(4).

See also note 9 supra.

18 Disability Discrimination Act 1995 s 24D(1), (3). See also note 13 supra.

19 For these purposes and the purposes of ibid ss 24H, 24J (as added), a person is a controller of premises that are to let if he is (1) a person who has the premises to let; or (2) a person who manages the premises: s 24G(3) (as added: see note 2 supra). 'Let' includes sublet; premises are to be treated as to let by a person to another where a person proposes to grant another a contractual licence to occupy them; and references to a person considering taking a letting of premises are to be construed accordingly: s 24G(4) (as so added). Section 24G (as added) applies only in relation to premises in the United Kingdom: s 24G(5) (as so added).

20 Ibid s 24G(1) (as added: see note 2 supra). For these purposes, a controller of premises that are to let discriminates against a disabled person if (1) he fails to comply with a duty under s 24J (as added) imposed on him by reference to the disabled person; and (2) he cannot show that failure to comply with the duty is justified (see s 24K (as added): s 24G(2) (as so added)).

Where: (a) a controller of premises that are to let receives a request made by or on behalf of a relevant disabled person; (b) it is reasonable to regard the request as a request that the controller take steps in order to provide an auxiliary aid or service; (c) the auxiliary aid or service would enable the relevant disabled person to become, or facilitate his becoming, a person to whom the premises are let, but would be of little or no practical use to him if he were not considering taking a letting of the premises; and (d) it would, were the auxiliary aid or service not to be provided, be impossible or unreasonably difficult for the relevant disabled person to become a person to whom the premises are let, it is the duty of the controller to take such steps as it is reasonable, in all the circumstances of the case, for the controller to have to take in order to provide the auxiliary aid or service (but see s 24J(5) (as added): s 24J(1), (2) (as added: see note 2 supra)).

Where (i) a controller of premises that are to let has a practice, policy or procedure which has the effect of making it impossible, or unreasonably difficult, for a relevant disabled person to become a person to whom the premises are let; (ii) the practice, policy or procedure would not have that effect if the relevant disabled person did not have a disability; (iii) the controller receives a request made by or on behalf of the relevant disabled person; and (iv) it is reasonable to regard the request as a request that the controller take steps in order to change the practice, policy or procedure so as to stop it having that effect, it is the duty of the controller to take such steps as it is reasonable, in all the circumstances of the case, for him to have to take in order to change the practice, policy or procedure so as to stop it having that effect (but see s 24J(5) (as added)): s 24J(3), (4) (as so added). For these purposes, it is never reasonable for a controller of premises that are to let to have to take steps consisting of, or including, the removal or alteration of a physical feature (s 24J(5) (as so added)); and 'relevant disabled person', in relation to premises that are to let, means a particular disabled person who is considering taking a letting of the premises (s 24J(6) (as so added)). Section 24J (as so added) imposes duties only for the purpose of determining whether a person has, for the purposes of s 24G (as added), discriminated against another; and accordingly a breach of any such duty is not actionable as such: s 24J(7) (as so added).

21 Ie within the meaning given by ibid s 22(6): see PARA 50 note 10 ante.

22 Ibid s 24H(1) (as added: see note 2 supra).

23 Ibid s 24H(2) (as added: see note 2 supra).

24 Ie where the conditions mentioned in ibid s 23(2) are satisfied: see s 24H(3) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the purposes of s 23 (as amended) 'the relevant occupier' means, in a case falling within s 24G(1) (as added), a controller of the let premises, or a near relative of his; and 'near relative' has here the same meaning as in s 23 (as amended) (see DISCRIMINATION vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 602): s 24H(4) (as so added).

25 Ibid s 24H(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

26 Ie a duty for the purposes of ibid s 24A(2) (as added) and s 24G(2) (as added): see the text and notes 3, 20 supra.

51 Disability discrimination; duties of controller of premises

NOTE 27--SI 2006/887 reg 2 amended: SI 2007/1898.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(iv) Information about Landlord to be given to Tenants of Dwellings/52. Disclosure of landlord's identity.

(iv) Information about Landlord to be given to Tenants of Dwellings

52. Disclosure of landlord's identity.

If the tenant<sup>1</sup> of premises occupied as a dwelling<sup>2</sup> makes a written request for the landlord's<sup>3</sup> name and address<sup>4</sup> to:

- 105 (1) any person who demands, or the last person who received, rent payable under the tenancy; or
- 106 (2) any other person for the time being acting as agent for the landlord, in relation to the tenancy, that person must supply the tenant with a written statement of the landlord's name and address within the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he receives the request<sup>5</sup>. A person who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with this requirement commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>6</sup>.

Where a tenant is so supplied<sup>7</sup> with the name and address of his landlord and the landlord is a body corporate, he may make a further written request to the landlord for the name and address of every director and of the secretary of the landlord<sup>8</sup>. Such a request is duly made to the landlord if it is made to an agent of the landlord or a person who demands the rent of the premises concerned; and any such agent or person to whom such a request is so made must forward it to the landlord as soon as may be<sup>9</sup>. The landlord must supply the tenant with a written statement of the information so requested within the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he receives the request<sup>10</sup>. A landlord who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with such a request<sup>11</sup>, and a person who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with a requirement so imposed<sup>12</sup> on him, commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>13</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenant' includes a statutory tenant: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 1(3)(a). 'Statutory tenant' and 'statutory tenancy' mean a statutory tenant or statutory tenancy within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 et seq post) or the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARA 1146 et seq post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 37(a). 'Lease' and 'tenancy' have the same meaning (s 36(1)); and both expressions include a sublease or subtenancy and an agreement for a lease or tenancy or sublease or subtenancy (s 36(2)). The expressions 'lessor' and 'lessee' and 'landlord' and 'tenant', and references to letting, to the grant of a lease or to covenants or terms, are to be construed accordingly: s 36(3). In relation to a statutory tenant, 'landlord' means the person who, apart from the statutory tenancy, would be entitled to possession of the premises: s 37(b). For the meaning of 'landlord' for the purposes of ss 1, 2 see also note 3 infra.

2 For these purposes, 'dwelling' means a building or part of a building occupied or intended to be occupied as a separate dwelling, together with any yard, garden, outhouses and appurtenances belonging to it or usually enjoyed with it: ibid s 38; and see Ruddy v Oakfern Properties Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1389, [2006] All ER (D) 290 (Oct).

3 For these purposes, 'landlord' means the immediate landlord: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 1(3)(b).

4 For these purposes, 'address' means a person's place of abode or place of business or, in the case of a company, its registered office: ibid s 38.

5 Ibid s 1(1). Sections 1, 2 do not, however, apply to a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 32(1) (amended by the Housing Act 1996 s 93(2)).

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 1(2). The 'standard scale' means the standard scale of maximum fines for summary offences as set out in the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37 (as amended): see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (definition added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 para 58); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 142. At the date at which this title states the law, the standard scale is as follows: level 1, £200; level 2, £500; level 3, £1,000; level 4, £2,500; level 5, £5,000: Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37(2) (substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 17(1)). As to the determination of the amount of the fine actually imposed, as distinct from the level on the standard scale which it may not exceed, see the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 164 (as amended); and SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 144.

Proceedings for an offence under any provision of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 may be brought by a local housing authority: s 34. For these purposes, 'local housing authority' has the meaning given by the Housing Act 1985 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 1311 note 4 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38.

Where an offence under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 which has been committed by a body corporate is proved (1) to have been committed with the consent or connivance of a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or a person purporting to act in any such capacity; or (2) to be attributable to any neglect on the part of such an officer or person, he, as well as the body corporate, is guilty of an offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly: s 33(1). Where the affairs of a body corporate are managed by its members s 33(1) applies in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his functions of management as if he were a director of the body corporate: s 33(2).

7 Ie under ibid s 1: see the text and notes 1-6 supra.

8 Ibid s 2(1). Section 2 does not, however, apply to a business tenancy: see note 5 supra.

9 Ibid s 2(3). See also note 8 supra.

10 Ibid s 2(2). See also note 8 supra.

11 Ie a request under ibid s 2.

12 Ie imposed by ibid s 2(3).

13 Ibid s 2(4). See also note 8 supra.

PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(iv) Information about Landlord to be given to Tenants of Dwellings/53. Notification by landlord of address for service of notices.

53. Notification by landlord of address for service of notices.

A landlord<sup>1</sup> of any premises which consist of or include a dwelling<sup>2</sup> and are not held under a tenancy to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>3</sup> applies must by notice<sup>4</sup> furnish the tenant with an address in England and Wales at which notices, including notices in proceedings<sup>5</sup>, may be served on him by the tenant<sup>6</sup>. Where a landlord of any such premises fails so to furnish an address, any rent, service charge<sup>7</sup> or administration charge<sup>8</sup> otherwise due from the tenant to the landlord is treated for all purposes as not being due from the tenant to the landlord at any time before the landlord does so supply an address<sup>9</sup>; but any such rent, service charge or administration charge is not to be so treated in relation to any time when, by virtue of an order of any court<sup>10</sup> or tribunal, there is in force an appointment of a receiver or manager<sup>11</sup> whose functions include the receiving of rent, service charges or, as the case may be, administration charges from the tenant<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'landlord' means the immediate landlord or, in relation to a statutory tenant, the person who, apart from the statutory tenancy, would be entitled to possession of the premises subject to the tenancy: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 60(1). 'Lease' and 'tenancy' have the same meaning and both expressions include a sublease or subtenancy and an agreement for a lease or tenancy or for a sublease or subtenancy (ss 59(1), 60(1)); and the expressions 'landlord' and 'tenant', and references to letting, to the grant of a lease or to covenants or the terms of a lease are to be construed accordingly (ss 59(2), 60(1)). 'Tenancy' includes a statutory tenancy; and 'statutory tenancy' and 'statutory tenant' mean a statutory tenancy or statutory tenant within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 et seq post) or the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARA 1146 et seq post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 60(1). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company, references to the landlord include the RTM company, and references to a tenant include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102, Sch 7 para 12(1)-(3). For the meaning of 'RTM company' see PARA 374 post.

2 For these purposes, 'dwelling' means a building or part of a building occupied or intended to be occupied as a separate dwelling, together with any yard, garden, outhouses and appurtenances belonging to it or usually enjoyed with it: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 60(1).

3 Ie the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq post.

4 Any notice required or authorised to be served under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 must be in writing and may be sent by post: s 54(1). In the Law of Property Act 1925 s 196 (as amended) (regulations respecting notices) any reference in s 196(3), (4) (as amended) (see PARA 621 post) to the last-known place of abode or business of the person to be served has effect, in its application to a notice to be served by a tenant on a landlord of premises to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt VI (ss 46-50) (as amended) (see the text and notes 5-12 infra; and PARA 257 post) applies as if that reference included a reference to (1) the address last furnished to the tenant by the landlord in accordance with s 48 (as amended); or (2) if no address has been furnished in accordance with s 48 (as amended), the address last furnished to the tenant by the landlord in accordance with s 47 (as amended) (see PARA 257 post): s 49.

A landlord may give two different addresses for service of notices where this will not be confusing for the tenant: Marath v MacGillivray (1996) 28 HLR 484, [1996] NPC 11, CA. The address of the landlord's agent is sufficient: Drew-Morgan v Hamid-Zadeh (1999) 32 HLR 316, [1999] 2 EGLR 13, CA.

5 For these purposes, 'notices in proceedings' means notices or other documents served in, or in connection with, any legal proceedings: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 60(1).

6 Ibid ss 46(1), 48(1). Section 48 (as amended) applies to tenancies created or in existence before 1 February 1988 (ie the date on which s 48 came into force: see s 62(2); the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 (Commencement No 1) Order 1987, SI 1987/2177, art 2(c)); and Hussain v Singh [1993] 2 EGLR 70, [1993] 31 EG 75, CA.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt VI (as amended) applies to an agricultural holding if it includes a dwelling: Dallhold Estates (UK) Pty Ltd v Linsey Trading Properties Inc (1992) 65 P & CR 374, [1992] 1 EGLR 88; revsd on other grounds sub nom Lindsey Trading Properties Inc v Dallhold Estates (UK) Pty Ltd (1993) 70 P & CR 332, [1994] 1 EGLR 93, CA.

7 For these purposes, 'service charge' has the meaning given by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 post); Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 46(2).

8 For these purposes, 'administration charge' has the meaning given by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11 para 1 (see PARA 355 post); Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 46(3) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 11 Pt 2 paras 7, 9).

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 48(2) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 11 Pt 2 paras 7, 11(1), (2)). See Rogan v Woodfield Building Services Ltd (1994) 27 HLR 78, [1995] 1 EGLR 72, CA (rent to be treated as not due because of failure to comply with the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 48(1) is not forever irrecoverable; such a contention is contrary to the clear words of s 48(2) (now as amended)).

10 For these purposes, 'the court' means the High Court or a county court: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 60(1). A county court has jurisdiction to hear and determine any question arising under any provision of Pt I (ss 1-20) (as amended) (see PARA 1744 et seq post), Pt III (ss 25-34) (as amended) (see PARA 1783 et seq post), s 42 (as amended) (see PARA 352 post), ss 46, 47 (as amended) (see PARA 257 post) and s 48, other than a question falling within the jurisdiction of a leasehold valuation tribunal by virtue of s 13(1) (as substituted) (see PARA 1776 post) or s 31(1) (as amended) (see PARA 1789 post): s 52(1), (2) (amended by the Housing Act 1996 ss 86(6), 92(1), Sch 6 Pt IV para 6; the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 163(1), (8)). Where any proceedings under any of those provisions are being taken in a county court, the county court has jurisdiction to hear and determine any other proceedings joined with those proceedings, notwithstanding that the other proceedings would otherwise be outside the court's jurisdiction: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 52(3).

11 As to the appointment of a receiver or manager to receive the rent or, as the case may be, service charge or administration charge see PARA 399 et seq post.

12 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 48(3) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 176, Sch 11 Pt 2 paras 7, 11(1), (3)(a), (b), Sch 13 paras 8, 11).

Financial assistance for provision of landlord and tenant law advice or for certain legal proceedings.

(v) Other Relevant Legislation

54. Financial assistance for provision of landlord and tenant law advice or for certain legal proceedings.

The Secretary of State<sup>1</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>2</sup> may give financial assistance to any person in relation to the provision by that person of general advice about:

- 107 (1) any aspect of the law of landlord and tenant, so far as relating to residential tenancies; or
- 108 (2) the provisions of the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993<sup>3</sup> relating to estate management schemes in connection with enfranchisement<sup>4</sup>.

Such financial assistance may be given in such form and on such terms as the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister considers appropriate<sup>5</sup>; and the terms on which it may be given may, in particular, include provision as to the circumstances in which the assistance must be repaid or otherwise made good to the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister and the manner in which that is to be done<sup>6</sup>.

The Lord Chancellor may give financial assistance to a person in relation to the provision by that person of general advice about an aspect of the law of commonhold land, so far as relating to residential matters<sup>7</sup>. Such financial assistance may be given in such form and on such terms as the Lord Chancellor thinks appropriate<sup>8</sup> and the terms may, in particular, require repayment in specified circumstances<sup>9</sup>.

The Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, the Assembly or the relevant Welsh minister may give assistance in connection with legal proceedings relating to the right to buy<sup>10</sup>.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>11</sup>, the Commission for Equality and Human Rights<sup>12</sup> may assist an individual who is or may become party to legal proceedings:

- 109 (a) if the proceedings relate or may relate, wholly or partly, to a provision of the equality enactments<sup>13</sup> and the individual alleges that he has been the victim of behaviour contrary to a provision of the equality enactments<sup>14</sup>;
- 110 (b) if and in so far as the proceedings concern or may concern the question of a landlord's reasonableness in relation to consent to the making of an improvement to a dwelling where the improvement would be likely to facilitate the enjoyment of the premises by the tenant or another lawful occupier having regard to a disability<sup>15</sup>.

TEXT AND NOTE 7--2002 Act s 62(1) amended: 2008 Act s 319(1).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(5) LEGISLATIVE INTERVENTION/(v) Other Relevant Legislation/55. Selective licensing of private landlords.

55. Selective licensing of private landlords.

Part 3 of the Housing Act 2004<sup>1</sup> provides for houses<sup>2</sup> to be licensed by local housing authorities<sup>3</sup> where:

- 111 (1) they are houses to which that Part applies<sup>4</sup>; and
- 112 (2) they are required to be licensed<sup>5</sup> under that Part<sup>6</sup>.

Part 3 of the 2004 Act applies to a house if:

- 113 (a) it is in an area that is for the time being designated<sup>7</sup> as subject to selective licensing; and
- 114 (b) the whole of it is occupied either under a single tenancy or licence<sup>8</sup> that is not an exempt tenancy or licence<sup>9</sup>, or under two or more tenancies or licences in respect of different dwellings contained in it, none of which is an exempt tenancy or licence<sup>10</sup>.

These provisions are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>11</sup>.

1    Ie the Housing Act 2004 Pt 3 (ss 79-100). Whereas Pt 2 (ss 55-78) (see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 468 et seq) introduces a mandatory licensing scheme for certain houses in multiple occupation, Pt 3 provides a power for selective licensing aimed at dealing with particular problems in a particular area.

2    For these purposes, 'house' means a building or part of a building consisting of one or more dwellings; and references to a house include (where the context permits) any yard, garden, outhouses and appurtenances belonging to, or usually enjoyed with, it (or any part of it): ibid s 99. 'Dwelling' means a building or part of a building occupied or intended to be occupied as a separate dwelling: s 99.

3    For the meaning of 'local housing authority' for these purposes see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 200 note 1.

4    See the Housing Act 2004 s 79(2); and the text and notes 7-10 infra.

5    See ibid s 85(1); and HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 503.

6    Ibid s 79(1).

7    Ie under ibid s 80: see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 499.

8    As to the meanings of 'tenancy' and 'licence' for these purposes see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 211 note 6.

9    Ie under the Housing Act 2004 s 79(3) or s 79(4): see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 498.

(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE

(i) High Court and County Courts

56. Jurisdiction.

Regardless of domicile, in proceedings which have as their object rights in rem in immovable property or tenancies of immovable property, the courts of the member state of the European Union in which the property is situated have exclusive jurisdiction; but in proceedings which have as their object tenancies of immovable property concluded for temporary private use for a maximum period of six consecutive months, the courts of the member state in which the defendant is domiciled also have jurisdiction, provided that the tenant is a natural person and that the landlord and the tenant are domiciled in the same member state<sup>1</sup>.

Subject to exceptions not relevant to the law of landlord and tenant<sup>2</sup>, a county court has jurisdiction to hear and determine any claim founded on contract or tort<sup>3</sup>. It also has jurisdiction to hear and determine a claim for the recovery of a sum recoverable by virtue of any enactment for the time being in force, if it is not provided by that or any other enactment that such sums are only to be recoverable in the High Court or are only to be recoverable summarily<sup>4</sup>. Where a claim exceeds the county court limit<sup>5</sup>, the claimant may abandon the excess so as to give the court jurisdiction<sup>6</sup>; and in other cases the parties may agree to give the court jurisdiction<sup>7</sup>.

A county court has jurisdiction to hear and determine any claim for the recovery of land<sup>8</sup> and any claim in which the title to any hereditament comes in question<sup>9</sup>. It also has all the jurisdiction of the High Court to hear and determine proceedings for the specific performance, or for the rectification, delivery up or cancellation, of any agreement for the sale, purchase or lease of any property, where, in the case of a sale or purchase, the purchase money, or in the case of a lease, the value of the property, does not exceed the county court limit<sup>10</sup>.

In general, a claim for money in which county courts have jurisdiction may only be commenced in the High Court if the financial value of the claim is more than £15,000<sup>11</sup>; and proceedings which include a claim for damages in respect of personal injuries may only be commenced in the High Court if the financial value of the claim is £50,000 or more<sup>12</sup>.

Various statutory provisions confer exclusive jurisdiction on the county court in landlord and tenant matters<sup>13</sup>. With regard to other matters provision is made for the High Court and the county court to exercise concurrent jurisdiction<sup>14</sup>. Jurisdiction in specific matters is discussed in this title in the context in which it arises.

UPDATE

56 Jurisdiction

TEXT AND NOTE 11--Proceedings may now not be started in the High Court unless the value of the claim is more than £25,000: SI 1991/724 art 4A (as substituted).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(i) High Court and County Courts/57. Procedure; in general.

57. Procedure; in general.

Except where the county court does not have jurisdiction<sup>1</sup>, landlord and tenant claims<sup>2</sup> should normally be brought in the county court; only exceptional circumstances justify starting a claim in the High Court<sup>3</sup>. If a claimant starts a claim in the High Court and the court decides that it should have been started in the county court, the court will normally either strike the claim out or transfer it to the county court on its own initiative. This is likely to result in delay and the court will normally disallow the costs of starting the claim in the High Court and of any transfer<sup>4</sup>. Circumstances which may, in an appropriate case, justify starting a claim in the High Court are if:

- 115 (1) there are complicated disputes of fact; or 116 (2) there are points of law of general importance<sup>5</sup>.

The value of the property and the amount of any financial claim may be relevant circumstances, but these factors alone will not normally justify starting the claim in the High Court<sup>6</sup>. A landlord and tenant claim started in the High Court must be brought in the Chancery Division<sup>7</sup>.

The details of the procedure for claims under specific statutory provisions are set out in this title in the contexts in which they arise<sup>8</sup>. The procedure for possession claims is set out in a later part of the title<sup>9</sup>.

There are pre-action protocols<sup>10</sup> relating to housing disrepair claims<sup>11</sup> and residential possession claims by social landlords which are based solely on claims for rent arrears<sup>12</sup>.

1 As to the jurisdiction of the county court see PARA 56 ante.

2 'Landlord and tenant claim' means a claim under (1) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927; (2) the Leasehold Property (Repairs) Act 1938; (3) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954; (4) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985; or (5) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987: CPR 56.1(1). A practice direction may set out special provisions with regard to any particular category of landlord and tenant claim: CPR 56.1(2). As to the procedure for starting claims see generally CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 116 et seq.

3 Practice Direction--Landlord and Tenant Claims and Miscellaneous Provisions about Land PD 56 para 2.2. The claim must be started in the county court for the district in which the land is situated unless CPR 56.2(2) applies or an enactment provides otherwise: CPR 56.2(1). The claim may be started in the High Court if the claimant files with his claim form a certificate stating the reasons for bringing the claim in that court verified by a statement of truth in accordance with CPR 22.1(1): CPR 56.2(2). As to statements of truth see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 613 et seq. For the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 660 note 20 post.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/58. Jurisdiction of leasehold valuation tribunals.

(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals

58. Jurisdiction of leasehold valuation tribunals.

Any jurisdiction conferred on a leasehold valuation tribunal by or under any enactment is exercisable by a rent assessment committee constituted in accordance with the relevant provisions<sup>1</sup> of the Rent Act 1977<sup>2</sup>. When so constituted for exercising any such jurisdiction a rent assessment committee is known as a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>3</sup>.

Exclusive jurisdiction is conferred on a leasehold valuation tribunal in relation to a number of landlord and tenant matters<sup>4</sup>. That jurisdiction is discussed in this title in the contexts in which it arises.

Where in any proceedings before a court there falls for determination a question falling within the jurisdiction of a leasehold valuation tribunal, the court:

- 117 (1) may by order transfer to a leasehold valuation tribunal so much of the proceedings as relate to the determination of that question; and
- 118 (2) may then dispose of all or any remaining proceedings, or adjourn the disposal of all or any remaining proceedings pending the determination of that question by the leasehold valuation tribunal, as it thinks fit<sup>5</sup>.

When the leasehold valuation tribunal has determined the question, the court may give effect to the determination in an order of the court<sup>6</sup>. Rules of court may prescribe the procedure to be followed in a court in connection with or in consequence of such a transfer<sup>7</sup>.

1 le in accordance with the Rent Act 1977 s 65, Sch 10 (as amended): see PARA 910 post.

2 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 173(1).

3 Ibid s 173(2). Rent assessment committees, residential property tribunals and leasehold valuation tribunals have now been brought together under one umbrella service, known as the Residential Property Tribunal Service. As to residential property tribunals see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARAS 187-188.

5 Ibid s 174, Sch 12 para 3(1).

6 Ibid Sch 12 para 3(2).

7 Ibid Sch 12 para 3(3). If a question is ordered to be transferred to a leasehold valuation tribunal for determination under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 31C (repealed subject to transitional provisions) the court will: (1) send notice of the transfer to all parties to the claim; and (2) send to the leasehold valuation tribunal: (a) copies certified by the district judge of all entries in the records of the court relating to the question; (b) the order of transfer; and (c) all documents filed in the claim relating to the question: see Practice Direction--Landlord And Tenant Claims and Miscellaneous Provisions about Land PD 56 para 6.1.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/59. Procedure; in general.

59. Procedure; in general.

The appropriate national authority<sup>1</sup> may make regulations<sup>2</sup> about the procedure of leasehold valuation tribunals ('procedure regulations')<sup>3</sup>. Procedure regulations may:

- 119 (1) include provision:
- 4. (a) about the form of applications to leasehold valuation tribunals;
  - 5. (b) about the particulars that must be contained in such applications<sup>4</sup>;
  - 6. (c) requiring the service of notices of such applications<sup>5</sup>; and
  - 7. (d) for securing consistency where numerous applications are or may be brought in respect of the same or substantially the same matters<sup>6</sup>;
- 120 (2) include provision for the holding of a pre-trial review on the application of a party to proceedings or on the motion of a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>7</sup>;
  - 121 (3) provide for the exercise of the functions of a leasehold valuation tribunal in relation to, or at, a pre-trial review by a single member of the panel<sup>8</sup> who is qualified<sup>9</sup> to exercise them<sup>10</sup>;
  - 122 (4) prescribe the procedure to be followed in a leasehold valuation tribunal consequent on a transfer<sup>11</sup> by a court<sup>12</sup>;
  - 123 (5) include provision enabling persons to be joined as parties to proceedings<sup>13</sup>;
  - 124 (6) include provision empowering leasehold valuation tribunals to dismiss applications or transferred proceedings, in whole or in part, on the ground that they are:
- 5
- 8. (a) frivolous or vexatious; or
  - 9. (b) otherwise an abuse of process<sup>14</sup>;
- 125 (7) include provision for the determination of applications or transferred proceedings without an oral hearing<sup>15</sup>;
  - 126 (8) provide for determinations without an oral hearing by a single member of the panel<sup>16</sup>;
  - 127 (9) include provision requiring the payment of fees in respect of an application or transfer of proceedings to, or oral hearing by, a leasehold valuation tribunal in specified cases<sup>17</sup>;
  - 128 (10) empower a leasehold valuation tribunal to require a party to proceedings to reimburse any other party to the proceedings the whole or part of any fees paid by him<sup>18</sup>;
  - 129 (11) provide for the reduction or waiver of fees by reference to the financial resources of the party by whom they are to be paid or met<sup>19</sup>;
  - 130 (12) provide for decisions of leasehold valuation tribunals to be enforceable, with the permission of a county court, in the same way as orders of such a court<sup>20</sup>.

1 'The appropriate national authority' means the Secretary of State, as respects England, and the National Assembly for Wales, as respects Wales: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 179(1). As to references to the Assembly see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

2 Regulations under ibid s 174, Sch 12 (see heads (1)-(12) in the text) may make different provision for different areas: s 178(2). Regulations under any provision of Pt 2 (ss 71-179) (as amended): (1) may include incidental, supplementary, consequential and transitional provision; (2) may make provision generally or only in relation to specified cases; and (3) may make different provision for different purposes: s 178(1). Any power to make such regulations is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 178(3). Regulations may not be made by the Secretary of State under Sch 12 para 9(3)(b) (see note 17 infra) or Sch 12 para 10(3)(b) (see PARA 71 post) unless a draft of the instrument containing them has been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 178(4). Otherwise, regulations made under Sch 12 are subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 178(5).

In the exercise of the power to make such regulations, the Secretary of State has made the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099 (as amended), which came fully into force on 31 October 2003 and apply in relation to any application made, or proceedings transferred from a court, to a leasehold valuation tribunal in respect of premises in England on or after (a) in the case of an application under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 s 21 (as amended) (see PARA 1530 post), 31 October 2003; (b) in the case of an application under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 168(4) (see PARA 613 post), 28 February 2005; and (c) in any other case, 30 September 2003: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 1 (amended by SI 2004/3098). The National Assembly for Wales has made the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681 (as amended), which came into force on 31 March 2004 and apply in relation to any application made, or proceedings transferred from a court, to a leasehold valuation tribunal in respect of premises in Wales on or after (i) in the case of an application under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 168(4) (see PARA 613 post), 31 May 2005; (ii) in any other case, 31 March 2004: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 2 (amended by SI 2005/1356). Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/60. Particulars of applications; notice of application by the tribunal.

60. Particulars of applications; notice of application by the tribunal.

The particulars to be included with an application<sup>1</sup> are:

- 131 (1) the name and address of the applicant<sup>2</sup>;
- 132 (2) the name and address of the respondent<sup>3</sup>;
- 133 (3) the name and address of any landlord or tenant of the premises to which the application relates;
- 134 (4) the address of the premises to which the application relates; and
- 135 (5) a statement that the applicant believes that the facts stated in the application are true<sup>4</sup>.

In specified cases, additional particulars and documents must be included<sup>5</sup>.

Any of the prescribed requirements may be dispensed with or relaxed if the tribunal<sup>6</sup> is satisfied that:

- 136 (a) the particulars and documents included with an application are sufficient to enable the application to be determined; and
- 137 (b) no prejudice will, or is likely to, be caused to any party to the application<sup>7</sup>.

On receipt of an application:

- 138 (i) other than an application made under Part IV of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>8</sup>, the tribunal must send a copy of the application and each of the documents accompanying it to each person named in it as a respondent<sup>9</sup>;
- 139 (ii) relating to service charges, administration charges and estate charges<sup>10</sup>, the tribunal must give notice of the application to the secretary of any recognised tenants' association<sup>11</sup> mentioned in the particulars included in the application and to any person, whose name and address the tribunal has, who the tribunal considers is likely to be significantly affected by the application<sup>12</sup>;
- 140 (iii) the tribunal may give notice to any other person it considers appropriate<sup>13</sup>.

Any notice given under head (ii) or head (iii) above must include a statement that any person may make a request to the tribunal<sup>14</sup> to be joined as a party to the proceedings with details as to how such a request can be made<sup>15</sup>. Any notice so given may be given by local advertisement<sup>16</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'application' means, other than for the purposes of reg 1 (see PARA 59 note 2 ante), reg 20 (see PARA 72 post) and reg 25 (revocation and saving provisions) of the relevant regulations, (1) an application to a tribunal of a description specified in Sch 1 to those regulations; or (2) a transferred application; and 'transferred application' means so much of proceedings before a court as relate to a question falling within the jurisdiction of a tribunal as have been transferred to the tribunal for determination by order of the court: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 2(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 2(1).

A fee is payable for specified applications: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 3; the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 3; and see eg paras 345 note 13, 351 note 2 post. As to waiver and reduction of fees see PARA 69 post.

2 For these purposes, 'applicant' means (1) the person making an application to a tribunal; or (2) the person who is the claimant or applicant in proceedings before a court which are transferred by order of the court to a tribunal: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 2(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 2(1).

3 For these purposes, 'respondent' means (1) the person against whom an applicant seeks an order or determination from a tribunal; or (2) the person who is the defendant or respondent in proceedings before a court which are transferred by order of the court to a tribunal: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 2(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 2(1).

4 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(1).

5 See the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(2)-(7A), Schs 1, 2 (as amended); the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(2)-(7A), Schs 1, 2 (as amended). These requirements are set out in notes to the appropriate paragraphs in this title in the contexts in which they arise: see eg paras 149 note 3, 383 note 18, 613 note 15, 1506 note 6, 1726 note 5 post.

6 For these purposes, 'tribunal' means a leasehold valuation tribunal: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 2(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 2(1).

7 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(8); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(8).

8 Is an application under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt IV (ss 35-40) (as amended): see PARAS 149-154 post. The applicant is responsible for giving notice of such applications: see PARA 149 note 4 post.

9 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 5(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 5(1).

10 Is an application of a description specified in Sch 1 para 2 to the relevant regulations.

11 For these purposes, 'recognised tenants' association' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 29 (as amended) (see PARA 327 post): Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 2(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 2(1).

12 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 5(2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 5(2).

13 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 5(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 5(3).

14 Is under reg 6 of the relevant regulations: see note 15 infra.

15 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 5(4); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 5(4).

Any person may make a request to the tribunal to be joined as a party to the proceedings and any such request may be made without notice and must specify whether the person making the request wishes to be treated as an applicant or a respondent to the application: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 6(1), (2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 6(1), (2). The tribunal may grant or refuse such a request and must, as soon as possible after reaching its decision on the request, notify the person making it of the decision and the reasons for it and send a copy of the notification to the applicant and the respondent: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 6(3), (4); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 6(3), (4). Any person whose request is granted is to be treated as an applicant or respondent, as the case may be, for the purposes of regs 8-18, 20 and 24 of the relevant regulations (see PARA 61 et seq post); and in those regulations, any reference to an applicant or a respondent is to be construed as including a person treated as such under these provisions and any reference to a party is to be construed as including any such person: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 6(5), (6); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 6(5), (6).

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/61. Representative applications and other provisions for securing consistency.

61. Representative applications and other provisions for securing consistency.

Where it appears to a tribunal<sup>1</sup> that numerous applications<sup>2</sup>;

- 141 (1) have been made in respect of the same or substantially the same matters; or
- 142 (2) include some matters which are the same or substantially the same, the tribunal may propose to determine only one of those applications ('the representative application') as representative of all of the applications on those matters which are the same or substantially the same ('the common matters'), and must give notice of the proposal to the parties to all such applications<sup>3</sup>. Such a notice must:

- 143 (a) specify the common matters;
- 144 (b) specify the application which the tribunal proposes to determine as the representative application;
- 145 (c) explain that the tribunal's decision on the common matters in the representative application will apply to the common matters in any application made by a person to whom notice has been so given;
- 146 (d) invite objections to the tribunal's proposal to determine the representative application; and
- 147 (e) specify the address to which objections may be sent and the date, being not less than 21 days after the date that the notice was sent, by which the objections must be received by the tribunal<sup>4</sup>.

Where no objection is received on or before the date specified in the notice:

- 148 (i) the tribunal must determine the representative application<sup>5</sup>;
- 149 (ii) the tribunal need not determine the matters mentioned in head (1) above in any other application made by a person to whom such a notice has been given; and
- 150 (iii) the decision of the tribunal in respect of the representative application must be recorded as the decision of the tribunal in respect of the common matters in any such other application<sup>6</sup>.

Where an objection is received on or before the date specified in the notice, heads (i) to (iii) above apply only to those applications in respect of which no objection was made and the application in respect of which an objection was made may be determined together with the representative application<sup>7</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/62. Subsequent applications.

62. Subsequent applications.

If, after a representative application<sup>1</sup> has been determined, a subsequent application is made which includes any of the common matters on which the tribunal<sup>2</sup> has made a decision in its determination of the representative application, and the applicant<sup>3</sup> is a person to whom a notice of the proposal to determine only the representative application<sup>4</sup> was given, the tribunal must give notice to the parties to the subsequent application of:

- 151 (1) the matters which, in the opinion of the tribunal, are the common matters in the subsequent application and the representative application;
- 152 (2) the decision recorded in respect of the common matters in the representative application;
- 153 (3) the date on which notice of the proposal to determine only the representative application<sup>5</sup> was given to the applicant;
- 154 (4) the tribunal's proposal to record the tribunal's decision on the common matters in the subsequent application in identical terms to the decision in the representative application;
- 155 (5) the address to which objections to the tribunal's proposal may be sent and the date, being not less than 21 days after the date that the notice was sent, by which such objections must be received by the tribunal; and
- 156 (6) a statement that any objection must include the grounds on which it is made and, in particular, whether it is alleged that the notice mentioned in head (3) above was not received by the person making the objection<sup>6</sup>.

Where no objection is received on or before the date specified in the notice, the tribunal need not determine the matters mentioned in head (1) above and the decision of the tribunal in respect of the common matters in the representative application must be recorded as the decision of the tribunal in respect of the common matters in the subsequent application<sup>7</sup>.

Where an objection is received to the tribunal's proposal on or before the date specified in the notice, the tribunal must consider the objection when determining the subsequent application and if it dismisses the objection, it may record the decision mentioned in head (2) above as the decision of the tribunal in the subsequent application<sup>8</sup>.

If, after a representative application has been determined, a subsequent application is made which includes any of the common matters on which the tribunal has made a decision in its determination of the representative application, and the applicant is not a person to whom a notice of the proposal to determine only the representative application<sup>9</sup> was given, the tribunal must give notice to the parties to the subsequent application of:

- 157 (a) the matters which, in the opinion of the tribunal, are the common matters in the subsequent application and the representative application;
- 158 (b) the decision recorded in respect of those common matters in the representative application;
- 159 (c) the tribunal's proposal to record its decision on the common matters in the subsequent application in identical terms to the decision in the representative application; and
- 160 (d) the address to which objections to the tribunal's proposal may be sent and the date, being not less than 21 days after the date that the notice was sent, by which such objections must be received by the tribunal<sup>10</sup>.

Where no objection is received on or before the date specified in the notice, the tribunal need not determine the matters mentioned in head (a) above and the decision of the tribunal in respect of the common matters in the representative application must be recorded as the decision of the tribunal in respect of the common matters in the subsequent application<sup>11</sup>. Where an objection is received to the tribunal's proposal on or before the date specified in the notice the tribunal must determine<sup>12</sup> the application<sup>13</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/63. Information, notices and documents.

63. Information, notices and documents.

A leasehold valuation tribunal may serve a notice requiring any party to proceedings before it to give to the tribunal any information which the tribunal may reasonably require<sup>1</sup>. The information must be given to the tribunal within such period, not being less than 14 days, from the service of the notice as is specified in the notice<sup>2</sup>. A person commits an offence if he fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with a notice so served on him<sup>3</sup> and a person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>4</sup>.

Where any notice or other document is required<sup>5</sup> to be given or sent to a person by the tribunal<sup>6</sup>, it is sufficient compliance with the requirement if:

- 161 (1) it is delivered or sent by pre-paid post to that person at his usual or last known address;
- 162 (2) it is sent to that person by fax or other means of electronic communication which produces a text of the document;
- 163 (3) where that person has appointed an agent or representative to act on his behalf, it is delivered or sent by pre-paid post to the agent or representative at the address of the agent or representative supplied to the tribunal or it is sent to the agent or representative by fax or other means of electronic communication which produces a text of the document<sup>7</sup>; but a notice or other document may be sent by fax or other means of electronic communication only if that person or his agent has given his consent<sup>8</sup>. A notice or other document sent by such means is regarded as sent when the text of it is received in legible form<sup>9</sup>.

Where an intended recipient:

- 164 (a) cannot be found after all diligent inquiries have been made;
- 165 (b) has died and has no personal representative; or
- 166 (c) is out of the United Kingdom<sup>10</sup>, or for any other reason a notice or other document cannot readily be given or sent in accordance with the relevant regulations, the tribunal may either dispense with the giving or sending of the notice or other document or may give directions for substituted service in such other form, whether by advertisement in a newspaper or otherwise, or such other manner as the tribunal thinks fit<sup>11</sup>.

Before the date of the hearing, the tribunal must take all reasonable steps to ensure that each of the parties is given:

- 167 (i) a copy of any document relevant to the proceedings, or sufficient extracts from or particulars of the document, which has been received from any other party, other than a document already in his possession or one of which he has previously been supplied with a copy; and
- 168 (ii) a copy of any document which embodies the results of any relevant inquiries made by or for the tribunal for the purposes of the proceedings<sup>12</sup>.

At a hearing, if a party has not previously received a relevant document or a copy of, or sufficient extracts from or particulars of, a relevant document, then unless:

- 169 (A) that person consents to the continuation of the hearing; or
- 170 (B) the tribunal considers that that person has a sufficient opportunity to deal with the matters to which the document relates without an adjournment of the hearing, the tribunal must adjourn the hearing for a period which it considers will give that person a sufficient opportunity to deal with those matters<sup>13</sup>.

64. Dismissal of frivolous etc applications.

Where either:

- 171 (1) it appears to a tribunal<sup>1</sup> that an application<sup>2</sup> is frivolous or vexatious or otherwise an abuse of process of the tribunal; or
- 172 (2) the respondent<sup>3</sup> to an application makes a request to the tribunal to dismiss an application as frivolous or vexatious or otherwise an abuse of the process of the tribunal, the tribunal may dismiss the application, in whole or in part<sup>4</sup>; but before so dismissing an application, the tribunal must give notice to the applicant<sup>5</sup>. Any such notice must state:

- 173 (a) that the tribunal is minded to dismiss the application;
- 174 (b) the grounds on which it is minded to dismiss the application;
- 175 (c) the date, being not less than 21 days after the date that the notice was sent, before which the applicant may request to appear before and be heard by the tribunal on the question whether the application should be dismissed<sup>6</sup>.

An application may not be dismissed unless:

- 176 (i) the applicant makes no request to the tribunal before the date mentioned in head (c) above; or
- 177 (ii) where the applicant makes such a request, the tribunal has heard the applicant and the respondent, or such of them as attend the hearing, on the question of the dismissal of the application<sup>7</sup>.

PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/65. Pre-trial review.

65. Pre-trial review.

The tribunal<sup>1</sup> may, whether on its own initiative or at the request of a party, hold a pre-trial review in respect of an application<sup>2</sup>. The tribunal must give the parties not less than 14 days' notice, or such shorter notice as the parties agree to, of the date, time and place of the pre-trial review<sup>3</sup>.

At the pre-trial review the tribunal must:

- 178 (1) give any direction that appears to the tribunal necessary or desirable for securing the just, expeditious and economical disposal of proceedings;
- 179 (2) endeavour to secure that the parties make all such admissions and agreements as ought reasonably to be made by them in relation to the proceedings; and
- 180 (3) record in any order made at the pre-trial review any such admission or agreement or any refusal to make such admission or agreement<sup>4</sup>.

The functions of the tribunal in relation to, or at, a pre-trial review may be exercised by any single member of the panel<sup>5</sup> who is qualified to exercise them<sup>6</sup>.

The tribunal may postpone or adjourn a pre-trial review either on its own initiative or at the request of a party<sup>7</sup>.

RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/66. Determination without a hearing.

66. Determination without a hearing.

A tribunal<sup>1</sup> may determine an application<sup>2</sup> without an oral hearing, in accordance with the following provisions, if:

- 181 (1) it has given to both the applicant<sup>3</sup> and the respondent<sup>4</sup> not less than 28 days' notice in writing of its intention to proceed without an oral hearing; and
- 182 (2) neither the applicant nor the respondent has made a request to the tribunal to be heard;

but this is without prejudice to the applicant's or the respondent's right<sup>5</sup> to make a subsequent request to be heard or to the tribunal's right<sup>6</sup> to give subsequent notice that it intends to determine the application at a hearing<sup>7</sup>.

The tribunal must:

- 183 (a) notify the parties that the application is to be determined without an oral hearing;
- 184 (b) invite written representations on the application;
- 185 (c) set time limits for sending any written representations to the tribunal; and
- 186 (d) set out how the tribunal intends to determine the matter without an oral hearing<sup>8</sup>.

At any time before the application is determined:

- 187 (i) the applicant or the respondent may make a request to the tribunal to be heard; or
- 188 (ii) the tribunal may give notice to the parties that it intends to determine the application at a hearing<sup>9</sup> in accordance with the relevant regulation<sup>10</sup>.

Where a request is made or a notice is given under head (i) or head (ii) above, the application must be determined at a hearing<sup>11</sup>.

The functions of the tribunal in relation to an application to be determined without an oral hearing may be exercised by a single member of the panel<sup>12</sup> if he was appointed to that panel by the Lord Chancellor<sup>13</sup>.

67. Hearings.

A hearing must<sup>1</sup> be on the date and at the time and place appointed by the tribunal<sup>2</sup>; and the tribunal must give notice to the parties of the appointed date, time and place of the hearing<sup>3</sup>. Such notice must normally be given not less than 21 days, or such shorter period as the parties may agree, before the appointed date<sup>4</sup>, but in exceptional circumstances the tribunal may, without the agreement of the parties, give less than 21 days' notice of the appointed date, time and place of the hearing. Any such notice must be given as soon as possible before the appointed date and the notice must specify what the exceptional circumstances are<sup>5</sup>.

The tribunal may arrange that an application is to be heard together with one or more other applications<sup>6</sup>.

A hearing must be in public unless, in the particular circumstances of the case, the tribunal decides that a hearing or part of a hearing is to be held in private<sup>7</sup>.

At the hearing:

- 189 (1) the tribunal must determine the procedure, subject to the relevant regulations, and the order in which the persons appearing before it are to be heard;
- 190 (2) a person appearing before the tribunal may do so either in person or by a representative authorised by him, whether or not that representative is a barrister or a solicitor; and
- 191 (3) a person appearing before the tribunal may give evidence on his own behalf, call witnesses, and cross-examine any witnesses called by any other person appearing<sup>8</sup>.

If a party does not appear at a hearing, the tribunal may proceed with the hearing if it is satisfied that notice has been given to that party in accordance with the relevant regulations<sup>9</sup>.

The tribunal may postpone or adjourn a hearing either on its own initiative or at the request of a party<sup>10</sup>. Where a postponement or adjournment has been requested the tribunal may not postpone or adjourn the hearing except where it considers it is reasonable to do so having regard to:

- 192 (a) the grounds for the request;
- 193 (b) the time at which the request is made; and
- 194 (c) the convenience of the other parties<sup>11</sup>.

The tribunal must give reasonable notice of any postponed or adjourned hearing to the parties<sup>12</sup>.

A member of the Council on Tribunals<sup>13</sup>, who is acting in that capacity, may attend any hearings held, whether in public or private, in accordance with the relevant regulations<sup>14</sup>.

68. Inspections.

- 195 (1) the house, premises or area which is the subject of the application<sup>2</sup>; or
- 196 (2) any comparable house, premises or area to which its attention is directed<sup>3</sup>.

The making of, and attendance at, an inspection is subject to any necessary consent being obtained<sup>4</sup>. Subject to that, the tribunal must give the parties an opportunity to attend an inspection<sup>5</sup>.

Where an inspection is to be made, the tribunal must give notice to the parties<sup>6</sup>. Such a notice must state the date, time and place of the inspection and must be given not less than 14 days before that date<sup>7</sup>.

A member of the Council on Tribunals<sup>8</sup>, who is acting in that capacity, may attend any inspection for which the necessary consent has been obtained<sup>9</sup>.

Where an inspection is made after the close of a hearing, the tribunal may reopen the hearing on account of any matter arising from the inspection<sup>10</sup>. The tribunal must give reasonable notice of the date, time and place of the reopened hearing to the parties<sup>11</sup>.

Any of the requirements for notice set out above may be dispensed with or relaxed:

- 197 (a) with the consent of the parties; or
- 198 (b) if the tribunal is satisfied that the parties have received sufficient notice<sup>12</sup>.

TEXT AND NOTES 8, 9--SI 2003/2099 reg 21 substituted: SI 2008/2683.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/69. Fees.

69. Fees.

Where a court, by order, transfers to a tribunal<sup>1</sup> so much of any proceedings as relate to the determination of a question falling within the jurisdiction of the tribunal by virtue of a specified statutory provision<sup>2</sup>, the fee payable to the tribunal is the fee which would have been payable for an application<sup>3</sup> less the total amount of any fees paid by the applicant<sup>4</sup> to the court in respect of the proceedings on or before the date of that order<sup>5</sup>. Where the total amount of any fees paid to the court on or before the date of the order is equal to or more than the fee payable, no further fee is payable to the tribunal under this provision<sup>6</sup>.

A fee of £150 is payable for a hearing<sup>7</sup>. Where part of an application or transferred proceedings<sup>8</sup> is or will be determined at, or in accordance with, a hearing of a representative application<sup>9</sup> and part is to be determined at a separate hearing, the fee for the part which is to be heard separately is £150 less the total amount of any fees paid<sup>10</sup> by the applicant for that part of the application or transferred proceedings which is to be determined at, or in accordance with, the representative application<sup>11</sup>.

Any fee payable under the above provisions is due within 14 days of a written request for payment by the tribunal and must be sent to the address specified in that request<sup>12</sup>.

Subject to the following provisions, the applicant<sup>13</sup> is liable to pay any fee payable to a tribunal under the relevant fees regulations<sup>14</sup>.

Where an application is made or transferred proceedings are brought by more than one person, any fee payable for the application or transferred proceedings must be apportioned equally between those persons and each person is liable to pay one portion<sup>15</sup>; and where an application is made or transferred proceedings are brought by the tenant or the landlord of premises and the tenant or landlord is more than one person, those persons together are to be treated as one person for these purposes<sup>16</sup>.

Where two or more applications are heard together, other than applications which are heard with a representative application, any fee payable for the hearing must be apportioned equally between the applications and the applicant in each application is liable to pay one portion<sup>17</sup>.

Any fee payable for the hearing of a representative application and any application heard with the representative application must be apportioned equally between:

- 199 (1) the representative application;
- 200 (2) all other applications which, at the time of the request for payment of the fee, are to be determined in whole or in part in accordance with the representative application; and
- 201 (3) any application heard with the representative application, and the applicant in each application is liable to pay one portion of the fee<sup>18</sup>.

The amount payable by any person in respect of a fee must be calculated in accordance with the above provisions and by reference to the persons who are applicants on the date the application is made or the date of the request for payment issued by the tribunal<sup>19</sup>.

A person is not, however, liable to pay any fee due under the relevant fees regulations where on the relevant date<sup>20</sup> he or his partner<sup>21</sup> is in receipt of:

- 202 (a) either income support or housing benefit;
- 203 (b) an income-based jobseeker's allowance;
- 204 (c) a specified tax credit<sup>22</sup>;
- 205 (d) guarantee credit under the State Pensions Credit Act 2002; or
- 206 (e) a certificate which has been issued under the Funding Code<sup>23</sup> and which has not been revoked or discharged and which is in respect of the proceedings before the tribunal the whole or part of which have been transferred from the county court for determination by a tribunal<sup>24</sup>.

Where a person is not liable to pay a fee by virtue of heads (a) to (e) above, the following provisions apply:

- 207 (i) where more than one person is the applicant<sup>25</sup> and at least one of those persons is liable to pay a fee, the fee must be reduced rateably in accordance with the number of persons who would have been liable but for those heads; and
- 208 (ii) where more than one person is the applicant and at least one person is liable to pay a portion of a fee, that portion must be reduced rateably in accordance with the number of persons who would have been liable but for those heads<sup>26</sup>.

In relation to any proceedings in respect of which a fee is payable, a tribunal may require any party to the proceedings to reimburse any other party to the proceedings for the whole or part of any fees paid by him in respect of the proceedings<sup>27</sup>; but it may not require a party to make such reimbursement if, at the time the tribunal is considering whether or not to do so, the tribunal is satisfied that the party is in receipt of any of the benefits, the allowance or a certificate mentioned in heads (a) to (e) above<sup>28</sup>.

In any case where a fee which is payable<sup>29</sup> is not paid in accordance with the relevant fees regulations, the tribunal may not proceed further with the application to which the fee relates until the fee is paid<sup>30</sup>. Where a fee remains unpaid for a period of one month from the date on which it becomes due, the application<sup>31</sup> must be treated as withdrawn unless the tribunal is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds not to do so<sup>32</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tribunal' means a leasehold valuation tribunal: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 1(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 1(3).

2 ie by virtue of a provision falling within reg 3(1) or (3) of the relevant fees regulations. The specified statutory provisions are: (1) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 27A (as added) (determination of liability to pay a service charge: see PARA 351 post); (2) s 30A (as added), Schedule para 8(2)(b) (as substituted) (right to challenge the insurance premium: see PARA 365 post); (3) the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11 para 3 (variation of lease because of administration charge: see PARA 357 post); (4) Sch 11 para 5 (determination of liability to pay an administration charge: see PARA 358 post); (5) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20ZA (as substituted) (determination to dispense with consultation requirements see PARA 345 post); (6) Sch 11 para 8(2)(a) (as substituted and amended) (determination as to suitability of insurer: see PARA 365 post); (7) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as amended) (appointment of managers: see PARA 401 post); and (8) Pt IV (ss 35-40) (as amended) (variation of leases: see PARAS 149-154 post); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 3(1), (3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 3(1), (3).

3 For these purposes, 'application' means an application made to the tribunal under any of the provisions listed in note 2 supra: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 1(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 1(3).

4 For these purposes, 'applicant' means (1) the person making an application to a tribunal; or (2) the person who is the claimant or applicant in proceedings before a court which are transferred by order of the court to a tribunal: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 1(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 1(3).

5 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 4(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 4(1).

6 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 4(2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 4(2).

7 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5(1). For these purposes, 'hearing' means a hearing before a tribunal to determine one or more of the following; (1) an application; (2) transferred proceedings; or (3) a representative application, but, for the purposes of the payment of a fee for a hearing, does not include (a) a pre-trial review (see PARA 65 ante); or (b) a hearing to consider dismissing an application as frivolous or vexatious (see PARA 64 ante); and 'representative application' means an application dealt with as a representative application under reg 8 of the relevant procedure regulations (see PARA 61 ante): Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 1(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 1(3).

8 For these purposes, 'transferred proceedings' means proceedings which a court has transferred to a tribunal for determination: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 1(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 1(3).

10 In accordance with reg 7(5) of the relevant fees regulations: see the text to note 18 infra.

11 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5(2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5(2).

12 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 6(2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 6(2).

13 For these purposes, 'applicant' includes any person whose request to be joined as a party to the proceedings and treated as an applicant has been granted by the tribunal (see PARA 60 note 15 ante): Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(7); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(7).

14 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(1). This is subject to the provisions set out in the text and notes 15-28 infra: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(1).

16 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(3).

17 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(4); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(4).

18 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(5); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(5).

19 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 7(6); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 7(6).

20 For these purposes, 'relevant date' means (1) in the case of a fee payable for an application, the date of the application; (2) in the case of a fee payable where an application is transferred from a court, the date of the court order transferring proceedings to the tribunal; (3) in the case of a fee payable for a hearing, the date of the request for payment: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 8(4)(c); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 8(4)(c).

21 'Partner', in relation to a person, means (1) that person's spouse; (2) a person of the opposite sex who is living with that person as husband or wife; and (3) a person of the same sex living with that person in a relationship which has the characteristics of the relationship between husband and wife: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 8(4)(b); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 8(4)(b). Presumably this includes a civil partner.

22 Is a working tax credit under the Tax Credits Act 2002 Pt 1 (ss 1-48), where (1) either there is a disability element or severe disability element (or both) to the tax credit received by the person or his partner or the person or his partner is also in receipt of child tax credit; and (2) the gross annual income taken into account for the calculation of the working tax credit is £14,213 or less: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 8(2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 8(2).

23 As to the Funding Code see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARAS 39-40.

25 For these purposes 'applicant' includes any person, whose request to be joined as a party to the proceedings and treated as an applicant (see PARA 60 note 15 ante) has been granted by the tribunal: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 8(4)(a); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 8(4)(a).

26 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 8(3); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 8(3).

27 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 9(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 9(1).

28 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 9(2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 9(2).

29 Is under reg 4 or reg 5 of the relevant fees regulations: see the text and notes 1-28 supra.

30 Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 7(1); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 7(1).

70. Decisions.

A member of the Council on Tribunals<sup>1</sup>, who is acting in that capacity, may be present during, but may not take part in, a tribunal's<sup>2</sup> deliberations in respect of an application<sup>3</sup>.

The following provisions apply to a decision on the determination of an application by a tribunal or a single member, in the case of an application determined<sup>4</sup> without an oral hearing<sup>5</sup>. If a hearing was held, the decision may be given orally at the end of the hearing<sup>6</sup>; but a decision must, in every case, be recorded in a document as soon as possible after the decision has been made<sup>7</sup>. A decision so given or recorded need not record the reasons for the decision<sup>8</sup>; but where the above-mentioned document does not record the reasons for the decision, they must be recorded in a separate document as soon as possible after the decision has been recorded<sup>9</sup>. A document recording a decision, or the reasons for a decision, must be signed and dated by an appropriate person<sup>10</sup>. An appropriate person may, by means of a certificate signed and dated by him, correct any clerical mistakes in a document or any errors arising in it from an accidental slip or omission<sup>11</sup>. A copy of any document recording a decision, or the reasons for a decision, and a copy of any correction so certified, must be sent to each party<sup>12</sup>.

Any decision of the tribunal may, with the permission of the county court, be enforced in the same way as orders of such a court<sup>13</sup>.

TEXT AND NOTES 1-3--SI 2003/2099 reg 21 substituted: SI 2008/2683.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/71. Costs.

71. Costs.

A leasehold valuation tribunal may determine that a party to proceedings must pay the costs incurred by another party in connection with the proceedings in any circumstances where:

- 209 (1) he has made an application to the leasehold valuation tribunal which is dismissed as frivolous or vexatious or otherwise an abuse of process in accordance with the relevant procedure regulations<sup>1</sup>; or
- 210 (2) he has, in the opinion of the tribunal, acted frivolously, vexatiously, abusively, disruptively or otherwise unreasonably in connection with the proceedings<sup>2</sup>.

The amount which a party to proceedings may be ordered to pay in the proceedings by a determination under these provisions must not, however exceed £500 or such other amount as may be specified in procedure regulations<sup>3</sup>.

A person must not be required to pay costs incurred by another person in connection with proceedings before a leasehold valuation tribunal except by a determination under these provisions or in accordance with provision made by any other enactment<sup>4</sup>.

1 He in accordance with the regulations set out in PARA 64 ante.

2 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 174, Sch 12 para 10(1), (2).

3 Ibid Sch 12 para 10(3).

4 Ibid Sch 12 para 10(4). It has been judicially stated that the application of Sch 12 para 10(4) is to be limited by its context and the title of Sch 12 to the procedure of leasehold valuation tribunals and the enforcement of their determinations, and that properly construed, it does not prevent the recovery of costs incurred before leasehold valuation tribunals which are otherwise recoverable by way of service charge: see Canary Riverside Pte v Schilling (LRX/65/2005, 16 December 2005, unreported), Lands Tribunal, per Judge Michael Rich QC; and see Staghold Ltd v Takeda [2005] 3 EGLR 45, Central London county court.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/1. RELATIONSHIP OF LANDLORD AND TENANT/(6) JURISDICTION AND PROCEDURE/(ii) Leasehold Valuation Tribunals/72. Appeals.

72. Appeals.

A party to proceedings before a leasehold valuation tribunal may appeal to the Lands Tribunal from a decision of the leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>1</sup>; but the appeal may be made only with the permission of either the leasehold valuation tribunal or the Lands Tribunal<sup>2</sup> and it must be made within the time specified by rules<sup>3</sup> under the Lands Tribunal Act 1949<sup>4</sup>.

On the appeal the Lands Tribunal may exercise any power which was available to the leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>5</sup>. A decision of the Lands Tribunal on the appeal may be enforced in the same way as a decision of the leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>6</sup>.

The Lands Tribunal may not order a party to the appeal to pay costs incurred by another party in connection with the appeal unless he has, in the opinion of the Lands Tribunal, acted frivolously, vexatiously, abusively, disruptively or otherwise unreasonably in connection with the appeal<sup>7</sup>. In such a case the amount he may be ordered to pay must not exceed the maximum amount which a party to proceedings before a leasehold valuation tribunal may be ordered<sup>8</sup> to pay<sup>9</sup>.

No appeal lies from a decision of a leasehold valuation tribunal to the High Court by virtue of the relevant provision<sup>10</sup> of the Tribunals and Inquiries Act 1992<sup>11</sup>; and no case may be stated for the opinion of the High Court in respect of such a decision by virtue of that provision<sup>12</sup>. Judicial review of a decision of a leasehold valuation tribunal may be available but ought to be granted only in exceptional circumstances on the narrow grounds of jurisdictional error or procedural irregularity<sup>13</sup>.

Appeals from the Lands Tribunal on a point of law by a person aggrieved by its decision lie to the court<sup>14</sup> but a leasehold valuation tribunal is not a person aggrieved for those purposes<sup>15</sup>.

The procedure on the hearing of appeals is discussed elsewhere in this work<sup>16</sup>.

2 Ibid s 175(2). Where a party makes an application to a leasehold valuation tribunal for permission to appeal to the Lands Tribunal, the application must be made to the tribunal within the period of 21 days starting with the date on which the document which records the reasons for the decision (see PARA 70 ante) was sent to that party and a copy of the application must be served by the tribunal on every other party: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 20; Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 20.

An application to the Lands Tribunal for permission to appeal may only be made if permission has been refused by the leasehold valuation tribunal: see the Lands Tribunal Rules 1996, SI 1996/1022, r 5C(1) (r 5C added by SI 1997/1965; amended by SI 2003/2945; SI 2006/880). The application must be made within 14 days from the date on which the decision to refuse permission was sent to the applicant: Lands Tribunal Rules 1996, SI 1996/1022, r 5C(2) (as added and amended). The application for permission must contain (1) the name and address of the applicant; (2) the name and address of every respondent; (3) the grounds of appeal against the decision in respect of which permission to appeal is sought; (4) where the applicant is represented, the name, address and profession of the representative; and (5) the signature of the applicant or his representative and the date the application was signed (r 5C(3) (as added and amended)); and must be accompanied by (a) a copy of the decision against which permission to appeal is being sought; (b) a copy of the decision of the tribunal refusing permission to appeal; (c) the fee payable to the Lands Tribunal in respect of the proposed appeal (r 5C(4) (as added and amended)). The applicant must deliver or send the application for permission to appeal to the Lands Tribunal together with sufficient copies for service upon each respondent: r 5C(5) (as added and amended). Upon receiving an application for permission to appeal the registrar must (i) serve a copy of the application on each respondent; (ii) inform the applicant of the date on which this was done; and (iii) enter details of the application in the register of appeals: r 5C(6) (as added and amended). The registrar must, when serving a copy of the application, notify each respondent of the time limit, specified by the Lands Tribunal, within which any written representations relating to the application must be made to that tribunal: r 5C(7) (as added and amended).

The Lands Tribunal must determine an application for permission without a hearing unless it considers that there are special circumstances which make a hearing necessary or desirable; and the registrar must serve on the applicant and each respondent a notice recording the decision of that tribunal on the application for permission: see r 5D(1), (2) (added by SI 1997/1965; amended by SI 2003/2945). If the Lands Tribunal refuses permission to appeal the registrar must refund to the applicant the fee paid in respect of the appeal: Lands Tribunal Rules 1996, SI 1996/1022, r 5E (as so added and amended). If it grants permission to appeal it may do so on such conditions as it thinks fit: r 5F(1) (as so added and amended). The registrar must note in the register of appeals that the appeal is proceeding unless the applicant notifies him, within 14 days of the date of service of the notice recording the decision to grant permission, that he does not wish to proceed with the appeal: r 5F(2) (as so added and amended). He must serve notice on each respondent that the appeal is proceeding with details of the number of the appeal entered on the register which is to constitute the title of the appeal: r 5F(3) (as so added).

2. AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES

(1) DISTINCTION BETWEEN A LEASE AND AN AGREEMENT FOR LEASE

73. Leases.

An instrument in proper form by which the conditions of a contract of letting are finally ascertained, and which is intended to vest the right of exclusive possession in the tenant, either at once, if the term is to commence immediately, or at a future date, if the term is to commence subsequently, is a lease which takes effect from the date fixed for the commencement of the term without the necessity of actual entry by the tenant<sup>1</sup>.

An instrument is usually construed as a lease if it contains words of present demise<sup>2</sup>. Even where the instrument is called an 'agreement', and contains a stipulation for the subsequent granting of a formal lease<sup>3</sup>, it may be construed as a lease if the essential terms<sup>4</sup> are fixed, especially if possession is to be taken under it<sup>5</sup> and if the covenants which would be inserted in the lease are to be binding at once<sup>6</sup>.

In general, where there is a conflict between a lease and a prior agreement, the rights of the parties are governed by the lease<sup>7</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(2); and PARA 118 post. As to the form of leases see PARAS 100-103 post; as to the operation of an invalid lease as an agreement see PARA 117 post; and as to the essential terms of a lease see note 4 infra. A lease is not ordinarily regarded as an incumbrance within a recital by the vendor of seisin in unincumbered possession in fee simple: see District Bank Ltd v Webb [1958] 1 All ER 126, [1958] 1 WLR 148.

2 As the effect of the instrument is to be gathered from the language as a whole, words of present demise are not essential to a lease (Wright v Trezevant (1828) Mood & M 231); but, when they are inserted, they form the best indication of the parties' intention. there can be no claim for a breach of the landlord's undertaking to put the tenant into possession until the tenant is entitled to possession: see PARA 118 post. The words 'demise' or 'let' are the most usual words of present demise (see Barry v Nugent (1782) 3 Doug KB 179 ('doth demise'); Baxter d Abrahall v Browne (1775) 2 Wm BI 973 ('set and let')); but other words are effectual if they import an immediate letting (Maldon's Case (1584) Cro Eliz 33 ('you shall have a lease'); cf Doe d Jackson v Ashburner (1793) 5 Term Rep 163 ('shall enjoy')); and notwithstanding that they are expressed in the form of a covenant (Harrington v Wise (1596) Cro Eliz 486 (covenant that the landlord 'doth let'); Tisdale v Essex (1616) Hob 34; Drake v Munday (1631) Cro Car 207). A lease for three years or less is often made in the form 'agrees to let', but these words may operate by way of demise (Poole v Bentley (1810) 12 East 168; Staniforth v Fox (1831) 7 Bing 590; Doe d Pearson v Ries (1832) 8 Bing 178; Doe d Phillip v Benjamin (1839) 9 Ad & El 644 at 651; Alderman v Neate (1839) 4 M & W 704; Tarte v Darby (1846) 15 M & W 601; Furness v Bond (1888) 4 TLR 457; and see Doe d Green and Colcombe v Fidler (1795) Peake Add Cas 33), although such a lease may be styled an agreement or 'tenancy agreement'.

3 See Doe d Pearson v Ries (1832) 8 Bing 178; Pinero v Judson (1829) 6 Bing 206; Warman v Faithfull (1834) 5 B & Ald 1042. See also Maldon's Case (1584) Cro Eliz 33; Harrington v Wise (1596) Cro Eliz 486.

4 I.e the rent and mode of payment, the commencement and duration of the term, and the covenants: see Chapman v Towner (1840) 6 M & W 100. The stipulation for a formal lease may specify the covenants to be contained in it (Pinero v Judson (1829) 6 Bing 206; Warman v Faithfull (1834) 5 B & Ald 1042), or may define them by reference to another lease (Wilson v Chisholm (1831) 4 C & P 474; Doe d Pearson v Ries (1832) 8 Bing 178; Hancock v Caffyn (1832) 8 Bing 358), or may provide for 'usual covenants' (Barry v Nugent (1782) 3 Doug KB 179; Chapman v Bluck (1838) 4 Bing NC 187; Doe d Phillip v Benjamin (1839) 9 Ad & El 644; Curling v Mills (1843) 6 Man & G 173; but see Morgan d Dowding v Bissell (1810) 3 Taunt 65), or for usual covenants and other specified covenants (Doe d Walker v Groves (1812) 15 East 244; Hamerton v Stead (1824) 3 B & C 478). In such cases, provided the other terms are ascertained, the covenants are sufficiently ascertained for the instrument to operate as a lease, but not where the covenants are so referred to that further inquiry is necessary to ascertain them, as where they are to be covenants usual in a particular district (Morgan d Dowding v Bissell supra; Chapman v Towner (1840) 6 M & W 100), or in leases of a particular class (Doe d Morgan v Powell (1844) 7 Man & G 980 (mining lease)). As to usual covenants see PARA 83 post; and as to the contents of a prescribed clauses lease see PARA 126 post. For cases where an instrument is construed as an agreement, not as a lease, see PARA 75 post.

5 The circumstance that the tenant is to have immediate possession under the agreement is a strong indication that it is a present demise: Doe d Pearson v Ries (1832) 8 Bing 178; Hancock v Caffyn (1832) 8 Bing 358; Doe d Morgan v Powell (1844) 7 Man & G 980 at 991; Jones v Reynolds (1841) 1 QB 506 at 516. So, too, is the fact that he is already in possession: Doe d Phillip v Benjamin (1839) 9 Ad & El 644; Lovelock v Franklyn (1846) 8 QB 371. It favours the construction of the agreement as a lease if the term is to commence before the execution of the formal lease: Alderman v Neate (1839) 4 M & W 704; and see Doe d Walker v Groves (1812) 15 East 244.

6 A provision in the agreement that the rent is to be paid and the covenants observed until the execution of the lease tells strongly in favour of its being a present demise (Pinero v Judson (1829) 6 Bing 206; Wilson v Chisholm (1831) 4 C & P 474; Hancock v Caffyn (1832) 8 Bing 358; Doe d Bailey v Foster (1846) 3 CB 215 at 226 per Tindal CJ); and, as payment of rent would, if the agreement is executory, create a yearly tenancy, the argument for construing it as a lease is strengthened if the covenants are unsuitable to a yearly tenancy (Pinery v Judson supra).

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(1) DISTINCTION BETWEEN A LEASE AND AN AGREEMENT FOR LEASE/74. Leases which are not effective to create a legal estate.

74. Leases which are not effective to create a legal estate.

A lease cannot create a legal estate unless either it is by deed<sup>1</sup> or it takes effect in possession for a term not exceeding three years, whether or not the lessee is given power to extend the term, at the best rent that can reasonably be obtained without a fine<sup>2</sup>. A lease which does not create a legal estate may be enforced by the parties to it as if it were an agreement for a lease and subject to the same limitations as are applicable to an agreement<sup>3</sup>.

1 It is an instrument which satisfies the requirements of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 1 (as amended): see PARA 111 post; and DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS. In order to be fully effective, most leases granted for a term of more than seven years now require registration: see PARA 120 post; and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 827.

2 See the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 52(1), (2)(d), 54; and PARAS 101-102 post.

3 Parker v Taswell (1858) 2 De G & J 559; and see PARA 117 post.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(1) DISTINCTION BETWEEN A LEASE AND AN AGREEMENT FOR LEASE/75. Agreements for leases; tenancy agreements.

75. Agreements for leases; tenancy agreements.

An instrument which only binds one party to create and the other to accept a lease in the future is an agreement for a lease. Moreover, an instrument is construed as an agreement for a lease and not as a lease, notwithstanding that it contains words of present demise, if the provisions to be inserted in the lease are not finally ascertained<sup>1</sup>; or if from other indications it appears that it was not intended to take effect as a lease<sup>2</sup>, as, for example, where it is expressly provided that it is not to operate as a lease<sup>3</sup>; or where it is in the form of an agreement to grant a lease, and there are no indications that it is to operate as a lease<sup>4</sup>; or where the landlord is not yet in a position to demise<sup>5</sup>; or where certain things have to be done by the landlord before the lease is granted, such as the completion<sup>6</sup> or repair<sup>7</sup> or improvement<sup>8</sup> of the premises, or by the tenant, such as the obtaining of sureties<sup>9</sup>; or where possession<sup>10</sup>, or the commencement of the rent<sup>11</sup>, is postponed until a future date in order to allow the preparation of the lease. In all cases the question whether an agreement operates as a present demise, or only as an agreement for a lease, depends upon the intention of the parties<sup>12</sup>; and, even though it is only an agreement for a lease, if the tenant occupies under it, he is liable under the agreed covenants in respect of the time of his occupation<sup>13</sup>.

The distinction between a lease (creating a legal estate) on the one hand and an agreement for a lease (creating no legal estate) on the other hand has been obscured by the popular use of the word 'lease' to connote only a document which constitutes a deed and 'agreement' to connote other instruments; but an agreement for a lease can be (and by a corporate body often is) made by deed, whereas a lease properly so called need be made by deed only if the Law of Property Act 1925 so requires<sup>14</sup>. Where a demise is made by an oral agreement or by an informal instrument, the resulting lease is often described as a 'tenancy agreement'. This is especially the case in respect of periodic tenancies of residential premises or agricultural holdings<sup>15</sup>.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(1) DISTINCTION BETWEEN A LEASE AND AN AGREEMENT FOR LEASE/76. Enforcement of agreements for lease.

76. Enforcement of agreements for lease.

If a question as to the rights and liabilities of the parties to an agreement for a lease, or to a lease which is not effective to create a legal estate, arises in a court which has jurisdiction to order specific performance, and if the agreement between the parties is one of which specific performance will be ordered<sup>1</sup>, then the parties are treated as having the same rights and as being subject to the same liabilities as if a valid lease had been granted. Consequently, the landlord is entitled to distrain and the tenant is entitled as against the grantor to hold the premises for the agreed term<sup>2</sup>; and covenants may run with the reversion notwithstanding that there has been no lease by deed<sup>3</sup>. For example, where an enforceable contract has been made<sup>4</sup> for granting a lease for life<sup>5</sup>, or for years<sup>6</sup>, or (as it appears) of any incorporeal hereditaments<sup>7</sup>, both the landlord and the tenant under it are respectively entitled to enjoy and enforce the same rights in respect of the property agreed to be demised as if the lease contracted for had been duly granted<sup>8</sup>.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(1) DISTINCTION BETWEEN A LEASE AND AN AGREEMENT FOR LEASE/77. Limitations on the enforcement of agreements for lease.

77. Limitations on the enforcement of agreements for lease.

In consequence of the equitable doctrine that an agreement for a lease may be enforced as though a valid lease had been granted<sup>1</sup>, questions whether an instrument is a lease or an agreement for a lease do not often arise<sup>2</sup>. The equitable doctrine does not, however, apply where:

- 211 (1) the question arises in a court which has no jurisdiction to order specific performance, for example in a county court in the case of a contract which by reason of the value of the property is not within the equitable jurisdiction of the county court<sup>3</sup>;
- 212 (2) the circumstances are such that specific performance would not be ordered, as, for example, where the tenant has committed breaches of covenant and the landlord's power of re-entry has become exercisable<sup>4</sup>, or where the right to enforce the agreement has become barred<sup>5</sup>, or where the tenant has not fulfilled conditions which are to be performed before a lease is granted<sup>6</sup>.

Moreover, the doctrine does not affect the interests of persons who for valuable consideration and without notice of the agreement acquire any legal estate or interest in the land affected<sup>7</sup>.

An agreement for a lease, and a lease which fails to vest a legal term in the tenant, create an estate contract which is registrable<sup>8</sup>. If the estate contract is registered, a purchaser for value of a legal estate is affected with notice of it; but, if it is not registered before a purchaser for value acquires a legal estate, he is not affected with notice<sup>9</sup>.

1 See PARA 76 ante; and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 562.

2 See PARA 209 post.

3 An agreement for a lease of property is not treated as a lease in a claim in the county court where the value of the property exceeds the county court jurisdiction limit: see Foster v Reeves [1892] 2 QB 255, CA; Cornish v Brook Green Laundry Ltd [1959] 1 QB 394 at 411-412, [1959] 1 All ER 373 at 384-385, CA. The present limit is £30,000 unless all the parties consent: County Courts Act 1984 ss 23(d), 24 (as amended); County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1981, SI 1981/1123, art 2, Table (amended, but without affecting this limit, by SI 1991/724; SI 1991/2684). A defendant may, however, maintain an equitable defence to a possession claim in the county court, whatever the value of the property: see Kingswood Estate Co Ltd v Anderson [1963] 2 QB 169, [1962] 3 All ER 593, CA (where no counterclaim for specific performance was made); Rushton v Smith [1976] QB 480, [1975] 2 All ER 905, CA. See further COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 719. Subject to the provisions for transfer of the proceedings (or of the counterclaim) to the High Court, the county court has unlimited jurisdiction in respect of a counterclaim: see the County Courts Act 1984 s 41 (as amended) s 42 (as substituted); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 69.

8 See the Land Charges Act 1972 s 2(1), (4) Class C(iv); and LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARAS 628, 632. Where the title is registered, the contract should be protected by notice on the register: see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 995 et seq. An option to renew in a lease is likewise registrable: see Phillips v Mobil Oil Co Ltd [1989] 3 All ER 97, [1989] 1 WLR 888, CA. An estate contract is not overreached on sale under a trust of land: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 2(3)(iv); and REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 249. If a landlord agrees to grant a lease, or grants an option to purchase the reversion, the other party to the agreement is under no duty to register the agreement or option as an estate contract, and failure to register is no ground for reducing the damages for breach of contract by the landlord if he sells to a third person: Wright v Dean [1948] Ch 686, [1948] 2 All ER 415; Hollington Bros Ltd v Rhodes [1951] 2 All ER 578n. ## 78. Rights of tenants in possession.

A tenant under an agreement for a lease or under a lease which is not effective to create a legal estate has an equitable interest under his agreement with the landlord<sup>1</sup>, and, in addition, if he goes into possession and pays rent on a yearly basis, acquires a legal tenancy from year to year on the same terms and conditions as are contained in his agreement so far as those terms and conditions are applicable to a yearly tenancy<sup>2</sup>. The tenancy so acquired expires without any notice to quit upon the expiration of the intended term<sup>3</sup>.

1 Parker v Taswell (1858) 2 De G & J 559. Apart from the doctrine of Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 ChD 9, CA (see PARA 76 ante), the landlord may not distrain until a legal tenancy has arisen: see Dunk v Hunter (1882) 5 B & Ald 322.

2 Mann v Lovejoy (1826) Ry & M 355; Richardson v Gifford (1834) 1 Ad & El 52; and see Joel v Montgomery and Taylor Ltd [1967] Ch 272, [1966] 3 All ER 763 (having gone into possession and paid rent up to a future date, the defendant held to be a tenant and not a licensee; the National Conditions of Sale (17th Edn) condition 7 (purchaser in occupation before completion to be licensee) was inapplicable). As to what terms are applicable to a yearly tenancy see PARA 210 post. Such a tenancy is determinable by six months' notice: see Morgan v Dowding v Bissell (1810) 3 Taunt 65. Where the tenant enters and pays rent upon a weekly, monthly or other periodic basis, it seems that he acquires only a weekly, monthly or other periodic tenancy, regardless of the intended term of the invalid lease: see Adler v Blackman [1953] 1 QB 146, [1952] 2 All ER 945, CA (a case of holding over, as opposed to entry).

(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES

(i) Formal Requirements

79. Contract must be made in writing.

A contract made on or after 27 September 1989 for the sale or other disposition<sup>1</sup> of an interest in land<sup>2</sup> can only be made in writing and only by incorporating all the terms which the parties have expressly agreed in one document or, where contracts are exchanged, in each<sup>3</sup>. The terms may be incorporated in a document either by being set out in it or by reference to some other document<sup>4</sup>; and the document incorporating the terms or, where contracts are exchanged, one of the documents incorporating them but not necessarily the same one, must be signed by or on behalf of each party to the contract<sup>5</sup>.

The above provisions do not, however, apply in relation to a contract:

- 213 (1) to grant a short lease<sup>6</sup>;
- 214 (2) made in the course of a public auction; or
- 215 (3) regulated under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, other than a regulated mortgage contract<sup>7</sup>; and nothing in those provisions applies in relation to contracts made before 27 September 1989<sup>8</sup>.

Most agreements for lease will now be by way of formal contract since an exchange of letters will rarely satisfy the above requirements. If, however, all of the agreed terms are set out in a single letter or that letter expressly incorporates the stipulations of earlier identified letters and either that letter is signed by both parties or copies are signed by each party and exchanged, a contract will be created, provided that it appears, as a matter of construction, that the parties intended to be bound<sup>9</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'disposition' includes a conveyance and also a devise, bequest or an appointment of property contained in a will; and 'conveyance' includes a mortgage, charge, lease, assent, vesting declaration, vesting instrument, disclaimer, release and every other assurance of property or of an interest therein by any instrument, except a will: Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2(6) (applying the Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(ii)).

2 For these purposes, 'interest in land' means any estate, interest or charge in or over land: Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2(6) (amended by the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996 s 25(2), Sch 4).

3 Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 ss 2(1), 5(3), (4)(a). Section 2 (as amended) is of relevance only to executory contracts and has no application to contracts which have been completed: see Tootal Clothing Ltd v Guinea Properties Ltd (1992) 64 P & CR 452, [1992] 2 EGLR 80, CA.

4 Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2(2). The contract of sale must refer to the other document; it is insufficient simply for the other document to refer to the contract of sale (Record v Bell [1991] 4 All ER 471, [1991] 1 WLR 853); although a promise which does not comply with the requirements of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended) may be enforceable as a collateral contract (Record v Bell supra; and see Tootal Clothing Ltd v Guinea Properties Ltd (1992) 64 P & CR 452, [1992] 2 EGLR 80, CA); and it will sufficiently satisfy those requirements to incorporate a named set of conditions of sale by reference (B Ltd v T Ltd [1991] NPC 47).

5 Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2(3). A contract for the grant of a lease cannot be made by an exchange of letters unless all the terms are contained in one letter and agreed to by both parties; and, if, where contracts are exchanged, there is a discrepancy between the two documents, it would appear that no valid contract is created unless and until one of the documents is rectified so as to correspond with the other: see further PARA 80 post. Terms implied by law need not, however, be expressly agreed. An oral variation is ineffective unless it takes effect as a collateral contract independent of the contract of sale: see Record v Bell [1991] 4 All ER 471, [1991] 1 WLR 853. In relation to an option it is sufficient that the grant of the option satisfies the statutory formalities: Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch 537, [1991] 1 All ER 600. It does not matter, therefore, that the notice exercising the option is signed only by the person entitled to the benefit of the option.

6 le such a lease as is mentioned in the Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2): see PARA 101 post.

7 Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2(5) (amended by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (Consequential Amendments and Repeals) Order 2001, SI 2001/3649, art 317(1), (2)). Nothing in the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended) affects the creation of resulting, implied or constructive trusts: s 2(5).

9 As to contracts by correspondence generally see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 668.

(ii) Essential Terms of a Concluded Agreement

81. In general.

The statutory requirements as to the form of the contract<sup>1</sup> do not affect what are the terms which the parties must have expressly agreed and recorded<sup>2</sup> in order to create a contract. All essential terms<sup>3</sup> must be agreed; and a term is implied in the agreement for lease<sup>4</sup> that the lease, when granted, will contain the usual covenants<sup>5</sup>. An agreement for a lease must not contravene the legislation prohibiting sex, racial and disability discrimination<sup>6</sup>; and it will be void in so far as it:

- 216 (1) purports to exclude or modify the right of any person to be, or do any thing as, a member of an RTM company<sup>7</sup>;
- 217 (2) provides for the termination or surrender of the lease if the tenant becomes, or does any thing as, a member of an RTM company or if an RTM company does any thing; or
- 218 (3) provides for the imposition of any penalty or disability if the tenant becomes, or does any thing as, a member of an RTM company or if an RTM company does any thing<sup>8</sup>.

It will also be void to the extent that:

- 219 (a) it would otherwise have effect to exclude, modify or otherwise frustrate the operation of any provision of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995; or
- 220 (b) it provides for the termination or surrender of the tenancy, or the imposition on the tenant of any penalty, disability or liability, in the event of the operation of any provision of the 1995 Act; or
- 221 (c) it provides for any of the matters referred to in head (b) above and does so, whether expressly or otherwise, in connection with, or in consequence of, the operation of any provision of that Act<sup>9</sup>.

An agreement for a lease, even though signed by the intended landlord, will not bind him if he does not sign with the intention of contracting or if he does not deliver the agreement to the intended tenant<sup>10</sup>.

A tenant who accepts a tenancy agreement which does not create a legal estate<sup>11</sup> should register the agreement by notice on the register<sup>12</sup> or as an estate contract under the Land Charges Act 1972<sup>13</sup>, otherwise the agreement will not be binding on a purchaser for value of the legal estate<sup>14</sup>.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(ii) Essential Terms of a Concluded Agreement/82. Essential terms of agreement.

82. Essential terms of agreement.

The essential terms of an agreement for a lease are:

- 222 (1) the identification of the landlord and tenant<sup>1</sup>;
- 223 (2) the premises to be leased<sup>2</sup>;
- 224 (3) the commencement and duration of the term<sup>3</sup>; and
- 225 (4) the rent or other consideration to be paid<sup>4</sup>.

If these matters are ascertained to be offered and accepted, it is sufficient<sup>5</sup>. If any other terms are mentioned by one party, these must also be unconditionally accepted by the other party in order that there may be a concluded contract<sup>6</sup>. As long as such necessary terms have not been agreed to, or any additional term has been mentioned on one side and not unconditionally accepted on the other, the matter rests in negotiation and there is no concluded contract<sup>7</sup>. New terms may be added to an offer<sup>8</sup>, or the offer may be withdrawn at any time, as long as it has not been accepted<sup>9</sup>. As long as an offer remains open, the other party may, however, withdraw any term which he has sought to introduce and accept the offer unconditionally<sup>10</sup>. In an agreement for a lease certain terms are avoided or restricted by statute<sup>11</sup>, or are deemed by statute to be included in the agreement<sup>12</sup>.

1 Where the tenant deceives the landlord as to the tenant's identity and that identity is a vital element, the lease is void: see Sowler v Potter [1940] 1 KB 271, [1939] 4 All ER 478; but see Solle v Butcher [1950] 1 KB 671 at 691, [1949] 2 All ER 1107 at 1119, CA per Denning LJ. As to mistake as to person see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 704-706.

2 See Lancaster v De Trafford (1862) 31 LJ Ch 554.

3 The court will not imply a term that the lease is to commence at a reasonable time or at the date of the agreement: Marshall v Berridge (1881) 19 ChD 233, CA; Harvey v Pratt [1965] 2 All ER 786, [1965] 1 WLR 1025, CA; but cf Liverpool City Council v Walton Group plc [2002] 1 EGLR 149, [2001] All ER (D) 359 (Jul) (agreement which included contract to grant a 999 year lease was not void for uncertainty by containing no commencement date; either the agreement was to be interpreted as providing for the commencement date to be the date of execution of the lease or the uncertainty in respect of two dates only six weeks apart could be resolved by the tenant electing for the earlier date).

4 These were the terms which were essential for a memorandum in writing to satisfy the Law of Property Act 1925 s 40 (repealed) in relation to agreements made before 27 September 1989 and they are equally the essential terms of a contract made on or after that date. Where the agreement is entered into before 19 June 2006, the lease will not be a prescribed clauses lease for the purposes of the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 58A (as added): see r 58A(4)(c)(i) (as added); and PARA 100 post. Where the lease is to be a prescribed clauses lease, the agreement ought presumably to include the wording particulars specified in Sch 1A (as added) (see PARA 126 post) which will be required in the lease. For the meaning of 'prescribed clauses lease' see PARA 100 post.

5 There must be an offer capable of acceptance. Thus, where a local authority wrote to the unauthorised occupier of premises informing her that the authority 'had agreed to the monthly letting of the premises ... on the terms laid down by the valuers', it was held that 'acceptance' of the letter did not create a tenancy because the letter amounted to no more than an expression of willingness to make an offer to let the premises on a monthly basis when the valuers had decided what the appropriate terms were to be: Brent London Borough Council v O'Bryan (1992) 65 P & CR 258, [1993] 1 EGLR 59, CA.

6 See Rossiter v Miller (1878) 3 App Cas 1124 at 1151, HL where, for the purpose of the same distinction, Lord Blackburn use the terms 'cardinal' and 'essential': 'Though the parties may have agreed on all the cardinal points of the intended contract, yet, if some particulars essential to the agreement still remain to be settled afterwards, there is no contract. The parties, in such a case, are still only in negotiation'. The terms mentioned in heads (1)-(4) in the text are essential to any contract for a lease, and are the cardinal terms, as that expression is used in the above passage. Other terms proposed by either party are essential to the particular agreement: see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 667-675. All such other terms must be recorded in the contract: see PARA 79 ante.

In Sweet and Maxwell Ltd v Universal News Services Ltd [1964] 2 QB 699, [1964] 3 All ER 30, CA, an agreement for a lease to contain 'such other covenants and conditions as shall be reasonably required' was held to be sufficiently certain to be a concluded contract. See also Trustees of National Deposit Friendly Society v Beatties of London Ltd [1985] 2 EGLR 59. If the acceptance is conditional, the condition must be satisfied: White v M'Mahon (1886) 18 LR Ir 460. If an offer to let is made alternatively, the acceptance of either alternative concludes the contract: Lever v Koffler [1901] 1 Ch 543. ### 83. Usual covenants.

An agreement for a lease should specify the covenants and provisos which are to be inserted in the lease<sup>1</sup>. If it does not do so, the parties may require the insertion in it of the usual and proper covenants and provisos whether or not it is agreed that the lease is to contain those covenants and provisos<sup>2</sup>. What they are is in each case a question of fact to be decided upon an examination of the leading books of precedents<sup>3</sup>, or upon the evidence of conveyancers and others familiar with the practice generally, or with the practice in the particular district<sup>4</sup>, or on the particular estate, having regard to the nature of the property, the place where it is situated, and the purpose for which the premises are to be used<sup>5</sup>. There is always room for differences of opinion as to what the usual covenants are; and, therefore, a defendant to a claim for specific performance of an agreement for a lease is entitled to an opportunity to object to a claimant's proposals, even though he has not entered an appearance. It is ultimately for the judge to decide what covenants should be included<sup>6</sup>.

The covenants and provisos which may be regarded as usual in all cases are<sup>7</sup>:

- 226 (1) covenants by the tenant to pay rent, to pay taxes (except such as are ultimately charged by statute on the landlord)<sup>8</sup>, to keep and deliver up the premises in repair<sup>9</sup> and to allow the landlord to enter and view the state of repair<sup>10</sup>;
- 227 (2) the usual qualified covenant by the landlord for quiet enjoyment<sup>11</sup>; and
- 228 (3) a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent<sup>12</sup>.

1 The agreement may be for a lease, subject to such clauses as the landlord chooses to insert (Plunkett v Dease (1846) 10 1 Eq R 124), or subject to conditions to be settled by a third person (Gourlay v Duke of Somerset (1815) 19 Ves 429), or subject to such covenants as are reasonably required by the landlord (Sweet and Maxwell Ltd v Universal News Services Ltd [1964] 2 QB 699, [1964] 3 All ER 30, CA). As to clauses to be inserted in renewal of leases see Ricketts v Bell (1847) 1 De G & Sm 335; Vance v Earl of Ranfurley (1850) 11 Ch R 321.

If the agreement is silent as to covenants, it may be that the landlord is not entitled to limit his liability under the implied covenant for quiet enjoyment by inserting the usual express limited covenant: Colhoun v Trustees of Foyle College [1898] 1 IR 233, CA. As to the covenant for quiet enjoyment see PARA 508 et seq post; and as to the distinction between usual covenants and implied covenants see PARA 81 ante.

As the practice changes, so may the usual covenants change (Hampshire v Wickens (1878) 7 ChD 555 at 561 per Jessel MR), and the view as to what are usual covenants may require reconsideration in the light of the existing practice (Flexman v Corbett supra at 677 (residential houses in London)).

5 Flexman v Corbett [1930] 1 Ch 672 at 679 ('usual' in this connection held to mean 'occurring in ordinary use'); and see Church v Brown (1808) 15 Ves 258 at 267; Bennett v Womack (1828) 7 B & C 627; Brookes v Drysdale (1877) 3 CPD 52; Hampshire v Wickens (1878) 7 ChD 555; Chester v Buckingham Travel Ltd [1981] 1 All ER 386, [1981] 1 WLR 96. If the lease is to contain 'proper covenants', those covenants only are to be inserted which will secure the full effect of the contract: Jones v Jones (1803) 12 Ves 186 at 189; Blakesley v Whieldon (1841) 1 Hare 176. The question what are usual and proper covenants may be determined on an application under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 49 (as amended): see Re Anderton and Milner's Contract (1890) 45 ChD 476; and SALE OF LAND vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 220 et seq.

10 In a mining lease, reservation of liberty for the landlord and his agents to examine the workings is a usual covenant: Blakesley v Whieldon (1841) 1 Hare 176.

11 See Colhoun v Trustees of Foyle College [1898] 1 IR 233, CA and note 2 supra; Hall v City of London Brewery Co (1862) 2 B & S 737. As to an implied covenant for quiet enjoyment see PARA 511 post.

12 Hodgkinson v Crowe (1875) 10 Ch App 622 at 626. In the absence of an express proviso for re-entry or condition entitling a landlord to forfeit an oral tenancy for non-payment of rent, none is to be implied (Precious v Harrison [1989] NPC 17, CA) albeit such a proviso is a usual term.

84. Unusual covenants.

A covenant or proviso which tends to abridge or qualify the estate vested by the lease in the tenant is not allowed to be inserted as a usual covenant<sup>1</sup>; and on this ground it has been held that a covenant against assigning or underletting without consent<sup>2</sup>, and a proviso for re-entry on bankruptcy<sup>3</sup> or on breach of covenant generally<sup>4</sup>, are not usual.

The following covenants and provisos have also been held to be unusual<sup>5</sup>:

- 229 (1) a covenant by the tenant to rebuild and repair<sup>6</sup>;
- 230 (2) an exception, from the covenant to repair, of damage by fire or tempest<sup>7</sup>;
- 231 (3) a covenant by the tenant to insure<sup>8</sup>, or not to carry on a particular trade<sup>9</sup>;
- 232 (4) a condition that assignments or underleases are to be registered with the landlord's solicitor and a fee paid to him<sup>10</sup>; and
- 233 (5) a covenant by the landlord to rebuild in case of destruction by fire or tempest, with a condition that on default the rent should cease<sup>11</sup>.

1 Church v Brown (1808) 15 Ves 258 at 264; Blakesley v Whieldon (1841) 1 Hare 176 at 180; Hodgkinson v Crowe (1875) LR 19 Eq 591 at 625. Originally, however, it was a disputed point whether the covenant against assignment was 'usual' or not: Morgan v Slaughter (1793) 1 Esp 8; Folkingham v Croft (1796) 3 Anst 700; Vere v Loveden (1806) 12 Ves 179; Browne v Raban (1808) 15 Ves 528; Blakesley v Whieldon supra at 181. The covenant will be inserted where the lease is in substitution for one containing a restriction on assignment: Bell v Barchard (1852) 16 Beav 8. The fact that the landlord agrees not to withhold his consent to an assignment or sublease save for strong and good reasons does not entitle him to insist on the lease containing a covenant against assignment or subletting without consent: De Soysa v De Pless Pol [1912] AC 194, PC.

2 Henderson v Hay (1792) 3 Bro CC 632; Church v Brown (1808) 15 Ves 258; Hampshire v Wickens (1878) 7 ChD 555; Re Lander and Bagley's Contract [1892] 3 Ch 41; Bishop v Taylor & Co (1891) 60 LQB 556, DC; Chester v Buckingham Travel Ltd [1981] 1 All ER 386 at 393, [1981] 1 WLR 96 at 104. It makes no difference that the agreement does not mention 'assigns' of the tenant: Buckland v Papillon (1866) LR 1 Eq 477 at 482; affd 2 Ch App 67 at 71. Similarly, in a lease to contain 'proper covenants' a covenant against assigning or underletting will not be inserted (Eadie v Addison (1882) 52 LJ Ch 80); but covenants 'reasonably required by the landlord' will include some restriction against subletting, although not an absolute bar (Sweet and Maxwell Ltd v Universal News Services Ltd [1964] 2 QB 699, [1964] 3 All ER 30, CA). See also note 1 supra.

3 Hodgkinson v Crowe (1875) LR 19 Eq 591; Hyde v Warden (1877) 3 Ex D 72 at 82, CA.

4 Hodgkinson v Crowe (1875) 10 Ch App 622. The view that this has not been altered by the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended), notwithstanding that the danger of actual forfeiture has been thereby substantially diminished (see Re Anderton and Milner's Contract (1890) 45 ChD 476), is a matter which may well require reconsideration in the light of modern evidence (Flexman v Corbett [1930] 1 Ch 672 at 682). See also Chester v Buckingham Travel Ltd [1981] 1 All ER 386 at 394, [1981] 1 WLR 96 at 105. The rule applies to leases of special property, such as mining leases (Hodgkinson v Crowe (1875) 10 Ch App 622) and public house leases (Re Lander and Bagley's Contract [1892] 3 Ch 41) as well as to ordinary leases. Formerly it was held that a proviso for re-entry on bankruptcy (Haines v Burnett (1859) 27 Beav 500) was a usual proviso in a lease of a public house; and, although a proviso for re-entry if any other business than a licensed victualler's is carried on is not 'usual' on the grant of a lease, it may be treated as usual for the purpose of assignment (Bennett v Womack (1828) 7 B & C 627).

5 For these purposes, 'unusual' is used in a technical sense, by way of contrast with what are in law usual covenants: see PARA 83 ante. The types of covenant which are unusual in this technical sense are in practice often found in leases. Moreover, as the answer to the question of what is or is not usual may vary with changes in conveyancing practice, a decision that a covenant was unusual many years ago does not necessarily mean that it would be held to be unusual in modern conveyancing practice: see PARA 83 ante.

6 Doe d Dymoke v Withers (1831) 2 B & Ad 896 at 903.

7 Sharp v Milligan (1857) 23 Beav 419; Kendall v Hill (1860) 6 Jur NS 968; but in Doe d Ellis and Medwin v Sandham (1787) 1 Term Rep 705 a covenant to repair with such an exception was found as a fact to be usual. Cf Crosse v Morgan (1889) 60 LT 703 (the words 'or other casualty' were rejected as being uncertain, although the exception of damage by fire or tempest was admitted by the landlord).

8 See Cosser v Collinge (1832) 3 My & K 283.

9 Proper v Parker (1832) 3 My & K 280; Van v Corpe (1834) 3 My & K 269; Re Davis and Cavey (1888) 40 ChD 601. The covenant is certainly not usual in a neighbourhood where trade is usually carried on: Wilbraham v Livesey (1854) 18 Beav 206 at 210. In Doe d Marquis of Bute v Guest (1846) 15 M & W 160 a stipulation in the agreement that the premises should not be used except for a specified manufactory, and that usual covenants should be inserted, did not authorise the insertion of an affirmative covenant by the tenant that he would carry on the manufactory.

(iii) Building Agreements

85. Building agreement.

An agreement for a building lease<sup>1</sup> usually gives the builder the right to enter upon the land for the purpose of executing specified works, but no interest except a tenancy at will is immediately vested in him<sup>2</sup>. A nominal rent is reserved during the period required for building; otherwise the builder may become liable for the rent and subject to the covenants, so far as applicable, which are to be reserved by or contained in the lease when granted. The builder becomes entitled to have a lease granted to himself or his nominee on the completion of the works, or some specified part of them<sup>3</sup>, in accordance with the agreement; and the form of the lease is often scheduled to the agreement<sup>4</sup>.

1 'Building lease' means a lease for building purposes or for purposes connected with them; and 'building purposes' includes the erecting and improving of, the adding to, and the repairing of, buildings (Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(iii)), although, for the purposes of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Pt I (ss 1-37) (as amended), 'building lease' is given a special meaning (see s 4(1)(d); and PARA 1405 note 2 post).

2 Marquis of Camden v Batterbury (1859) 5 CBNS 808 at 816 (affd (1860) 7 CBNS 864, Ex Ch); Lady Holland v Kensington Vestry (1867) LR 2 CP 565. In Quicke v Chapman [1903] 1 Ch 659 at 668, CA, Collins MR spoke of the builder as having 'at the most a kind of licence, coupled with an interest in the land, which could not ripen into ownership until he had actually completed the building upon the land'. In effect, however, he obtains exclusive possession during the building, so as to become tenant at will, and the agreement usually purports to create such a tenancy. The builder has power to enter into a restrictive covenant which will be binding on persons taking the land with notice of it: see Abbey v Gutters (1911) 55 Sol Jo 364.

3 Eg when the houses are roofed in: see Lowther v Heaver (1889) 41 ChD 248, CA. See further BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 70 (extension of time for completion), PARAS 133-134 (certificates of completion).

4 As to building leases see PARA 110 post. A building lease granted under the Settled Land Act 1925 s 41 may contain an option to purchase: see s 51; and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 871. As to the power to grant building leases under that Act see PARA 30 ante; and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 842. A building lease made by a tenant for life need not require the works to be begun at any particular time: Re Grosvenor Settled Estates, Duke of Westminster v McKenna [1933] Ch 97. Subject to certain exceptions, no settlement created on or after 1 January 1997 is a strict settlement under the Settled Land Act 1925 and no such settlement is deemed to be made on or after that date: see the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996 s 2; and REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 65; SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 676.

A covenant to make an open space around houses imposes a continuing obligation to keep it open: Herbert v Maclean (1860) 12 I Ch R 84. As to the landlord's obligations under a covenant to make roads and sewers see Mason v Cole (1849) 4 Exch 375.

86. Liability for rent.

Under the usual form of agreement for a building lease<sup>1</sup>, because the rent is made payable under the agreement, and the agreement excludes the creation of a tenancy from year to year, such a tenancy is not implied from payment of the rent. Hence the assignment of the agreement does not transfer a tenancy to the assignee so as to render him liable for the rent; the liability for the rent is imposed only on the builder<sup>2</sup>.

1 Ie that which is outlined in PARA 85 ante.

2 Marquis of Camden v Batterbury (1859) 5 CBNS 808 at 816; on appeal (1860) 7 CBNS 864, Ex Ch. It is usual for the agreement to be drafted in such a way as to make it non-assignable, thereby avoiding any problem as to the liability for the rent by the assignee. The problem is in any event more academic than real, since any assignee of the agreement will hope to take up the lease and, if he does so, will thereby become tenant. Either he will have had to ensure that the rent was paid in order to get the lease, or by taking up the lease he is likely to have assumed liability to pay it, as often the lease reserves a rent as from the date of the agreement, with credit for such sums as have been paid under the agreement. As to the assignment of building agreements generally see BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 55 et seq.

(iv) Agents

87. Agreements by agents.

An agreement for lease may be entered into by an agent, but he must be properly authorised for that purpose<sup>1</sup>. An estate agent's general authority is only to get offers and communicate them to his principal, and without special authority he cannot bind his principal by a contract<sup>2</sup>. The general authority of a steward or land agent is similarly limited, and he may not contract to grant leases of farms<sup>3</sup>; but a land agent specially empowered to manage and superintend estates may enter into an agreement for a usual and customary lease according to the nature and locality of the property<sup>4</sup>. An owner ratifies an unauthorised agreement if he lets the tenant into possession under it<sup>5</sup>. A land or estate agent must exercise reasonable care in ascertaining the fitness of a proposed tenant<sup>6</sup>.

1 His authority need not be in writing: Coles v Trecothick (1804) 9 Ves 234 at 250; Callaghan v Pepper (1840) 2 I Eq R 399. The principal's death terminates the agent's authority: see Carr v Livingston (1865) 35 Beav 41. As to an agent taking a lease from his principal see Lord Selsey v Rhoades (1827) 1 Bli NS 1; Molony v Kernart (1842) 2 Dr & War 31 at 38. Cf Rossiter v Walsh (1843) 4 Dr & War 485; and see Taylor v Salmon (1838) 4 My & Cr 134. See also AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARAS 188-189. In Helsham v Langley (1841) 1 Y & C Ch Cas 175, the court refused specific performance of an agreement which was not in accordance with the principal's intentions; but cf Walsh v Griffiths-Jones [1978] 2 All ER 1002 (county court), where it was held that, where a landowner held out an estate agent as having full authority to enter into a contractual agreement relating to his property, the landowner was bound by whatever agreement the estate agent made, even though he had been expressly denied any authority to create a tenancy.

2 See the cases cited in AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 41. Consequently an agent has no authority to let an intending tenant into possession: Slack v Crewe (1860) 2 F & F 59.

3 Collen v Gardner (1856) 21 Beav 540; Mortal v Lyons (1858) 8 I Ch R 112 at 117; and see Ridgway v Wharton (1854) 3 De GM & G 677 at 688.

4 Peers v Sneyd (1853) 17 Beav 151; and see Firman v Lord Ormonde (1829) Beat 347. Unusual terms require the owner's sanction: see Turner v Hutchinson (1860) 2 F & F 185; Re Pearson and l'Anson [1899] 2 QB 618. As to unusual covenants see PARA 84 ante.

88. Prohibition of certain practices by agents.

Any person who:

- 234 (1) demands or accepts payment of any sum of money in consideration of:
- 7
10. (a) registering, or undertaking to register, the name or requirements of any person seeking a tenancy of a house<sup>1</sup>; or
11. (b) supplying, or undertaking to supply, to any person addresses or other particulars of houses to let; or

235 (2) issues any advertisement, list or other document describing any house as being to let without the authority of the owner<sup>2</sup> of the house or his agent, is guilty of an offence and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale<sup>3</sup>. An agent may, however, lawfully demand payment for finding a suitable house for his client, provided that the payment becomes due only when a suitable house is found<sup>4</sup>; and a person is not guilty of such an offence by reason of his demanding or accepting:

- 236 (i) payment from the owner of a house of any remuneration payable to him as agent for that owner<sup>5</sup>; or
- 237 (ii) payment of any remuneration, being a solicitor<sup>6</sup>, in respect of business done by him as such<sup>7</sup>; or
- 238 (iii) any payment in consideration of the display in a shop, or of the publication in a newspaper<sup>8</sup>, of any advertisement or notice, or by reason of such display or publication of an advertisement received for the purpose in the ordinary course of business<sup>9</sup>.

An agent who, on behalf of his principal, the landlord, contravenes certain of the prohibitions in relation to the demand and receipt of premiums contained in the Rent Act 1977 is himself liable<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'house' includes any part of a building which is occupied or intended to be occupied as a dwelling: Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 s 1(6).

2 For these purposes, 'owner', in relation to a house, means the person having the power to grant a lease of the house: ibid s 1(6).

3 Ibid s 1(1), (5) (s 1(1) amended by the Expiring Laws Act 1969 s 1). As to the standard scale see PARA 52 note 6 ante. Until a day to be appointed, a person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding three months, whether in addition to or as an alternative to such a fine: see the Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 s 1(5) (prospectively amended by the Criminal Justice Act 2003 s 332, Sch 37 Pt 9, as from a day to be appointed under s 336(3); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

5 Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 s 1(2).

6 For these purposes, the reference to a solicitor includes a reference to a body corporate recognised by the Council of the Law Society under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 (as amended) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 687 et seq): Solicitors' Incorporated Practices Order 1991, SI 1991/2684, arts 2(1), 3, 4(a), Sch 1.

7 Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 s 1(3). The reference to the business of a solicitor includes a reference to the business of a recognised body: Solicitors' Incorporated Practices Order 1991, SI 1991/2684, art 4(I), Sch 1.

8 For these purposes, 'newspaper' includes any periodical or magazine: Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 s 1(6).

9 Ibid s 1(4).

NOTES--Certain functions under provisions mentioned in this paragraph are 'relevant functions' for the purposes of the Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 4, Sch 3: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 733. Certain persons or indorsements mentioned in this paragraph are specified for the purposes of Regulatory Enforcement and Sanctions Act 2008 s 37, Schs 5, 6 (meaning of 'regulator' for the purposes of imposing civil sanctions): see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 196A.

NOTES 6, 7--SI 1991/2684 renamed the Solicitors' Recognised Bodies Order 1991: SI 2009/500. SI 1991/2684 art 3 amended: SI 2009/500. See also SI 1991/2684 art 5.

TEXT AND NOTE 6--Now refers to a solicitor or authorised person, meaning a person (other than a solicitor) who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to an activity which is a reserved legal activity (within the meaning of that Act) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 512): Accommodation Agencies Act 1953 s 1(3), (6) (s 1(3) amended, definition in s 1(6) added, by Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 21 para 22).

89. Investigation of landlord's title.

In practice, the landlord will often deduce title<sup>1</sup>. Where the title is registered, a prospective tenant is now able to obtain a copy of the landlord's title on making an application in the prescribed form to the Land Registry and on payment of the appropriate fee<sup>2</sup>. There are, however, various statutory exceptions to the general principle<sup>3</sup> that any person may inspect and make copies of, or of any part of, the register of title and of any document kept by the Chief Land Registrar which is referred to therein<sup>4</sup>.

At common law an intending tenant who agreed to take a lease of land<sup>5</sup> was entitled to call for and investigate the title of the intending landlord<sup>6</sup>; but this right is now limited by statute in relation to unregistered land unless the grant of the lease will trigger compulsory first registration of title<sup>7</sup>. If, where an intending tenant is entitled to call upon his intending landlord to show some title, the title proves to be defective at the time when the lease ought to be granted<sup>8</sup>, the landlord may not obtain specific performance<sup>9</sup> and is liable in damages<sup>10</sup>, including damages for the loss of the intending tenant's bargain<sup>11</sup>. If the landlord refuses to produce his title where he is legally bound to do so, the tenant may rescind the agreement and recover his deposit<sup>12</sup>. A tenant may now obtain rescission of an agreement for a lease, on the grounds of innocent misrepresentation, after the lease has been executed<sup>13</sup>. By agreeing to let, the landlord does not undertake that the land may be used for any purpose without restriction<sup>14</sup>.

Unless, however:

- 239 (1) the contract is to grant a term of years the grant of which will be an event<sup>15</sup> triggering compulsory first registration of title<sup>16</sup>; or
- 240 (2) the term of years to be granted is to be derived out of registered land<sup>17</sup>, or the agreement contains a stipulation to the contrary<sup>18</sup>, an intending tenant is not entitled to call for the title to the freehold under a contract to grant a term of years to be derived out of freehold or leasehold land<sup>19</sup>; and, on a contract to grant a lease for a term of years to be derived out of a leasehold interest, with a leasehold reversion, the intending tenant has no right to call for the title to that reversion<sup>20</sup>. At common law a tenant being entitled to investigate title was deemed to have notice of any matter of which he would have received notice on that investigation<sup>21</sup>, but, after 31 December 1925, where the tenant is precluded by statute<sup>22</sup> from investigating title, the tenant is not deemed to be affected with notice of any matter or thing of which, if he had contracted that such title should be furnished, he might have had notice<sup>23</sup>. Registration of any matter under the Land Charges Act 1972, in the case of unregistered land<sup>24</sup>, or under the Land Registration Act 2002, in the case of registered land<sup>25</sup>, or in any local land charges register<sup>26</sup>, constitutes actual notice, however, and all tenants are, therefore, bound by it.

A landlord who is himself a leaseholder is bound in the absence of a stipulation to the contrary to show title to the lease which is vested in him<sup>27</sup>. As he is not precluded by statute from doing so, an undertenant who neglects to investigate the title of his immediate landlord has constructive notice of his immediate landlord's title and any restrictions contained in the lease vested in the immediate landlord<sup>28</sup>. In the absence of express agreement to the contrary, where an intending tenant is entitled to investigate his landlord's title, he may where the title is unregistered require only 15 years as the period of commencement of title<sup>29</sup>; and a purchaser<sup>30</sup> is not deemed to be, or ever to have been, affected with notice of any matter or thing of which, if he had investigated the title or made inquiries in regard to matters prior to that period, he might have had notice, unless he actually makes such investigation or inquiries<sup>31</sup>.

The statutory provisions which, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, preclude an intending tenant from investigating title, do not prevent the intending tenant from showing otherwise that the title to the freehold or leasehold reversion is bad<sup>32</sup>. An intending tenant should generally insist that the landlord's title be investigated and that the appropriate searches be made<sup>33</sup>. Where the tenant stipulates that the landlord is to deliver an abstract, the tenant is entitled to have the abstract verified and to be given an acknowledgment or covenant for production of the deeds which are necessary for the tenant to deduce title subsequently<sup>34</sup>.

1 The Standard Conditions of Sale (4th Edition) condition 8.2.4 provides that if the term of the new lease will exceed seven years, the seller is to deduce a title which will enable the buyer to register the lease at the Land Registry with an absolute title. As to the investigation of title on the sale or assignment of leasehold property see SALE OF LAND vol 42 (Reissue) PARAS 98 et seq, 140. In the case of a lease granted under the right to buy, the landlord must furnish a certificate as to his title: see the Housing Act 1985 s 154 (as amended); and PARA 1912 post.

2 See the Land Registration Act 2002 s 66(1), (2)(b); and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 1095.

3 See ibid s 66(1), (2)(b).

4 See ibid s 66(2)(a); and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 1095.

5 The description of the property demised will be construed in the light of circumstances subsisting when the lease or agreement is made (see PARA 162 the text and note 4 post), and, apart from express contractual stipulation, the tenant takes the property in the state in which it is (see PARA 276 post). For these reasons, and by reason also of the prospective assumption of liability for repair, inspection of the property should be made, and will normally have been made before contract.

90. Consents necessary.

If the property to be demised is held under a lease which contains a covenant against underletting without consent, the head landlord's written consent must be obtained by the intending underlandlord before the date when the underlease is to be granted<sup>1</sup>. If this is not done, the intending undertenant may rescind the agreement<sup>2</sup>.

1 See PARA 481 post. See also PARA 547 note 2 post. As to a vendor's general duty under an agreement for sale to obtain any necessary licence or consent see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 908. If liquidated damages are fixed by the agreement in case the licence is refused, this does not give the underlandlord the option of not applying for the licence: Long v Bowring (1864) 33 Beav 585.

2 Forrer v Nash (1865) 35 Beav 167. If the undertenant has been in occupation, he is under no liability to restore the premises to their original condition: Fawkner and Rogers v Booth (1893) 10 TLR 83, CA.

91. Need for inspection of head lease.

An intending undertenant should examine the lease of his intending landlord in order to ascertain that the term of the underlease may be validly granted, and that the lease contains no unduly onerous covenants. If the sub-term is, in fact, longer than the original term, the undertenant may not, after the underlease has been granted, obtain compensation<sup>1</sup> unless the agreement for the underlease so provides<sup>2</sup>. After an agreement for an underlease has been entered into, then, whether he has had a chance of inspecting the head lease or not, the undertenant may not refuse to accept the underlease on the ground of the existence of any ordinary covenants<sup>3</sup>, for, in the absence of any term in the agreement to the contrary, and in the absence of any evidence that he has in fact been made acquainted with the actual terms of the lease, the agreement must be read as an agreement for an underlease containing the usual covenants<sup>4</sup>. He may, however, refuse to accept the underlease on the ground of the existence of unusual and onerous covenants, unless the agreement otherwise provides or he has been made acquainted with them<sup>5</sup>.

2 Palmer v Johnson (1884) 13 QBD 351, CA. A tenant subject to covenants which give a right of re-entry for breach under a lease which includes other premises may not compel specific performance of an agreement to purchase, even though he offers to indemnify the purchaser: Warren v Richardson (1830) You 1; Leathem v Allen (1850) 11 Ch R 683.

If the agreement for the underlease provides for the insertion of a particular restrictive covenant, this amounts to a representation that the undertenant is entitled to grant a lease with that restriction only, and he is not at liberty to insist on the insertion of a wider covenant contained in the head lease: Van v Corpe (1834) 3 My & K 269 at 277. Although an underlandlord may not be able to obtain specific performance of an agreement for the underlease by reason of the covenants in the head lease debarring him from granting the underlease in accordance with the agreement, if he is ready to grant the underlease, and the undertenant refuses to accept it, he has a claim for breach of the agreement; and the undertenant, if his enjoyment is interfered with, should have a remedy on the covenant for quiet enjoyment: Hayward v Parke (1855) 16 CB 295; and see PARA 508 et seq post.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(v) Title/92. Agreement for underlease to contain like covenants to those of lease.

92. Agreement for underlease to contain like covenants to those of lease.

Where the agreement for an underlease provides that the underlease is to contain the like provisions in all respects as are contained in the head lease, the provisions of the head lease are to be taken as models for those in the underlease, and must be introduced in it with the proper alterations of names and other matters. Consequently, a provision against assigning without the consent of the head landlord becomes in the underlease a provision against assigning without the consent of the intermediate landlord<sup>1</sup>; but the frame of the agreement may indicate that certain covenants, such as the covenant against assignment without consent, are to be introduced without modification, and the consent of the head landlord will be required<sup>2</sup>. Where a tenant grants an underlease containing a covenant by the undertenant to deliver up the premises and all landlord's fixtures at the end of the sub-term, this does not amount to a representation that he will be at liberty to remove trade fixtures; and thus, if the head lease contains a covenant for delivery up of trade fixtures, and the head landlord enforces that covenant by preventing the undertenant from removing them, the undertenant has no remedy<sup>3</sup>.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(vi) Liability to Tax/93. Capital gains tax, VAT and stamp duty land tax.

(vi) Liability to Tax

93. Capital gains tax, VAT and stamp duty land tax.

The making of an agreement for a lease may attract capital gains tax<sup>1</sup> and may constitute a supply for the purposes of VAT<sup>2</sup>.

For the purposes of stamp duty land tax, where an agreement for a lease is entered into, and the agreement is substantially performed<sup>3</sup> without having been completed<sup>4</sup>, the agreement is treated as if it were the grant of a lease<sup>5</sup> in accordance with the agreement ('the notional lease'), beginning with the date of substantial performance and the effective date of the transaction is that date<sup>6</sup>. Where a person assigns his interest as lessee under an agreement for a lease, then if the assignment occurs without the agreement having been substantially performed, the relevant statutory provisions<sup>7</sup> have effect as if the contract were with the assignee and not the assignor, and the consideration given by the assignee for entering into the contract included any consideration given by him for the assignment<sup>8</sup>. If the assignment occurs after the agreement has been substantially performed the assignment is a separate land transaction<sup>9</sup> and the effective date of that transaction is the date of the assignment<sup>10</sup>.

1 See CAPITAL GAINS TAXATION vol 5(1) (2004 Reissue) PARA 338 et seq.

2 See PARA 125 post; and VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 156 et seq. As to exempt supplies see the Value Added Tax Act 1994 s 31(1), Sch 9 Pt II, Group 1 (as amended); and VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 156.

3 For these purposes, a contract is 'substantially performed' when (1) the purchaser, or a person connected with the purchaser, takes possession of the whole, or substantially the whole, of the subject-matter of the contract; or (2) a substantial amount of the consideration is paid or provided: Finance Act 2003 s 44(5) (amended by the Finance Act 2004 s 296, Sch 39 Pt 2 para 15(1), (2)); definition applied by the Finance Act 2003 ss 44(9A), 120, Sch 17A para 12A(5) (as added: see note 6 infra). 'Possession' includes receipt of rents and profits or the right to receive them, and it is immaterial whether possession is taken under the contract or under a licence or lease of a temporary character: s 44(6) (as so applied; amended by the Finance Act 2004 s Sch 39 Pt 2 para 15(1), (3)). For the purposes of head (2) supra a substantial amount of the consideration is paid or provided: (a) if none of the consideration is rent, where the whole or substantially the whole of the consideration is paid or provided; (b) if the only consideration is rent, when the first payment of rent is made; (c) if the consideration includes both rent and other consideration, when (i) the whole or substantially the whole of the consideration other than rent is paid or provided; or (ii) the first payment of rent is made: Finance Act 2003 s 44(7) (as so applied).

4 For these purposes, references to completion are to completion of the land transaction proposed, between the same parties, in substantial conformity with the contract: ibid s 44(10) (definition applied by Sch 17A para 12A(5) (as added: see note 5 infra).

5 For these purposes, 'lease' means (1) an interest or right in or over land for a term of years (whether fixed or periodic); or (2) a tenancy at will or other interest or right in or over land terminable by notice at any time: ibid Sch 17A para 1 (as added: see note 6 infra).

6 See ibid ss 44(9A), 120, Sch 17A para 12A(1), (2) (s 44(9A), Sch 17A paras 1, 12A, 12B added by the Finance Act 2004 s 296, Sch 39 Pt 1 paras 1, 3, Pt 2 para 22; for transitional provisions see Sch 39 Pt 1 para 13(3), (6)).

If the agreement is (to any extent) afterwards rescinded or annulled, or is for any other reason not carried into effect, the tax paid by virtue of this provision must (to that extent) be repaid by the Commissioners for HM Revenue and Customs; and repayment must be claimed by amendment of the land transaction return made in respect of the agreement: Finance Act 2003 Sch 17A para 12A(4) (as so added; amended by virtue of the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs Act 2005 s 50). Where a lease is subsequently granted in pursuance of the agreement the notional lease is treated as if it were surrendered at that time, and the lease itself is treated for the purposes of the Finance Act 2003 Sch 17A para 9 (as added) (see PARA 252 post) (rent for overlap period in case of grant of further lease) as if it were granted in consideration of that surrender: Sch 17A para 12A(3) (as so added). See further STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX.

7 Ie ibid s 44 (as amended): see STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX.

8 Ibid Sch 17A para 12B(1), (2) (as added: see note 6 supra).

9 For the meaning of 'land transaction' see ibid s 43 (as amended); and STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX.

10 Ibid Sch 17A para 12B(3) (as added: see note 6 supra). Where there are successive assignments, Sch 17A para 12B (as added) has effect in relation to each of them: Sch 17A para 12B(4) (as so added).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/2. AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(vii) Remedies for Breach of Contract/94. Damages at law.

(vii) Remedies for Breach of Contract

94. Damages at law.

Either party to a valid and enforceable agreement for lease may recover damages at law for breach of contract<sup>1</sup>. Where the landlord cannot fulfil his obligations because of a defect in title, the tenant may recover damages for loss of bargain, as well as the expenses and liabilities which he has necessarily incurred<sup>2</sup>.

Where a tenant refuses to accept a lease, the landlord may recover damages<sup>3</sup>. Damages may be awarded for delay in completion<sup>4</sup>. Where negotiations for a lease prove unsuccessful, a landlord may in certain circumstances recover expenses incurred in carrying out alterations requested and agreed to be paid for by a prospective tenant<sup>5</sup>.

1 See DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 801 et seq. The claimant must prove readiness to perform the contract on his part: see Collins v Willmott (1864) 11 LT 340. In practice it suffices if the claimant purchaser pleads that he is ready and willing to complete: Lovelock v Franklyn and Cox (1846) 8 QB 371. The general rule at common law is that damages for breach of contract are calculated on the basis that the injured party should be put in the position in which he would have been if the contract had been performed. The remedy is the award of damages to compensate the victim for his loss, not to transfer to the victim, if he has suffered no loss, the benefit which the wrongdoer has gained by his breach of contract: Surrey County Council v Bredero Homes Ltd [1993] 3 All ER 705, [1993] 1 WLR 1361, CA. Damages in lieu of an injunction may, however, be based on a share of the benefit made by the wrongdoer: Wrotham Park Estate Co v Parkside Homes Ltd [1974] 2 All ER 321, [1974] 1 WLR 798, explained in Stoke-on-Trent City Council v W & J Wass Ltd [1988] 3 All ER 394, [1988] 1 WLR 1406, CA and Surrey County Council v Bredero Homes Ltd supra. The damages must not be too remote: see DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARAS 941-949, 1059.

The authorities do not provide for any absolute rule as to the time for assessment of damages. The normal date of assessment is the date of the breach; but, if this would give rise to injustice, the court may substitute some other date: see Wroth v Tyler [1974] Ch 30, [1973] 1 All ER 897 (date of hearing); Malhotra v Choudhury [1980] Ch 52, [1979] 1 All ER 186, CA (where, although it was accepted that the assessment should be at the date of judgment, the date for valuing the property was moved back by one year to take account of the plaintiff's delay in pursuing his claim); Johnson v Agnew [1980] AC 367, [1979] 1 All ER 883, HL (date for assessment was the date on which the remedy of specific performance became aborted because of the exercise of the power of sale by the vendor's mortgagee); Domb v Isoz [1980] Ch 548, [1980] 1 All ER 942, CA (date of assessment was date on which the plaintiff-purchasers elected to pursue remedy for damages in lieu of specific performance); Forster v Silvermere Golf and Equestrian Centre Ltd (1981) 42 P & CR 255 (nearest date to date of hearing to which evidence had been directed); Suleman v Shahsavari [1989] 2 All ER 460, [1988] 1 WLR 1181 (date of judgment). It is also possible to claim damages for misrepresentation: see the Misrepresentation Act 1967 s 2; Watts v Spence [1976] Ch 165, [1975] 2 All ER 528; Sharneyford Supplies Ltd v Edge [1987] Ch 305 at 323, [1987] 1 All ER 588 at 598, CA; and MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 801. As to setting aside leases on the ground of mistake see MISTAKE vol 77 (2010) PARA 56.

2 Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 ss 3, 5(3), (4)(a), abolishing the rule in Bain v Fothergill (1874) LR 7 HL 158. Loss of bargain is assessed by reference to the difference between the contract price and the true value of the property as at the date of assessment: see eg Beard v Porter [1948] 1 KB 321, [1947] 2 All ER 407 (vendor failed to give vacant possession in accordance with the contract). A resale of the property will be accepted as prima facie evidence of its market value: Engell v Fitch (1869) LR 4 QB 659, Ex Ch. Loss of profits may, in addition, be recoverable if the damages fall within the second limb of the rule in Hadley v Baxendale (1854) 9 Exch 341: see Cottrill v Steyning and Littlehampton Building Society [1966] 2 All ER 295, [1966] 1 WLR 753 and Diamond v Campbell-Jones [1961] Ch 22, [1960] 1 All ER 583. Damages are not intended to put the purchaser in a better position than he would have been in if the contract had been completed; consequently he may not recover his conveyancing expenses in addition to his general damages: Re Daniel, Daniel v Vassall [1917] 2 Ch 405 at 412. Such expenses are recoverable, however, if the purchaser elects to claim reliance loss rather than loss of bargain: Wallington v Townsend [1939] Ch 588, [1939] 2 All ER 225; Anglia Television Ltd v Reed [1972] 1 QB 60, [1971] 3 All ER 690, CA; CCC Films (London) Ltd v Impact Quadrant Films Ltd [1985] QB 16, [1984] 3 All ER 298. The claimant is entitled to recover wasted expenditure as damages only if he could have recouped his expenses if the contract had been performed; the burden of proof is on the defendant to show that the claimant's expenditure would not have been recouped: CCC Films (London) Ltd v Impact Quadrant Films Ltd supra. See also Lloyd v Stanbury [1971] 2 All ER 267, [1971] 1 WLR 535 per Brightman J (damages for wasted expenditure could include expenditure incurred prior to execution of the contract as well as expenditure incurred in reliance on the contract).

3 Oldershaw v Holt (1840) 12 Ad & El 590; Marshall v Mackintosh (1898) 46 WR 580; Foster v Wheeler (1888) 38 ChD 130, CA. The landlord may claim loss of bargain damages which will consist of the difference between the contract price and the true value of the property at the date of assessment, plus the expenses of any resale, but less the deposit, if any: Noble v Edwardes, Edwardes v Noble (1877) 5 ChD 378 at 393; Keck v Faber (1915) 60 Sol Jo 253. A resale of the property within a reasonable time will be accepted as prima facie evidence of its market value: Keck v Faber supra.

4 Raineri v Miles [1981] AC 1050, [1980] 2 All ER 145, HL; Phillips v Lamdin [1949] 2 KB 33, [1949] 1 All ER 770 (claim for damages maintained notwithstanding the completion of the contract); Wadsworth v Lydall [1981] 2 All ER 401, [1981] 1 WLR 598, CA (cost of bridging loan to complete a linked transaction); Cochrane (Decorators) Ltd v Sarabandi (1983) 133 NLJ 558 (loss of business profits). Breach of a contract to complete on a particular day is not discharged by compliance with a notice to complete: Raineri v Miles supra.

5 It seems that the liability to bear the expenses lies with the party through whose fault the negotiations for the lease have broken down; and, if neither party is in default, the prospective tenant ought to pay all the costs that have been wasted: see Brewer Street Investments Ltd v Barclays Woollen Co Ltd [1954] 1 QB 428, [1953] 2 All ER 1330, CA; cf Jennings and Chapman Ltd v Woodman, Matthews & Co [1952] 2 TLR 409.

95. Specific performance.

On the refusal or omission of either party to an agreement for a lease to perform the agreement on his part, the other is usually entitled to bring a claim for specific performance<sup>1</sup>.

Since this is an equitable remedy<sup>2</sup>, the court has a discretion whether to grant it, and it will not be ordered if the agreement is uncertain in any material respect<sup>3</sup>, or if it involves hardship<sup>4</sup>, as, for example, where it would entail the ejectment of tenants in possession<sup>5</sup>; nor will it be ordered if the performance can have no beneficial result, as, for example, where the agreed term has already expired<sup>6</sup>, or where, if the claimant is the tenant, it appears that he will be unable, through insolvency, to perform the covenants of the lease<sup>7</sup>; nor where the granting of the lease will involve forfeiture<sup>8</sup> or will enable the claimant to take advantage of his own breach of contract<sup>9</sup>; nor will specific performance generally be ordered if it involves the performance of work the execution of which the court cannot superintend<sup>10</sup>. Lack of mutuality does not of itself deprive the court of jurisdiction to order specific performance of an agreement for a lease, but it is a matter that should be taken into account in the exercise of the court's discretion<sup>11</sup>.

Before an agreement is enforced, every condition precedent must have been fulfilled<sup>12</sup>; and a tenant who has gone into possession under the agreement loses his right to specific performance if he commits breaches of the covenants which would be inserted in the lease, so that the landlord, if the lease had been granted, would have a right of re-entry<sup>13</sup>. A defect in title may prevent a landlord from obtaining specific performance<sup>14</sup>; but, if the landlord cannot make a title to the whole of the property, the tenant is entitled to a lease of so much as the landlord can demise, with an abatement of rent<sup>15</sup>. The remedy of specific performance must be claimed promptly<sup>16</sup>; but delay on the landlord's part may be excused where the tenant has been in possession<sup>17</sup>, and probably also where the claim is by the tenant<sup>18</sup>. Where the remedy of specific performance may prejudice the rights of third parties in relation to the relevant property, the remedy may not be granted<sup>19</sup>.

1 See the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 50 (the Supreme Court Act 1981 prospectively renamed as the Senior Courts Act 1981 by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1, as from a day to be appointed under s 148(1); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed); the County Courts Act 1984 ss 23(d), 24(2)(g) (as amended); and SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. 'The remedy of specific performance, although expressed as a discretionary one, is by now granted in accordance with well-established principles. One of those principles is that a contract for the grant of an interest in land will normally be specifically enforced': AMEC Properties Ltd v Planning Research & Systems plc [1992] BCLC 1149 at 1157, [1992] 1 EGLR 70 at 72, CA, per Mann LJ. An agreement for a lease usually imposes obligations which form sufficient consideration. See also Palmer v Hamilton (1793) 2 Ridg Parl Rep 535 at 549; Moore v Crofton (1846) 9 I Eq R 344. For a recent example where specific performance was granted see Kilmartin SCI (Hulton House) Ltd v Safeway Stores [2006] EWHC 60 (Ch), [2006] 09 EG 184, [2006] All ER (D) 205 (Jan).

2 See EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 410; and Oakacre Ltd v Claire Cleaners (Holdings) Ltd [1982] Ch 197, [1981] 3 All ER 667 (writ claiming specific performance issued at a time where at law there was no breach of contract).

3 Price v Assheton (1835) 1 Y & C Ex 441; Price v Griffith (1851) 1 De GM & G 80; Jeffrey v Stephens (1860) 8 WR 427; Oxford Corp'n v Crow [1893] 3 Ch 535. In the following cases the objection of uncertainty was not sustained: Powell v Lovegrove (1856) 8 De GM & G 357; Parker v Taswell (1858) 2 De G & J 559; Oxford v Provand (1868) LR 2 PC 135. An agreement under which the landlord is to put the house in decorative repair is not uncertain (Samuda v Lawford (1862) 4 Giff 42, distinguishing Taylor v Portington (1855) 7 De GM & G 328 (drawing room to be 'handsomely decorated according to present style'; too uncertain for specific performance)); nor is an agreement under which the tenant is 'to do all repairs, painting, papering, decorating etc' uncertain (Dear v Verity (1869) 38 LJ Ch 486); nor an agreement to take a house when 'complete and fit for habitation' (Faulkner v Llewellyn (1863) 11 WR 1055; affd 12 WR 193, CA). An agreement by the tenant to do certain specified 'and other' works at a stated expense is not uncertain if the specified works in effect will cost the stated sum: Baumann v James (1868) 3 Ch App 508, CA. Cf Thellusson v Lord Rendlesham (1846) 11 Jur 29; Gardner v Fooks (1867) 15 WR 388. Extrinsic evidence of the meaning of terms used in letters is admissible: see Skinner v M'Douall (1848) 2 De G & Sm 265 and DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 198-199.

4 The agreement must be 'certain, fair and just in all its parts': Buxton v Lister (1746) 3 Atk 383 at 386 per Lord Hardwicke LC; Lord Walpole v Lord Orford (1797) 3 Ves 402 at 420. Hence, if the covenants of the lease will involve the tenant in expenses which he did not anticipate, and if this result is due to the landlord's default, specific performance will not be ordered (Tildesley v Clarkson (1862) 30 Beav 419); but it is otherwise where the landlord is not in default, as, for example, where the tenant knowingly agrees to take a house in defective repair (Cook v Waugh (1860) 2 Giff 201; affg 2 LT 784). A tenant who has taken possession and insisted on repairs being done cannot refuse to accept an underlease because it contains covenants taken from the head lease of which he was unaware: Nash v Cochrane (1839) 3 Jur 973. A mistake as to the legal effect of an agreement does not prevent specific performance: Powell v Smith (1872) LR 14 Eq 85 (landlord understood that the effect of the lease being determinable at seven or 14 years was to give him the option to determine it). To constitute a defence, hardship must have existed at the date of the contract; specific performance will not be refused on grounds of hardship because of events which have happened since the contract was made: see Adams v Weare (1784) 1 Bro CC 567; Francis v Cowcliffe Ltd (1977) 33 P & CR 368 (order for specific performance of covenant in an existing lease to 'provide and maintain a lift'). An agreement for a yearly tenancy will, however, be specifically enforced in a proper case (Lever v Koffler [1901] 1 Ch 543; Manchester Brewery Co v Coombs [1901] 2 Ch 608 at 616; Deverell v Milne (1918) 34 TLR 576); and the court may grant specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease or licence for a period of very short duration (Verrall v Great Yarmouth Borough Council [1981] QB 202, [1980] 1 All ER 839, CA). Where under an agreement for a lease the tenant was let into possession and the agreement was specifically enforceable, a claim for rent made before the expiry of the term was held to be maintainable although tried after the expiry of the term: Gilbey v Cossey (1912) 106 LT 607, DC.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(vii) Remedies for Breach of Contract/96. Damages in lieu of specific performance.

96. Damages in lieu of specific performance.

Where an agreement for a lease is such that specific performance could be ordered, the court may give damages either in lieu of, or in addition to, specific performance<sup>1</sup>. Conversely, where specific performance could not be ordered, the court may give damages for breach of contract<sup>2</sup> only when the contract is enforceable at law<sup>3</sup>.

1 See EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 410 note 4; SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 959 et seq; and as to damages see M'Nulty v Hamill (1815) Beat 544. See also Johnson v Agnew [1980] AC 367, [1979] 1 All ER 883, HL (injured party who had sought specific performance could claim damages at common law for breach of contract if the order for specific performance proved abortive; date for assessment of damages that on which the remedy of specific performance became aborted), overruling Capital and Suburban Properties Ltd v Swycher [1976] Ch 319, [1976] 1 All ER 881, CA and adopting McKenna v Richey [1950] VLR 360. It was further held in Johnson v Agnew supra that, although damages might be awarded in some cases under the Chancery Amendment Act 1858 s 2 (repealed: see now the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 50 (as prospectively amended: see PARA 95 note 1 ante); and EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 410 note 4), where they could not be reserved at common law, the Act did not warrant the assessment of damages otherwise than on a common law basis.

97. Rescission.

Where there has been a breach of an agreement for a lease, the party who is not in breach may claim rescission of the agreement; but such a claim is not inconsistent with a claim for damages<sup>1</sup>. Rescission may also be allowed where an innocent representation has been made by one party inducing the other party to enter into the agreement<sup>2</sup>.

1 See Johnson v Agnew [1980] AC 367, [1979] 1 All ER 883, HL, overruling on this point Horsler v Zorro [1975] Ch 302, [1975] 1 All ER 584. 'Rescission' for these purposes means the acceptance of a repudiatory breach and should be distinguished from 'rescission ab initio' which may arise eg in cases of mistake, fraud or lack of consent: see Johnson v Agnew supra at 392-393 and at 889 per Lord Wilberforce.

2 Such rescission is 'rescission ab initio': see note 1 supra. See also EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 414; MISREPRESENTATION AND FRAUD vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 814 et seq. As to setting aside a lease, or agreement for a lease, based on a mistake see MISTAKE vol 77 (2010) PARA 56.

AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(2) AGREEMENTS FOR LEASES/(vii) Remedies for Breach of Contract/98. Remedies for breach of building agreement.

98. Remedies for breach of building agreement.

Specific performance of a building agreement will not be ordered except under special circumstances<sup>1</sup>; but, if the contract includes the granting of a lease, specific performance may be ordered of the agreement for a lease and damages awarded for breach of the building agreement<sup>2</sup>.

The agreement usually empowers the landlord to determine the tenant's rights on failure to comply with the tenant's obligations to build, and may provide that, if the landlord re-enters, he is to take the material and plant brought upon the land for the purpose of the works<sup>3</sup> as liquidated damages, but in the absence of such a provision he is not restricted to his remedy by forfeiture<sup>4</sup>. The landlord is also entitled to damages for breach of the agreement<sup>5</sup>.

Such damages may be assessed either by reference to the difference in value of the claimant's land had the covenant been fulfilled and its value after the actual breach<sup>6</sup> or by reference to the cost to the claimant of doing the work<sup>7</sup>. The choice of the appropriate method of assessment depends, inter alia, upon whether the claimant has done or will do the work<sup>8</sup> and is not determined by whether the claimant chooses to sue for specific performance or to sue for damages only. The only discernible fundamental principle of universal application is that the court strives, so far as is possible by means of a monetary award, to place the claimant in the position which he would have occupied if he had not suffered the wrong complained of, be that wrong a tort or a breach of contract<sup>9</sup>.

1 Wolverhampton Corpn v Emmons [1901] 1 KB 515, CA. This applies especially where no plans have been approved: Brace v Wehnert (1858) 25 Beav 348. See PARA 95 ante; and SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. As to modifying plans to suit statutory requirements see Cubitt v Smith (1864) 11 LT 298.

2 Kay v Johnson (1864) 2 Hem & M 118; Soames v Edge (1860) John 669. For this purpose, however, the agreement must specify with sufficient clearness the work to be done: Wood v Silcock (1884) 50 LT 251.

3 As to the effect of an agreement that the plant and material is to become the landlord's property see BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 121. See also BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 421; FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1649.

4 There is no relief in equity against forfeiture for non-completion of the buildings if not occasioned by the landlord's default (Croft v Goldsmid (1857) 24 Beav 312), and the landlord does not necessarily waive the forfeiture by allowing the tenant to proceed with the works (Doe d Lord Kensington v Brindley (1826) 12 Moore CP 37); but the tenant may be entitled to relief under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended) (see PARA 619 post).

6 It is usually referred to as the diminution in value; but in this context this measure of damages is more accurately described as 'the last anticipated increase in value'.

7 See Tito v Waddell (No 2) [1977] Ch 106, [1977] 3 All ER 129; Radford v De Froberville [1978] 1 All ER 33, sub nom Radford v De Froberville (Lange, third party) [1977] 1 WLR 1262; both approved and applied in Dodd Properties (Kent) Ltd v Canterbury City Council [1980] 1 All ER 928, [1980] 1 WLR 433 at 446, CA. In the light of these decisions Wigsell v School for Indigent Blind (1880) 8 QBD 357, DC can no longer be said to establish any general rule for the assessment of such damages. ### 3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES

(1) REQUISITES FOR DEMISE BY LEASE

99. In general.

The only general requirement as to the form of a lease<sup>1</sup> is that for the purposes of creating a legal estate it must, except in certain circumstances, be made by deed<sup>2</sup>. The rigour of this requirement may, however, be mitigated by equity; and a lease which is invalid because it is not made by deed may nevertheless be construed as an agreement for a lease which may be specifically enforceable<sup>3</sup>. The former doctrine of interesse termini, which required a tenant to perfect his title by entry, has been abolished<sup>4</sup>.

Many grants of a term of years absolute are required to be completed by registration if a legal estate is to be created; and a prescribed clauses lease<sup>5</sup> must comply with the requirements set out in the Land Registration Rules 2003<sup>6</sup> as to form and content<sup>7</sup>.

1 It is as opposed to an agreement for lease: see PARA 73 et seq ante.

2 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 52(1), (2)(d); and PARA 102 post. As to the exceptions to this rule see PARA 101 post.

3 See PARA 117 post.

4 See PARA 118 post.

5 For the meaning of 'prescribed clauses lease' see PARA 100 post.

6 In the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 58A, Sch 1A (as added): see PARA 100 post.

100. Prescribed clauses leases.

In the case of a registered estate<sup>1</sup> in land<sup>2</sup>, the following dispositions are required to be completed by registration, namely the grant of a term of years absolute<sup>3</sup>:

- 241 (1) for a term of more than seven years<sup>4</sup> from the date of the grant;
- 242 (2) to take effect in possession after the end of the period of three months beginning with the date of the grant;
- 243 (3) under which the right to possession is discontinuous;
- 244 (4) in pursuance of the right to buy under Part V of the Housing Act 1985<sup>5</sup>; or
- 245 (5) in circumstances<sup>6</sup> where there is a disposal by a landlord which leads to a person no longer being a secure tenant<sup>7</sup>.

Such a grant does not operate at law until the relevant registration requirements are met<sup>8</sup>.

A lease which is:

- 246 (a) within heads (1) to (5) above;;
- 247 (b) granted on or after 19 June 2006;
- 248 (c) not granted in a form expressly required:

- 12. (i) by an agreement entered into before 19 June 2006;
- 13. (ii) by an order of the court;
- 14. (iii) by or under an enactment; or
- 15. (iv) by a necessary consent or licence for the grant of the lease given before 19 June 2006; and

- 249 (d) not a lease by virtue of a variation of a lease which is a deemed surrender and regrant, is a 'prescribed clauses lease'<sup>9</sup>. A prescribed clauses lease must begin with the required wording<sup>10</sup> or that wording must appear immediately after any front sheet<sup>11</sup>. If, however, it appears to the registrar that a lease is not a prescribed clauses lease, then this requirement does not apply to that lease<sup>12</sup>.

1 'Registered estate' means a legal estate the title to which is entered in the register of title, other than a registered charge: Land Registration Act 2002 s 132(1).

2 For these purposes, 'land' includes (1) buildings and other structures; (2) land covered with water; and (3) mines and minerals, whether or not held with the surface; and 'mines and minerals' includes any strata or seam of minerals or substances in or under any land, and powers of working and getting any such minerals or substances: ibid s 132(1).

3 For the meaning of 'term of years absolute' see PARA 2 note 3 ante (definition applied by ibid s 132(1)).

4 The Lord Chancellor may by order substitute for the term specified in head (1) in the text such shorter term as he thinks fit: see ibid s 118(1)(d); and see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 826 note 6. At the date at which this title states the law, no such order had been made.

5 Ie under the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (ss 118-188) (as amended): see PARA 1795 et seq post.

6 Ie in circumstances where ibid s 171A (as added) applies: see PARA 1900 et seq post.

7 Land Registration Act 2002 s 27(2)(b).

8 Ibid s 27(1). As to the relevant registration requirements see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 916.

9 See the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 58A(4) (r 58A added by SI 2005/1982). Subject to the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 58A(3) (as so added) (see note 12 infra), where a person applies for completion of a lease by registration and claims that the lease is not a prescribed clauses lease because the lease falls within head (c) or head (d) of the definition of prescribed clauses lease in r 58A(4) (as so added), he must lodge with his application a certificate by a conveyancer to that effect or other evidence to satisfy the registrar as to his claim: r 58A(2) (as so added).

10 'Required wording' means the wording in ibid Sch 1A clauses LR1-LR14 (as added) completed in accordance with the instructions in that Schedule and as appropriate for the particular lease: r 58A(4) (as added: see note 9 supra). See further PARA 127 post.

11 Ibid r 58A(1) (as added: see note 9 supra). 'Front sheet' means a front cover sheet, or a contents sheet if it is at the lease's beginning, or a front cover sheet and contents sheet where the contents sheet is immediately after the front cover sheet, and a 'contents sheet' means a contents sheet or index sheet (in each case, however described) or both: r 58A(4) (as so added).

12 Ibid r 58A(3) (as added: see note 9 supra). Nor, so far as appropriate, do r 58A(2) (as added) (see note 9 supra) and r 72A(3) (as added) (see PARA 120 post) apply to that lease: r 58A(3) (as so added).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(1) REQUISITES FOR DEMISE BY LEASE/101. Leases for three years or less.

101. Leases for three years or less.

A lease taking effect in possession for a term not exceeding three years, whether or not the lessee is given power to extend the term, at the best rent which can be reasonably obtained without taking a fine, may be made either orally<sup>1</sup>, or by writing under hand only<sup>2</sup>. For this purpose the term is taken as not exceeding three years if at the time of the agreement it may last for less than that period, although it may also last for more<sup>3</sup>. Reversionary leases conferring no immediate right to possession are altogether excluded from the ambit of the statutory exception even if the term agreed is for three years or less<sup>4</sup>.

1 An oral lease may be made by any words showing the intent to give exclusive possession for the term: see Maldon's Case (1584) Cro Eliz 33; and PARA 2 ante. A person cannot grant a lease to himself (Rye v Rye [1962] AC 496, [1962] 1 All ER 146, HL); but it is possible for a nominee of a person to grant a lease to his principal (Ingram v IRC [2000] 1 AC 293, [1999] 1 All ER 297, HL).

2 Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2). Section 54(2) excepts such leases from the requirement of writing imposed by s 54(1): see PARA 102 post. The Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended) does not apply in relation to a contract to grant such a lease as is mentioned in the Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2): see the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2(5)(a); and PARA 79 ante at head (1) in the text. A letter setting out the terms of a proposed tenancy with a date to commence in 25 days' time did not confer an immediate right to possession and so was not effective to create a legal estate under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2) at the date of the letter: Long v Tower Hamlets London Borough Council [1998] Ch 197, [1996] 2 All ER 683.

3 The Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(1) applies only where the tenancy, if good, must of necessity last more than three years (Re Knight, ex p Voisey (1882) 21 ChD 442 at 458, CA) or where it is for a period of more than three years, although determinable within that time (Kushner v Law Society [1952] 1 KB 264, [1952] 1 All ER 404, DC). The Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(1) does not, however, apply where the tenant has an option to extend the term beyond three years: see Hand v Hall (1877) 2 Ex D 355, CA.

4 Long v Tower Hamlets London Borough Council [1998] Ch 197, [1996] 2 All ER 683, not following Rawlins v Turner (1699) 1 Ld Raym 736; Foster v Reeves [1892] 2 QB 255, CA, and Ryley v Hicks (1725) 1 Stra 651 on the ground that the statutory wording of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2) crucially differs from its statutory antecedents.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(1) REQUISITES FOR DEMISE BY LEASE/102. Leases for over three years.

102. Leases for over three years.

All leases of land<sup>1</sup>, or of any interest in land, for a term exceeding three years must be made by deed; otherwise they are void for the purpose of conveying or creating a legal estate<sup>2</sup>. With the exception of leases for a term of three years or less<sup>3</sup>, all leases made orally and not put into writing and signed by the parties so creating them, or by their agents thereunto lawfully authorised in writing, have, notwithstanding any consideration having been given for the same, the force and effect of interests at will only<sup>4</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'land' see PARA 17 note 1 ante.

2 Law of Property Act 1925 ss 52(1), (2)(d), 205(1)(ii); and see City Permanent Building Society v Miller [1952] Ch 840 at 848, [1952] 2 All ER 621 at 625, CA, per Evershed MR. Where the subject matter of a lease is situated in Scotland or abroad, the demise must be in the form required by the law of the place where the land is situated and not by the law of the place where judicial proceedings are taken to enforce the obligation, so that execution by deed is not necessary if this is not required by the law of the place where the land is situated: see eg Adams v Clutterbuck (1883) 10 QBD 403. See generally CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 399 et seq.

3 See PARA 101 ante.

4 Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(1). A void lease may, however, take effect as an agreement for a lease: see PARA 117 post. As to the formal requirements for executing deeds see PARA 111 post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(1) REQUISITES FOR DEMISE BY LEASE/103. Leases of incorporeal hereditaments.

103. Leases of incorporeal hereditaments.

Where an incorporeal hereditament, such as a right of common or sporting right<sup>1</sup>, is appurtenant to a corporeal hereditament, it passes under a demise of the corporeal hereditament, however made; therefore, where a lease of such a corporeal hereditament can be made orally, it is effectual as regards the incorporeal hereditament<sup>2</sup>. Where, however, an incorporeal hereditament is demised by itself, or together with land to which it is not appurtenant, then, in order validly to demise the incorporeal hereditament at law, the lease must be made by deed<sup>3</sup>. Where the incorporeal hereditament is demised with land to which it is not appurtenant by a lease not made by deed, and the lease would be valid as to the land alone, it is not made void as to the land by the inclusion of the incorporeal hereditament<sup>4</sup>, although, if the rent reserved is an entire rent, the landlord may not be able to recover any part of it at law<sup>5</sup>.

Where a registered estate<sup>6</sup> is a franchise or manor, the grant of a lease is required to be completed by registration<sup>7</sup>; and such a grant does not operate at law until the relevant registration requirements are met<sup>8</sup>.

(2) CONCURRENT AND FUTURE LEASES

104. Concurrent leases by deed.

After a lease has been granted, another lease of the same premises, known as a concurrent lease or in more modern usage a lease of the reversion, is sometimes granted, for a term beginning before the expiration of the earlier lease and ending before or after the earlier lease<sup>1</sup>. Provided it is made by deed, a concurrent lease operates as a grant of the reversion upon the earlier term<sup>2</sup> and entitles the tenant of the concurrent lease to the benefit of the rents and covenants of the earlier lease<sup>3</sup> so that the landlord may not during the subsistence of the concurrent lease recover rent from the first tenant<sup>4</sup>. The first tenant does not, however, become a subtenant of the tenant who holds under the concurrent lease so that, upon the determination of the concurrent lease, the first tenancy continues and the first tenant again holds directly from the landlord. If, however, the first lease is prematurely determined by surrender or otherwise, the lessee of the reversion ('the concurrent tenant') is immediately entitled to possession under his lease by virtue of the estoppel arising under that deed<sup>5</sup>. The above principles are partly embodied in statute, except in relation to leases granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>6</sup>. The rule of law that a legal term may be created to take effect in reversion expectant on a longer term is also embodied in statute<sup>7</sup>. Concurrent leases by deed take effect as legal estates<sup>8</sup>.

1 A concurrent lease whose term ends after that of the first lease is sometimes inaccurately referred to as a 'reversionary lease': but it will be a reversionary or future lease as well as a concurrent lease only if its own term is limited to commence at a future date: see PARA 105 post.

105. Oral concurrent leases.

Formerly, where a concurrent lease not made by deed was made for a term exceeding the residue of the term granted by the original lease, the concurrent lease was void as to that residue. If the oral concurrent lease was for a term less than the residue of the term granted by the original lease, it was wholly void<sup>1</sup>; but now that there is no need to perfect the tenant's title by entry<sup>2</sup>, there appears to be no reason why a legal concurrent lease for a term of three years or less may not be granted orally or by writing which is not a deed<sup>3</sup>; and, in view of the equitable doctrine that an agreement for a lease may be enforced as though a valid lease had been granted<sup>4</sup>, a concurrent lease in writing but not by deed which satisfies the statutory requirements for an agreement for lease<sup>5</sup> would be effectual, although this would not usually be good conveyancing practice<sup>6</sup>.

In modern conveyancing practice the grant of a concurrent lease is often used as a method of financing, that is to say the sale of the stream of income provided by the rent payable under the first lease in return for a capital sum.

2 See PARA 118 post.

3 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 54(2); and PARA 101 ante. The concurrent lease takes effect in possession because it entitles the tenant of the concurrent lease to receive rent. See also Plummer and John v David [1920] 1 KB 326.

5 See the requirements of the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended): see PARA 79 ante.

6 It is strongly recommended that concurrent leases should always be granted by deed since otherwise, if the term exceeds three years, the validity of the transaction is always open to dispute and in any event the lease will suffer from the fragility of an equitable estate.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(2) CONCURRENT AND FUTURE LEASES/106. Future leases.

106. Future leases.

A term, at a rent or granted in consideration of a fine, limited to take effect more than 21 years from the date of the instrument purporting to create it<sup>1</sup> is void, as is any contract to create such a term, except when the term takes effect in equity under a settlement or is created out of an equitable interest under a settlement, or under an equitable power for mortgage, indemnity or other like purposes<sup>2</sup>. This does not, however, invalidate a contract to grant, at a date more than 21 years after the date of the contract, a lease which, when granted, will commence not more than 21 years after the date of the grant of that lease<sup>3</sup>. Where the future lease is to take effect on the termination of a present lease, the reversion and the right to distrain for the rent due under the present lease remain in the landlord<sup>4</sup>.

In the case of a registered estate<sup>5</sup> in land<sup>6</sup>, the grant of a term of years absolute<sup>7</sup> to take effect in possession after the end of the period of three months beginning with the date of the grant is required to be completed by registration and such a grant does not operate at law until the relevant registration requirements are met<sup>8</sup>.

1 See a future lease. A future lease, or a reversionary lease, is a lease to take effect from a future date; cf a concurrent lease, or a lease of a reversion. As to concurrent leases see PARAS 104-105 ante. Many leases are both reversionary and concurrent.

2 Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(3). In Northchurch Estates Ltd v Daniels [1947] Ch 117, [1946] 2 All ER 524 it was held that the Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(3) did not apply to a perpetually renewable lease having regard to the provisions of the Law of Property Act 1922 s 145, Sch 15 para 7(1) (see PARAS 541-542 post). A contract for the renewal of a lease or underlease for a term exceeding 60 years from the termination of the lease or underlease is, subject to the express provisions of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 149 (as amended), void: see PARA 140 post. Where the present lease and the reversionary lease were vested in the same person, the estate under the present lease and the interesse termini (which existed before 1 January 1926) under the reversionary lease remained distinct. The two leases were not merged together so as to entitle the tenant to the same rights as though he had a lease for the aggregate period: see Lord Liangattock v Watney, Combe, Reid & Co Ltd [1910] AC 394, HL; Knight v City of London Brewery Co [1912] 1 KB 10 (cases under the Licensing Act 1904 (repealed)). Whether, as a result of the changes made by the Law of Property Act 1925, the two terms may now be treated as added together or merged is undecided, but it would seem that by the abolition of the doctrine of interesse termini (see PARA 118 post) there is now no objection to that merger, and in Re 38, 39 and 40 Windmill Street, St Pancras, London [1950] Ch 308, [1950] 1 All ER 59, a term of seven years, granted as a reversionary term but since come into possession, was added to a previous term of five years so as to constitute a tenancy granted for a term of more than seven years for the purposes of the War Damage Act 1943 s 123 (repealed). See also Toyota (GB) Ltd v Legal & General Assurance (Pensions Management) Ltd (1989) 59 P & CR 435, [1989] 2 EGLR 123, CA (cited in PARA 310 note 2 post). ### (3) UNDERLEASES

107. Underlease for the whole term.

In the absence of agreement restricting his right, the tenant of property may underlet it for any period less than the residue of his own term<sup>1</sup>. An underlease by deed for a term equal to<sup>2</sup>, or greater than, the residue of the tenant's own term operates as an assignment of his term, and not as an underlease<sup>3</sup>. Consequently, in such a case, no reversion remains in the underlandlord, and he cannot distrain for rent reserved by the underlease<sup>4</sup>, although he may sue for it as rent covenanted to be paid<sup>5</sup>. He himself ceases by reason of the assignment to be the tenant under the lease<sup>6</sup>.

If the underlease is not made by deed, it cannot operate as an actual assignment for want of a deed<sup>7</sup>. If it is for a period not less than the term remaining under the lease, it operates as an assignment by operation of law<sup>8</sup>. By the underlease the underlandlord divests himself of the entirety of his interest in the demised premises<sup>9</sup>; but it seems that he may sue for rent on the contract created by the underlease<sup>10</sup>.

A tenancy from year to year or other periodic tenancy is regarded, for the purpose of this doctrine, as a tenancy continuing until it is in fact determined, and the tenant may grant an underlease from year to year or for a term of years. So long as the original tenancy lasts, it is potentially longer than the underlease, and the underlandlord has a reversion by virtue of which he may distrain for the rent reserved by the underlease<sup>11</sup>.

1 Unless the undertenant is protected by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 (as to Pt I (ss 1-22) (as amended) see PARA 1209 post and as to continuation by Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) see PARA 713 post), the underlease comes to an end with the head lease, and the undertenant does not, in the absence of fresh agreement, become tenant to the head landlord (see Simkin v Ashurst (1834) 1 Cr M & R 261), or to the new tenant (see Freeman v Jury (1826) Mood & M 19); but, if the underlandlord continues to hold as tenant, the yearly subtenancy also continues (see Pearce v Shard (1828) 6 LJOSKB 354; Hayes v Fitz-Gibbon (1870) IR 4 CL 500).

A sublease by a tenant at will determines the tenancy at will (Birch v Wright (1786) 1 Term Rep 378 at 382; cf Day v Day (1871) LR 3 PC 751 at 760), and thus it cannot operate as an assignment; but it creates a tenancy by estoppel as between the parties to the sublease (see Doe d Goody v Carter (1847) 9 QB 863 at 865). A tenant at sufferance may not create any interest binding on the landlord: see Thunder d Weaver v Belcher (1803) 3 East 449 at 451. The rent is not a rent seck within the Landlord and Tenant Act 1730 s 5 so as to attach to it the power of distress given by that statute: -- v Cooper (1768) 2 Wils 375; Langford v Selmes (1857) 3 K & J 220; Lewis v Baker [1905] 1 Ch 46; cf Pluck v Digges (1831) 5 Bli NS 31, HL. There is no reversion by estoppel (see ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 1029 et seq), nor does payment of the sum reserved as rent operate as an attornment so as to give a power of distress (Hazeldine v Heaton (1883) Cab & El 40). Cf Milmo v Carreras [1946] KB 306, [1946] 1 All ER 288, CA (cited in notes 5, 9, 10 infra), where the underlease was not by deed. See DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 912.

5 See Milmo v Carreras [1946] KB 306 at 310, [1946] 1 All ER 288 at 290, CA, where Lord Greene MR did not dissent from the view to this effect expressed in certain old authorities, some of which, however, also take the erroneous view that a reversion remains in the underlandlord. Of the old authorities reference may be made to Baker v Gostling (1834) 1 Bing NC 19 at 27; Clarke v Coughlan (1841) 3 ILR 427 at 431; Cremen v Johnson (1846) 9 I Eq R 143 at 145, 147; Pennefather v Stephens (1847) 11 I Eq R 61 at 62; and see Loyd v Langford (1677) 2 Mod Rep 174; Newcomb v Harvey (1690) Carth 161; Williams v Hayward (1859) 1 E & E 1040; cf Smith v Mapleback (1786) 1 Term Rep 441.

6 Thus, in the absence of any direct covenant having been given by him to the landlord, the assignee is not liable to the landlord for rent accruing due or breaches of covenant occurring after the assignment: see Beardman v Wilson (1868) LR 4 CP 57.

10 See Milmo v Carreras [1946] KB 306 at 310, [1946] 1 All ER 288 at 290, CA, per Lord Greene MR. There seems no reason why effect should not be given to the contract, although the reasons for so holding given in older cases formerly cited for this proposition, such as Preece v Corrie (1828) 5 Bing 24 and Pollock v Stacy (1847) 9 QB 1033 (explained but doubted in Beardman v Wilson (1868) LR 4 CP 57), cannot, it is thought, now be supported.

11 Mackay v Mackreth (1785) 4 Doug KB 213; Curtis v Wheeler (1830) Mood & M 493; Pike v Eyre (1829) 9 B & C 909; Oxley v James (1844) 13 M & W 209 at 214. The principle applies to other periodic tenancies (Peirse v Sharr and Claughton (1828) 2 Man & Ry KB 418) and, it seems, to underleases granted by tenants of business premises subject to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) because those tenancies can continue indefinitely (see William Skelton & Son Ltd v Harrison and Pinder Ltd [1975] QB 361 at 367, [1975] 1 All ER 182 at 187). The same results would seem logically to follow from the continuation of a long tenancy of a residential property at a low rent by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt I (ss 1-22) (as amended) (see PARA 1196 et seq post) or the Local Government and Housing Act 1989 s 186, Sch 10 (as amended) (see PARA 1237 et seq post); but it may be that these principles should be applied only in respect of transactions effected by the tenant during the period of the statutory continuation of his business or long residential tenancy.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(3) UNDERLEASES/108. Undertenant's liability to landlord.

108. Undertenant's liability to landlord.

Where the underlease does not operate as an assignment, there is neither privity of contract nor privity of estate between the head landlord and the undertenant<sup>1</sup>; and so the undertenant is not personally liable for the rent reserved by<sup>2</sup>, or on the covenants contained in, the head lease<sup>3</sup>. Unless, however, the undertenant is protected from distress by statute<sup>4</sup>, his goods upon the demised premises are liable to distress for the rent reserved by the head lease<sup>5</sup>; and, if the head lease contains a proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant, he is liable to be evicted for such a breach<sup>6</sup>. Moreover, it is the undertenant's duty to inform himself of the covenants which are contained in the lease under which the underlandlord holds; and he is bound in equity to observe such of those covenants as are of a negative character<sup>7</sup>, on the ground that he takes with notice, and he is liable to be restrained by injunction from committing a breach of them<sup>8</sup>. The tenant, although personally liable on the covenant, will not be included in the injunction unless he has caused or facilitated the breach, as, for example, where he is prohibited by the lease from underletting<sup>9</sup>, or where he has represented to the undertenant that the act complained of might be done<sup>10</sup>.

1 Berney v Moore (1791) 2 Ridg Parl Rep 310 at 331. Further, the undertenant has no equity to enforce the provisions of the underlease against the head landlord: Taylor v Gillott (1875) LR 20 Eq 682. See, however, Peachy v Young [1929] 1 Ch 449 (undertenant might be liable under the terms of the head lease, even though there was no privity of estate between him and the head landlord, if he was a person entitled under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 39, Sch 1 Pt II paras 3, 6(d) (as amended) (see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 52) to require a legal estate to be conveyed to or otherwise vested in him, and he had not under the combined effect of Sch 1 Pt II para 7(m) (as added) (see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 53) disclaimed the vesting of the estate).

As to the abolition of the doctrine of privity of contract in respect of assignments of leases in relation to tenancies beginning on or after 1 January 1996 see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995; and PARA 578 et seq post.

2 See Holford v Hatch (1779) 1 Doug KB 183.

Originally it was thought that the undertenant might be liable upon the underlandlord's insolvency (Goddard v Keate (1682) 1 Vern 87) but this is not so. On the same principle, the undertenant may not normally enforce covenants in the head lease against the head landlord: South of England Dairies Ltd v Baker [1906] 2 Ch 631; but see Smith and Snipes Hall Farm Ltd v River Douglas Catchment Board [1949] 2 KB 500, [1949] 2 All ER 179, CA.

4 Ie by the Law of Distress Amendment Act 1908: see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 951 et seq. Where the head landlord, whose tenant is in arrear with his rent, serves upon the undertenant, under the provisions of that Act (see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 960), a notice stating the amount of the rent due and requiring him to pay the rent to the head landlord until the arrears are paid, the giving of the notice operates to transfer to the head landlord the right to recover, receive and give a discharge for the undertenant's rent: see Jarvis v Hammings [1912] 1 Ch 462; BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 149; and DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 952.

5 An undertenant's liability is the same in this respect as that of a stranger whose goods are on the demised premises at the time when a distress is levied: see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 952. If the undertenant pays the head rent under threat of distress, he may deduct this from his own rent (see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 984, 1080); but he may not claim contribution from an undertenant of another part of the premises demised by the head lease, as the undertenants are not subject to a common demand (Hunter v Hunt (1845) 1 CB 300; and see Johnson v Wild (1890) 44 ChD 146; contra Webber v Smith (1689) 2 Vern 103; Allison

The rule applies to the case of an underlease to a tenant from year to year (Tritton v Bankart supra); and, since the undertenant is supposed to examine the title to the lease under which the underlandlord holds, as well as the lease itself, he is also affected with notice of, and is bound in equity by, negative covenants contained in an assignment of the lease, although not contained in the lease itself (Clements v Welles (1865) LR 1 Eq 200). These rules are subject to the statutory restrictions on notice (see PARA 89 ante) and to the effect of registration of restrictive covenants (see PARA 89 ante).

109. Covenant to observe covenants in head lease and as to indemnity.

On the granting of an underlease, the obligations of the head lease in respect of the payment of rent, and the observance of the covenants in respect of any of the property in the head lease which is not comprised in the underlease, are usually imposed by express covenant on the underlandlord, while the undertenant covenants for payment of his own rent and enters into covenants in respect of the sub-demised property corresponding to those in the head lease; and on either side the covenants may be accompanied by an express covenant of indemnity<sup>1</sup>.

The question of indemnity is important with reference to the covenant to repair. An independent covenant to repair in the underlease, following the terms of the corresponding covenant in the head lease, is not by itself construed as a covenant of indemnity, and the underlandlord cannot recover under it the costs which he has incurred by reason of the undertenant's default, such as costs of defending a claim for possession and procuring relief against forfeiture<sup>3</sup>. This result is due to the fact that the operation of the two covenants is different, the measure of damages under each depending on the date of commencement of the head term and sub-term respectively<sup>4</sup>. If, however, the underlease does not contain an independent covenant to repair, but binds the undertenant to perform the covenant in the head lease, a contract of indemnity is implied, and the underlandlord may recover the costs of a claim which he has reasonably defended<sup>5</sup>. It seems that in any case he may recover the expenses of repairs which have been properly effected by him to avoid a forfeiture<sup>6</sup>; and he may recover substantial damages for breach of the undertenant's covenant to repair, notwithstanding that the head landlord has re-entered for non-payment of the head rent<sup>7</sup>. If the underlandlord and the undertenant are liable to the head landlord for the same debt, albeit under different instruments, the undertenant's liability is primary so that, if the underlandlord pays the debt, he is entitled to be reimbursed by the undertenant<sup>8</sup>.

1 See Ebbetts v Conquest [1895] 2 Ch 377 at 382, CA. A mortgagee by sub-demise, who has gone into possession, may be liable to the mortgagor for forfeiture of the lease: Perry v Walker (1855) 24 LJ Ch 319. If an undertenant has caused a forfeiture both of his own and of the head lease, he is not entitled to the benefit of a waiver of the forfeiture of the head lease: Hillier v Parkinson (1831) 9 LJOS Ch 156. Where an underlandlord covenants to observe covenants in the head lease, including a covenant to repair, and to keep the tenant indemnified against the same, this is not merely a covenant of indemnity, but a covenant requiring the underlandlord to perform his repairing obligations which is enforceable by the undertenant in a claim for damages: Ayling v Wade [1961] 2 QB 228, [1961] 2 All ER 399, CA. ## (4) BUILDING LEASES

110. Rights and liabilities under building lease.

On the completion of such part of the works as entitles the builder to call for a lease, his rights and liabilities become the same as if a lease had been granted. Consequently he ceases to hold on the terms of the building agreement and holds on the terms of the lease to which he is entitled<sup>1</sup>. If he is entitled to have separate leases granted of different plots as the houses on them are built, the same rule applies to each plot; and, on the completion or part completion of the house in accordance with the agreement, he holds that house as though the lease had been granted<sup>2</sup>. Thus, he is not subject to a stipulation in the agreement, for example a power of re-entry on discontinuance of the works for a specified time, which is not to be introduced into the lease<sup>3</sup>. As the grant of the lease might operate as an implied grant of light over adjoining land retained by the landlord, this implication requires to be excluded by the agreement. The builder himself has, however, no estate in adjoining land comprised in the agreement but not yet leased which would enable him to grant an easement of light over it expressly; and as against him no such grant will be implied<sup>4</sup>.

(5) COMPLETION

111. Formalities.

A deed which is executed and delivered as an escrow cannot take effect as a deed pending the performance of the condition subject to which it was so delivered<sup>1</sup>; but, once a deed is delivered as an escrow, it may not be recalled<sup>2</sup>. A document that has been validly executed as a deed requires delivery to take effect and execution of a deed does not demonstrate an intention to deliver the deed in escrow<sup>3</sup>. The unilateral action of the landlord in delivering the lease in escrow followed by the fulfillment of the escrow condition is not, however, to be treated as having bound the tenant before he executed the lease<sup>4</sup>. The landlord is not entitled to insist on witnessing by himself or his agent the execution of the counterpart by the tenant<sup>5</sup>.

The execution of the lease by the landlord is a condition precedent to the tenant's becoming liable on the covenant<sup>6</sup> unless the circumstances show that the tenant has assumed liability<sup>7</sup>. If, however, a lease purports to be granted by a tenant for life and remainderman 'according to their respective estates and interests' and the tenant has entered, the tenant for life may sue on the covenants notwithstanding that he alone has executed the lease<sup>8</sup>.

Any rule of law which:

- 250 (1) restricts the substances on which a deed may be written;
- 251 (2) requires a seal for the valid execution of an instrument as a deed by an individual<sup>9</sup>; or
- 252 (3) requires authority by one person to another to deliver an instrument as a deed on his behalf to be given by deed, is abolished with effect from 31 July 1990<sup>10</sup>.

An instrument is not, however, a deed unless:

- 253 (a) it makes it clear on its face that it is intended to be a deed by the person signing it<sup>11</sup> or, as the case may be, by the parties to it, whether by describing itself

- as a deed or expressing itself to be executed or signed as a deed or otherwise<sup>12</sup>; and 254 (b) it is validly executed as a deed:
11
16. (i) by that person or a person authorised to execute it in the name or on behalf of that person; or
17. (ii) by one or more of those parties or a person authorised to execute it in the name or on behalf of one or more of those parties<sup>13</sup>; and an instrument is validly executed as a deed by an individual if, and only if:

- 255 (A) it is signed by him in the presence of a witness who attests the signature, or at his direction and in his presence and the presence of two witnesses who each attest the signature; and 256 (B) it is delivered as a deed<sup>14</sup>.

The grant of a lease may attract capital gains tax<sup>15</sup> and may constitute a supply for the purposes of VAT<sup>16</sup>; and the lease is also chargeable to stamp duty land tax<sup>17</sup>.

Prescribed clauses leases<sup>18</sup> and the grant of a lease out of a registered estate which is a franchise or manor are not completed until they have been registered<sup>19</sup>.

Where a solicitor, duly certificated notary public or licensed conveyancer, or an agent or employee of a solicitor, duly certificated notary public or licensed conveyancer, in the course of or in connection with a transaction, purports to deliver an instrument as a deed on behalf of a party to the instrument, it is conclusively presumed in favour of a purchaser that he is authorised so to deliver the instrument: s 1(5) (as amended (see note 11 supra); also amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(2), Sch 17 para 20(1)). For these purposes (1) 'purchaser' has the same meaning as in the Law of Property Act 1925 (see PARA 89 note 30 ante); (2) 'duly certificated notary public' has the same meaning as it has in the Solicitors Act 1974 by virtue of s 87 (as amended) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 66 (2009) PARA 1412); and (3) 'interest in land' means any estate, interest or charge in or over land or in or over the proceeds of sale of land: Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 1(6) (as amended (see note 11 supra); also amended by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 Sch 17 para 20(2)).

A material alteration made after execution to a deed or document without the consent of all the parties to it prevents the person who is responsible for the alteration from enforcing the deed or document<sup>1</sup>. A lease by deed under which the tenant has entered but which has been rendered void by a material alteration may be used to show the terms of his occupation<sup>2</sup>. An addition which expresses only what the law would imply is not necessarily treated as an alteration<sup>3</sup>. A memorandum added to a deed before execution<sup>4</sup> or added after signature but before delivery<sup>5</sup> is part of the deed. Such a memorandum may vary the term stated in the lease<sup>6</sup>; and a variation from a yearly term to a term of one year will be treated as expunging covenants applicable only to the cancelled tenancy, unless, perhaps, the lease does continue beyond one year<sup>7</sup>.

PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(5) COMPLETION/(i) In general/114. Duplicate and counterpart.

114. Duplicate and counterpart.

In order that each party may have access to the actual words of a lease, it is usual for two copies to be executed<sup>1</sup>. If each copy is executed by both landlord and tenant, the lease is said to be executed in duplicate, and each part is as efficacious as the other<sup>2</sup>. This is often done in the case of a lease not granted by deed.

Where the lease is by deed, it is usual for one copy ('the lease') to be executed by the landlord alone and handed to the tenant, and for the other ('the counterpart') to be executed by the tenant alone and handed to the landlord<sup>3</sup>. A deed is, however, binding on its maker even though the parts have not been exchanged, so long as it is signed and delivered<sup>4</sup>. The counterpart executed by the tenant is primary evidence of the lease as against the tenant and persons claiming through him<sup>5</sup>, and as against strangers<sup>6</sup>; and as against all persons it is presumptive evidence of the execution of a lease<sup>7</sup>. If no counterpart has been executed, or if the counterpart cannot be found, the landlord is entitled to inspect and take a copy of the lease in the tenant's possession<sup>8</sup>. The lease is regarded as the principal instrument and, in case of discrepancy between the lease and the counterpart, the provisions of the lease prevail, provided that the lease is consistent with itself; but, if it is inconsistent, it may be corrected by reference to the counterpart<sup>9</sup>.

115. When a counterpart is essential.

Powers of leasing, whether arising under statute or contained in a settlement, usually require that a counterpart of the lease shall be executed by the tenant. In the case of statutory powers it is generally also provided that the execution of the lease is to be sufficient evidence of the execution of the counterpart<sup>1</sup>. Where the power does not contain such a provision, then, as the execution of the counterpart is essential to the validity of the lease, a memorandum of the execution should be indorsed on the lease and signed by the landlord<sup>2</sup>. The lease and the counterpart need not be executed at the same time<sup>3</sup>. It is normal practice to complete the grant of a lease by exchanging the lease and counterpart<sup>4</sup>.

116. Merger of contract in lease.

Where an executory contract has been carried out by deed, the contract is merged in the deed, so far as the deed covers the subject matter of the contract<sup>1</sup>. Accordingly, where an agreement for lease has been completed by the grant of a lease, the agreement remains in force only so far as it includes matters which are not comprised in the lease<sup>2</sup>. Thus, if an agreement provides for compensation for errors or misstatements not expressly limited to matters discovered before completion, a claim may be brought on the agreement in respect of matters discovered after the execution of the deed which carried the agreement into effect<sup>3</sup>.

117. Operation of invalid lease as an agreement.

A lease for a term exceeding three years or at a rent less than the best rent that can be reasonably obtained without a fine<sup>1</sup>, if created otherwise than by deed, is construed as an agreement for a lease<sup>2</sup>; and specific performance of the agreement will be ordered, provided that it satisfies the formal requirements relating to the making of contracts for the sale or other disposition of an interest in land<sup>3</sup>, and that it is in other respects capable of this remedy<sup>4</sup>. The right to specific performance is sufficient to give the parties respectively rights equivalent to the legal rights, and place them under obligations equivalent to the legal obligations, of landlord and tenant<sup>5</sup>. In equity the lease is deemed to have been effectively granted, and for practical purposes the parties are in the same position as if the lease were valid at law<sup>6</sup>.

Where this equitable doctrine does not apply, and specific performance is not available, the effect of entry under the invalid lease, if followed by payment of rent, is to create, by implication of law, a legal tenancy from year to year upon the terms of the instrument so far as applicable to such a tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

A lease of an incorporeal hereditament by an instrument not made by deed is subject to the same considerations, and operates as a valid lease in equity, provided that the tenant has entered into enjoyment under it and that specific performance would be ordered<sup>8</sup>. Otherwise, if the tenant has entered into enjoyment and has thus received the consideration for his bargain, he is bound by the stipulations of the instrument so far as they apply to the period of his enjoyment<sup>9</sup>.

See also PARAS 76, 95 ante. For cases where specific performance of an agreement for a lease will not be granted see PARA 77 ante; and SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE. 6 See PARA 76 ante. The result is that to a considerable extent the statutory requirement of a deed (see PARA 102 ante) has been nullified (see Furness v Bond (1888) 4 TLR 457) but, as regards persons other than the landlord and tenant, the want of a legal estate in the tenant by reason of the invalidity of the demise might be important.

118. No need for actual entry.

Before 1 January 1926, in order to secure the full legal benefit of the lease, the tenant had to perfect his title by entry, and until then he had no estate in the land but only a right known as interesse termini<sup>1</sup>. The doctrine of interesse termini was abolished by statute<sup>2</sup>, and as from 1 January 1926 all terms of years absolute<sup>3</sup>, whether the interest is created before, on or after that date, are capable of taking effect at law or in equity, according to the grantor's estate, interest or powers, from the date fixed for the commencement of the term, without actual entry<sup>4</sup>.

2 Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(1). Nothing in s 149(1) prejudicially affects the right of any person to recover any rent or to enforce or take advantage of any covenants or conditions or, as respects terms or interests created before 1 January 1926, operates to vary any statutory or other obligations imposed in respect of such terms or interests: s 149(4).

3 For the meaning of 'term of years absolute' see PARA 2 note 3 ante.

4 Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(2). Accordingly there is no longer need of the decisions that the rule against perpetuities did not apply to invalidate a future lease: see eg Mann, Crossman and Paulin v Registrar of Land Registry [1918] 1 Ch 202; and PERPETUITIES AND ACCUMULATIONS vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 1030.

(ii) Registration

119. Registration with superior landlord.

Leases often contain a covenant by the tenant, on any assignment or subletting of the demised premises, or any part of them, to give notice of the assignment or underlease to the landlord or his solicitor, with particulars of the assignee or undertenant, and to produce the instrument of assignment or underlease and pay a fee for registration of it<sup>1</sup>. The covenant may be framed so as to apply to assignments only; but a covenant to register every assignment or underlease of the demised premises or any part of them extends to a sub-underlease of part of the premises<sup>2</sup>.

1 The covenant is not a 'usual covenant' (Brookes v Drysdale (1877) 3 CPD 52; and see PARA 83 ante), but there is no objection to it in regard to validity. It is not affected by the provisions of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 144 (see PARA 485 post), with reference to exacting a fine for licence to assign.

120. Registration of title.

In the case of unregistered land, the following are events which trigger the requirement for compulsory first registration of title:

- 257 (1) the grant out of a qualifying estate<sup>1</sup> of an estate in land (except to a person as mortgagee<sup>2</sup>):
  - 13 18. (a) for a term of years absolute<sup>3</sup> of more than seven years<sup>4</sup> from the date of the grant; and
  - 19. (b) for valuable or other consideration<sup>5</sup>, by way of gift<sup>6</sup> or in pursuance of an order of any court;
- 14 258 (2) the grant out of a qualifying estate of an estate in land for a term of years absolute to take effect in possession after the end of the period of three months beginning with the date of the grant;
- 259 (3) the grant of a lease in pursuance of the right to buy under the Housing Act 1985<sup>7</sup> out of an unregistered legal estate in land;
- 260 (4) the grant of a lease out of an unregistered legal estate in land in circumstances<sup>8</sup> where there is a disposal by a landlord which leads to a person no longer being a secure tenant<sup>9</sup>.

In the case of registered land, prescribed clauses leases<sup>10</sup> and the grant of a lease where the registered estate is a franchise or manor require registration for legal completion<sup>11</sup>. On completion of a prescribed clauses lease by registration the registrar must, where appropriate, make entries in the relevant individual register<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, a qualifying estate is an unregistered legal estate which is (1) a freehold estate in land; or (2) a leasehold estate in land for a term which, at the time of the grant, has more than seven years to run: Land Registration Act 2002 s 4(2). The Lord Chancellor may by order substitute for the term of seven years such shorter term as he thinks fit: see s 118(1)(b); and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 826 note 6. For these purposes, 'land' does not include mines and minerals held apart from the surface: ibid s 4(9).

2 See ibid s 4(5).

3 As to the meaning of 'term of years absolute' see PARA 100 note 3 ante.

4 The Lord Chancellor may by order substitute for the term of seven years such shorter term as he thinks fit: see the Land Registration Act 2002 s 118(1)(b); and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 826 note 6.

5 For these purposes, if the estate granted has a negative value, it is to be regarded as granted for valuable or other consideration: ibid s 4(6).

6 For these purposes, references to grant by way of gift include grant for the purpose of (1) constituting a trust under which the settlor does not retain the whole of the beneficial interest; or (2) uniting the bare legal title and the beneficial interest in property held under a trust under which the settlor did not, on constitution, retain the whole of the beneficial interest: ibid s 4(7).

7 le in pursuance of the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (ss 118-188) (as amended): see PARA 1795 et seq post.

8 le in circumstances where ibid s 171A (as added) applies: see PARA 1900 et seq post.

9 See the Land Registration Act 2002 s 4(1)(c)-(f). As to compulsory first registration of title see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 827 et seq.

(iii) Costs of Leases

121. Payment of costs.

It was formerly the custom for the tenant to pay the landlord's costs of preparing the lease; but it is now provided that, notwithstanding any custom to the contrary, a party to a lease<sup>1</sup> is under no obligation to pay the whole or any part of any other party's solicitor's<sup>2</sup> costs<sup>3</sup> of the lease, unless the parties agree otherwise in writing<sup>4</sup>. Therefore, if the landlord requires a counterpart, he must pay the costs of this himself, unless the tenant has agreed to pay the costs of both lease and counterpart<sup>5</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease' includes an underlease and an agreement for a lease or underlease or for a tenancy or subtenancy: Costs of Leases Act 1958 s 2(a).

2 For these purposes, the reference to a solicitor includes a reference to a body corporate recognised by the Council of the Law Society under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 (as amended) (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 687 et seq): Solicitors' Incorporated Practices Order 1991, SI 1991/2684, arts 2(1), 3, 4(a), Sch 1.

3 For these purposes, 'costs' includes fees, charges, disbursements (including stamp duty), expenses and remuneration: Costs of Leases Act 1958 s 2(b).

4 Ibid s 1. On an application for a new lease under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post), the court may order that there be no provision in the new lease that the tenant should pay a proportion of the landlord's solicitors' costs, even though the previous lease (made before the Costs of Leases Act 1958) contained such a provision: Cairnplace Ltd v CBL (Property Investment) Co Ltd [1984] 1 All ER 315, [1984] 1 WLR 696, CA; Lewis and Peat Ltd v Regis Property Co Ltd (1970) 215 Estates Gazette 24. In some circumstances, to require a tenant to pay the landlord's costs may possibly amount to requiring the payment of a premium for the purposes of the Rent Acts: see Southampton City Council v Silk Estates (Developments) Ltd (1967) 203 Estates Gazette 727 (magistrates' court). As to the prohibition of certain premiums for those purposes see PARA 925 et seq post. See also (1968) 65 Law Society's Gazette 79, 212. As to the circumstances in which VAT payable on the landlord's solicitor's costs may be recoverable by the tenant see [1992] NLJ 1625.

122. Tenant's liability.

Where, notwithstanding the statutory provisions as to the costs of leases<sup>1</sup>, the tenant agrees to pay the landlord's costs, the costs for which the tenant is liable are restricted to those which are properly incident to the preparation and execution of the lease by the landlord, including fees of conveyancing counsel when properly employed<sup>2</sup>, of surveyors in respect of the preparation of a plan to be placed on the lease<sup>3</sup>, and of an inventory of fixtures properly appended<sup>4</sup>. The landlord is not entitled to the costs of an agreement, or of preliminary negotiations<sup>5</sup>, or of any matters antecedent to instructions for the lease, such as, in the case of a mining lease, the fees of a mining expert who has been consulted on behalf of the intending landlord<sup>6</sup>, or in other leases the fees of surveyors incurred by the landlord in negotiating the lease<sup>7</sup>; nor, in the absence of agreement, is he entitled to charge against the tenant the costs of third parties whose concurrence is necessary for the grant of the lease<sup>8</sup>. An agreement which has the effect that a party is to pay the whole or part of the costs of an arbitration in any event is only valid if made after the dispute in question has arisen; thus under a covenant by the landlord to renew the lease at the tenant's cost at a rent to be determined by reference to arbitration, the tenant would no longer be liable to pay the costs of the arbitration<sup>9</sup>. Under such a covenant the costs incident to the devolution of title to the reversion are payable by the landlord<sup>10</sup>; but the costs occasioned by the state of the tenant's title are payable by the tenant<sup>11</sup>.

123. Recovery.

Where the tenant is liable to pay the landlord's costs and the landlord pays his own solicitor, the landlord may recover the money so paid from the tenant as money paid by the landlord to the tenant's use<sup>1</sup>. The tenant becomes directly liable to the landlord's solicitor if he instructs or authorises him to prepare the lease<sup>2</sup>. Where negotiations break down, it is a question of fact whether or not the solicitor was employed by the landlord or the prospective tenant or by both<sup>3</sup>. A tenant who is liable to pay the charges of the landlord's solicitor may have the bill assessed<sup>4</sup>.

(iv) Stamp Duty Land Tax and VAT on Grant of Lease

124. Stamp duty land tax; treatment of leases.

Except for a tenancy at will<sup>1</sup>, a tenancy is a chargeable interest for the purposes of stamp duty land tax<sup>2</sup>. A licence to use or occupy land is not, however, a chargeable interest<sup>3</sup>.

Stamp duty land tax is charged on any acquisition of a chargeable interest (a 'land transaction') whether or not there is any instrument effecting the transaction<sup>4</sup>. Stamp duty land tax, which was introduced by the Finance Act 2003, is considered in detail elsewhere in this work<sup>5</sup>, but the particular rules with relation to the treatment of leases are set out below.

In the application of the statutory provisions relating to stamp duty land tax<sup>6</sup> to a lease<sup>7</sup> for a fixed term, no account is to be taken of any contingency as a result of which the lease may determine before the end of the fixed term, or any right of either party to determine the lease or renew it<sup>9</sup>.

For the purposes of those provisions, except for the provision relating to notifiable transactions<sup>9</sup>, a lease for a fixed term and thereafter until determined, or a lease for a fixed term that may continue beyond the fixed term by operation of law, is treated:

- 261 (1) in the first instance as if it were a lease for the original fixed term and no longer;
- 262 (2) if the lease continues after the end of that term, as if it were a lease for a fixed term one year longer than the original fixed term;
- 263 (3) if the lease continues after the end of the term resulting from the application of head (2) above, as if it were a lease for a fixed term two years longer than the original fixed term, and so on<sup>10</sup>. Where the effect of this provision in relation to the continuation of the lease after the end of a fixed term is that additional tax is payable in respect of a transaction or that tax is payable in respect of a transaction where none was payable before:

- 264 (a) the purchaser must deliver a return or further return in respect of that transaction before the end of the period of 30 days after the end of that term;
- 265 (b) the return must include a self-assessment of the amount of tax chargeable in respect of the transaction on the basis of the information contained in the return;
- 266 (c) the tax so chargeable is to be calculated by reference to the rates in force at the effective date of the transaction; and
- 267 (d) the return must be accompanied by payment of the tax or additional tax payable<sup>11</sup>.

For the purposes of those provisions, except for the provision relating to notifiable transactions<sup>12</sup>:

- 268 (i) a lease for an indefinite term<sup>13</sup> is treated in the first instance as if it were a lease for a fixed term of a year;
- 269 (ii) if the lease continues after the end of the term resulting from the application of head (i) above, it is treated as if it were a lease for a fixed term of two years;
- 270 (iii) if the lease continues after the end of the term resulting from the application of head (iii) above, it is treated as if it were a lease for a fixed term of three years, and so on<sup>14</sup>; and no account is to be taken for those purposes of any other statutory provision in England and Wales or Northern Ireland deeming a lease for an indefinite period to be a lease for a different term<sup>15</sup>. Where the effect of this provision in relation to the continuation of the lease after the end of a deemed fixed term is that additional tax is payable in respect of a transaction or that tax is payable in respect of a transaction where none was payable before:

- 271 (A) the purchaser must deliver a return or further return in respect of that transaction before the end of the period of 30 days after the end of that term;
- 272 (B) the return must include a self-assessment of the amount of tax chargeable in respect of the transaction on the basis of the information contained in the return;
- 273 (C) the tax so chargeable is to be calculated by reference to the rates in force at the effective date of the transaction; and
- 274 (D) the return must be accompanied by payment of the tax or additional tax payable<sup>16</sup>.

Where successive leases are granted or treated as granted, whether at the same time or at different times, of the same or substantially the same premises, and those grants are linked transactions, those provisions apply as if the series of leases were a single lease granted at the time of the grant of the first lease in the series for a term equal to the aggregate of the terms of all the leases and in consideration of the rent payable under all of the leases<sup>17</sup>. The grant of later leases in the series is accordingly disregarded for the purposes of those provisions except for the provision<sup>18</sup> relating to a return or further return in consequence of a later linked transaction<sup>19</sup>.

Particular provision is made as to the treatment of rent<sup>20</sup> and rent increases for the purposes of stamp duty land tax<sup>21</sup>. Where a lease is varied so as to reduce the amount of the rent, the variation is treated for the purposes of stamp duty land tax as an acquisition of a chargeable interest by the lessee<sup>22</sup>.

In the case of the grant of a lease, certain tenant's obligations do not count as chargeable consideration for the purposes of stamp duty land tax<sup>23</sup>. Nor does a payment made in discharge of such an obligation count as chargeable consideration<sup>24</sup>.

A reverse premium<sup>25</sup> does not count as chargeable consideration in the case of the grant of a lease<sup>26</sup>. Where, however, under arrangements made in connection with the grant of a lease, the lessee, or any person connected with him or acting on his behalf, pays a deposit, or makes a loan, to any person, and the repayment of all or part of the deposit or loan is contingent on anything done or omitted to be done by the lessee or on the death of the lessee, the amount of the deposit or loan (disregarding any repayment) is to be taken for the purposes of stamp duty land tax to be consideration other than rent given for the grant of the lease<sup>27</sup>.

20 For these purposes, a single sum expressed to be payable in respect of rent, or expressed to be payable in respect of rent and other matters but not apportioned, must be treated as entirely rent; but this is without prejudice to the application of ibid Sch 4 para 4 (chargeable consideration; just and reasonable apportionment: see STAMP DUTIES AND STAMP DUTY RESERVE TAX) where separate sums are expressed to be payable in respect of rent and other matters: Sch 17A para 6(1), (2) (as added: see note 8 supra).

23 Those obligations are listed in Sch 17A para 10(1) (as added (see note 8 supra); amended by the Stamp Duty Land Tax (Amendment to the Finance Act 2003) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/875, regs 2, 4) as follows:

- 1 (1) any undertaking by the tenant to repair, maintain or insure the demised premises;
- 2 (2) any undertaking by the tenant to pay any amount in respect of services, repairs, maintenance or insurance or the landlord's costs of management;
- 3 (3) any other obligation undertaken by the tenant that is not such as to affect the rent that a tenant would be prepared to pay in the open market;
- 4 (4) any guarantee of the payment of rent or the performance of any other obligation of the tenant under the lease;
- 5 (5) any penal rent, or increased rent in the nature of a penal rent, payable in respect of the breach of any obligation of the tenant under the lease;
- 6 (6) any liability of the tenant for costs under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 s 14(2) or the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 60 (costs to be borne by person exercising statutory right to be granted lease: see PARAS 1471, 1724 post);
- 7 (7) any other obligation of the tenant to bear the landlord's reasonable costs or expenses of or incidental to the grant of a lease;
- 8 (8) any obligation under the lease to transfer to the landlord, on the termination of the lease, payment entitlements granted to the tenant under the single payment scheme (ie, the scheme of income support for farmers in pursuance of EC Council Regulation 1782/2003 (OJ L270, 21.10.2003, p 01) in respect of land subject to the lease (see AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTION AND MARKETING vol 1 (2008) PARA 753 et seq).

24 Finance Act 2003 Sch 17A para 10(2) (as added: see note 8 supra).

25 In relation to the grant of a lease, a 'reverse premium' means a premium moving from the landlord to the tenant: ibid Sch 17A para 18(2)(a) (as added: see note 8 supra).

26 Ibid Sch 17A para 17A para 18(1) (as added: see note 8 supra).

27 Ibid Sch 17A para 18A(1) (added by the Finance (No 2) Act 2005 s 49, Sch 10 Pt 1 paras 1, 14). This does not apply in relation to a deposit if the amount that would otherwise fall within this provision in relation to the grant of the lease is not more than twice the relevant maximum rent: Finance Act 2003 Sch 17A para 18A(3) (as so added). The relevant maximum rent is (1) in relation to the grant of a lease, the highest amount of rent payable in respect of any consecutive 12-month period in the first five years of the term; (2) in relation to the assignment of a lease, the highest amount of rent payable in respect of any consecutive 12-month period in the first five years of the term remaining outstanding as at the date of the assignment, the highest amount of rent being determined (in either case) in the same way as the highest amount of rent mentioned in Sch 17A para 7(3) (as added): Sch 17A para 18A(4) (as so added). Tax is not chargeable by virtue of this provision: (a) merely because of Sch 5 para 9(2) (as amended) (which excludes the 0% band in the Tables in s 55(2) (as amended) in cases where the relevant rental figure exceeds £600 a year); or (b) merely because of Sch 6 para 5(4)(b), 6(6)(b), 9(4)(b) or 10(6)(b) (which make similar provision in relation to land which is wholly or partly residential property and is wholly or partly situated in a disadvantaged area): Sch 17A para 18A(5) (as so added). The Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 839 (as amended) (connected persons: see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1258) has effect for the purposes of this provision: Finance Act 2003 Sch 17A para 18A(6) (as so added).

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(5) COMPLETION/(iv) Stamp Duty Land Tax and VAT on Grant of Lease/125. VAT on the grant of a lease.

125. VAT on the grant of a lease.

Subject to specified exceptions<sup>1</sup>, the grant of any interest in or right over land or of any licence to occupy land is an exempt supply for the purposes of VAT<sup>2</sup>. The landlord may, however, elect to waive the exemption in certain circumstances before, on or after the grant of the interest<sup>3</sup>; and in some circumstances the landlord granting a tenancy is liable to a deemed charge to VAT if the exemption is not so waived<sup>4</sup>.

In cases where the landlord has not elected to waive exemption, a payment for the lifting of a restrictive covenant is consideration for an exempt supply<sup>5</sup>. If a landlord pays a tenant an inducement sum to take on a lease (a 'reverse premium') the payment is generally outside the scope of VAT<sup>6</sup>.

VAT is payable by the person making the supply unless there is an agreement that the tax should be paid by the other party<sup>7</sup>.

1 As to the exceptions see the Value Added Tax Act 1994 s 31(1), Sch 9 Pt II, Group 1 (as amended); and VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 156 at heads (10)-(13) in the text. ## (6) CONTENTS OF LEASE

126. Contents of prescribed clauses leases.

A prescribed clauses lease<sup>1</sup> must begin with the prescribed wording<sup>2</sup>, or that wording must appear immediately after any front sheet<sup>3</sup>. The prescribed wording must be set out in the prescribed manner, with side headings appearing as headings if preferred and with the omission of vertical or horizontal lines<sup>4</sup>. That wording requires that the following information is given:

- 275 (1) the date of the lease<sup>5</sup>;
- 276 (2) title number or numbers<sup>6</sup>;
- 277 (3) the full names, addresses and company's registered number, if any, of the landlord and tenant and of any other parties, specifying their capacity<sup>7</sup>;
- 278 (4) in relation to the property, either a full description of the land being leased or a reference to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease in which the land being leased is more fully described, together with a statement that in the case of a conflict between this clause and the remainder of the lease then, for the purposes of registration, this clause will prevail<sup>8</sup>;
- 279 (5) if the lease:
  - 15 20. (a) includes a statement prescribed under the rules about dispositions in favour of a charity<sup>9</sup>, dispositions by a charity<sup>10</sup> or leases under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993<sup>11</sup>, the relevant statement or a reference to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease which contains the statement<sup>12</sup>;
  - 21. (b) is made under, or by reference to, provisions of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967<sup>13</sup>, the Housing Act 1985<sup>14</sup>, the Housing Act 1988<sup>15</sup> or the Housing Act 1996<sup>16</sup>, a statement so stating<sup>17</sup>;
- 16 280 (6) the term for which the property is leased<sup>18</sup>;
- 281 (7) the premium<sup>19</sup>;
- 282 (8) a statement either:
  - 17 22. (a) that the lease does not contain a provision that prohibits or restricts dispositions; or
  - 23. (b) that the lease contains a provision that prohibits or restricts dispositions<sup>20</sup>;

283 (9) in relation to rights of acquisition:

19

24. (a) the tenant's contractual rights to renew the lease, to acquire the reversion or another lease of the property, or to acquire an interest in other land<sup>21</sup>;

25. (b) the tenant's covenant to, or offer to, surrender the lease<sup>22</sup>;

26. (c) the landlord's contractual rights to acquire the lease<sup>23</sup>,

284 either including the relevant provisions or referring to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease which contains the provisions<sup>24</sup>;

285 (10) restrictive covenants given in the lease by the landlord in respect of land other than the property, inserting the relevant provisions or referring to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease which contains the provisions<sup>25</sup>;

286 (11) a reference to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease which sets out the easements<sup>26</sup>:

27. (a) granted by the lease for the benefit of the property<sup>27</sup>;

28. (b) granted or reserved by the lease over the property for the benefit of other property<sup>28</sup>;

287 (12) a reference to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease which sets out an estate rentcharge burdening the property<sup>29</sup>;

288 (13) an application for the standard form of restriction<sup>30</sup>, set out in full together with the title against which it is to be entered<sup>31</sup>; but this may be omitted or deleted if appropriate<sup>32</sup>;

289 (14) where there is more than one person comprising the tenant, the appropriate declaration of trust<sup>33</sup>.

They are to hold the Property on trust for themselves as joint tenants'; or (2) 'The Tenant is more than one person. They are to hold the Property on trust for themselves as tenants in common in equal shares'; or (3) 'The Tenant is more than one person. They are to hold the Property on trust': Sch 1A cl LR 14 (as so added). If the tenant is one person, all the alternative statements are to be omitted or deleted; and if the tenant is more than one person, this clause must be completed by omitting or deleting all inapplicable alternative statements: Sch 1A cl LR 14 (as so added).

126 Contents of prescribed clauses leases

NOTE 7--SI 2003/1417 Sch 1A cl LR3 amended: SI 2008/1919.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(i) In general/127. Usual contents of a lease.

127. Usual contents of a lease.

The usual contents of a lease by deed are:

- 290 (1) the date;
- 291 (2) the parties' names and descriptions;
- 292 (3) the consideration;
- 293 (4) the operative words;
- 294 (5) the parcels or description of the property demised<sup>1</sup>;
- 295 (6) the exceptions and reservations;
- 296 (7) the habendum, that is to say the commencement and duration of the term;
- 297 (8) the reddendum, that is say the amount of rent, and the person to whom, the time at which and the manner in which it is to be paid<sup>2</sup>;
- 298 (9) the tenant's covenants;
- 299 (10) the landlord's covenants; and
- 300 (11) the provisos and conditions.

In case of contradiction between the habendum and the reddendum the habendum prevails<sup>3</sup>.

The matters before the habendum are called the 'premises'<sup>4</sup>. They may also include recitals but recitals are not usual in a lease<sup>5</sup>. If any reference is necessary to a power under which the lease is granted, this is usually inserted in the operative words.

1 In the case of a prescribed clauses lease, the description given at the beginning in compliance with the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 58A(4), Sch 1A cl LR 4 (as added) prevails, for the purposes of registration, over any conflicting description elsewhere in the lease: see PARA 126 ante at head (4) in the text. For the meaning of 'prescribed clauses lease' see PARA 100 ante.

2 Note that the amount of rent is not included in the prescribed wording set out in ibid Sch 1A (as added): see PARA 126 ante.

3 Matthews v Smallwood [1910] 1 Ch 777 at 784.

4 See DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 242-245. A word which has been omitted by mistake may be supplied if other words cannot otherwise be given their proper meaning: see Wight v Dicksons (1813) 1 Dow 141 at 147, HL. Because of the difficulty of enforcing covenants and because of the possibility, since the Rent Acts, of a statutory tenancy arising, it is crucial for the landlord that the identity of all tenants is given in cases covered by those Acts: see Hanstown Properties Ltd v Green [1978] 1 EGLR 185, (1977) 246 Estates Gazette 917, CA.

5 As to the effect of recitals see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 217 et seq; ESTOPPEL vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 1015.

PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(i) In general/128. Date.

128. Date.

A lease by deed takes effect from the date of delivery<sup>1</sup>. Prima facie the date which it bears is the date of delivery; but evidence is admissible to show that it was in fact delivered on a different date<sup>2</sup>. The date of the lease is not necessarily the date of the commencement of the term granted<sup>3</sup>. A lease granted so as to commence at a future date is usually called a future lease or a reversionary lease<sup>4</sup>.

1 See DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 60, 193; 1486 and Co Litt 46b.

2 Steele v Mart (1825) 4 B & C 272 at 279, 280. See DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 193.

3 However, the term of the lease cannot commence prior to the execution and date of delivery of the deed: see Roberts v Church Comrs for England [1972] 1 QB 278, [1973] 3 All ER 703, CA; and PARA 235 post.

4 See PARA 106 ante (where the term 'lease of the reversion' is also discussed).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(i) In general/129. Consideration.

129. Consideration.

Where the only consideration for the lease consists of the rent and the tenant's covenants, it is usual, though not necessary, to insert a reference to these in the premises. Where there is an additional consideration, such as a fine or premium, it is proper to mention this in the premises<sup>1</sup>.

1 If a lease prepared in pursuance of an agreement for a lease is tendered to the tenant for execution, he is not bound to execute it unless the consideration is truly stated: Vonhollen v Knowles (1844) 12 M & W 602. The landlord has a lien on the land for unpaid premium: see Shepherd v Beetham (1877) 6 ChD 597.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(i) In general/130. Demise.

130. Demise.

The relationship of landlord and tenant is one of contract<sup>1</sup>, but a lease also operates as a conveyance. The usual word for this purpose is 'demise' or 'let', but neither those words nor any formal words of conveyance are necessary. Provided that the instrument shows the parties' intent that the one is to divest himself of the possession and the other is to come into the possession for a determinate time<sup>2</sup>, either immediately or in the future, it operates as a lease<sup>3</sup>. A periodic tenancy is for these purposes regarded as of determinate duration; but stipulations which purport to restrict the rights of the parties to determine a periodic tenancy until the happening of a particular event are void if such stipulations are repugnant to the nature of the periodic tenancy which has been granted<sup>4</sup>.

The instrument takes effect as a lease<sup>5</sup> whether it is in the ordinary form of a demise, or in the form of a covenant<sup>6</sup> or agreement<sup>7</sup>, or in the form of an offer to let or take on certain terms and an acceptance appearing on correspondence<sup>8</sup>. A prescribed clauses lease<sup>9</sup>, however, requires completion by registration<sup>10</sup>.

1 See PARA 1 ante.

2 A lease may terminate by effluxion of time or by notice to quit (see PARAS 213, 239 post) or break clause (see PARAS 141-143 post) in relation to a term certain and normally includes a proviso for re-entry (see PARAS 133, 603 post). A lease of uncertain maximum duration is void: Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] 2 AC 386, [1992] 3 All ER 504, HL; Lace v Chantler [1944] KB 368, sub nom Lace v Chandler [1944] 1 All ER 305, CA (lease for duration of war). See also Centaploy Ltd v Matlodge Ltd [1974] Ch 1, [1973] 2 All ER 720 (a term in a weekly tenancy that the tenancy was determinable only by the tenants held to be repugnant to the nature of such a tenancy and accordingly void); Birrell v Carey (1989) 58 P & CR 184, CA (agreement granting exclusive occupation 'for so long as the company is trading' insufficiently certain to constitute a leasehold interest); and see PARA 238 post.

If exclusive possession is to be given, an instrument, even though in form a licence, may operate as a lease: see Doe d Pritchard v Dodd (1833) 5 B & Ad 689 at 692; Hall v Seabright (1669) 1 Mod Rep 14; Doe d Hanley v Wood (1819) 2 B & Ald 724 at 739; and see PARAS 6, 11 ante.

131. Standard form tenancy agreements.

Many landlords use standard form tenancy agreements. The standard terms used in such agreements may be potentially unfair for the purposes of the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1999<sup>1</sup>, which apply in relation to unfair terms in contracts concluded between a seller or a supplier and a consumer<sup>2</sup>. A contractual term which has not been individually negotiated is regarded as unfair if, contrary to the requirement of good faith, it causes a significant imbalance in the parties' rights and obligations arising under the contract, to the detriment of the consumer<sup>3</sup>. The unfairness of a contractual term must be assessed, taking into account the nature of the goods or services for which the contract was concluded and by referring, at the time of conclusion of the contract, to all the circumstances attending the conclusion of the contract and to all the other terms of the contract or of another contract on which it is dependent<sup>4</sup>. In so far as it is in plain intelligible language, the assessment of fairness of a term does not, however, relate:

- 301 (1) to the definition of the main subject matter of the contract; or
- 302 (2) to the adequacy of the price or remuneration, as against the goods or services supplied in exchange<sup>5</sup>.

The Court of Appeal has ruled that the 1999 regulations apply to contracts for the disposal of an interest in or rights of occupation over land, and apply to public authorities such as local housing authorities as 'sellers or suppliers' and the persons to whom they offer accommodation as 'consumers'<sup>6</sup>.

The Office of Fair Trading has issued guidance as to the basis on which enforcement action may be taken and offering suggestions for achieving fairness<sup>7</sup>. The guidance assumes that, in general, landlords can be considered 'suppliers' and private tenants 'consumers' for the purposes of the 1999 Regulations. In the event of a dispute as to whether an individual small landlord is a supplier, it will be for a court to decide whether the regulations apply in that case<sup>8</sup>.

(ii) Covenants, Conditions and Provisos

132. Covenants.

A covenant<sup>1</sup> is an agreement by deed whereby one or more of the parties to the deed stipulates for the truth of certain facts, or is bound to do or not to do a specified thing<sup>2</sup>. 'Covenant' will, however, be construed to cover a stipulation in an agreement under hand if otherwise it would have no effect, as, for example, where a document refers to the 'covenants' contained in a lease which is not by deed<sup>3</sup> and the word is used in this broad sense in both general and legal parlance to describe the contractual obligations of landlord and tenant, and also by statute<sup>4</sup>.

A covenant may be express or implied. An express covenant is an agreement which is framed in express terms, or is inferred on the construction of the entire instrument<sup>5</sup>. An implied covenant, or covenant in law, is one which the law implies either from the nature of the transaction or from the use of certain technical words<sup>6</sup>. There is a variety of circumstances in which the court will supply what is not expressed in a lease<sup>7</sup>, but in general no covenant ought to be implied unless there is such a necessary implication that the court can have no doubt what covenant or undertaking it ought to write into the agreement<sup>8</sup>. An express covenant in a lease excludes an implied covenant dealing with the same subject<sup>9</sup>.

Covenants by a tenant commonly provide for payment of rent<sup>10</sup> and rates and taxes<sup>11</sup>, maintenance<sup>12</sup>, insurance<sup>13</sup>, restrictions on user<sup>14</sup> and on assigning and subletting<sup>15</sup>, and the yielding up of the premises on the determination of the lease<sup>16</sup>.

Covenants by a landlord commonly provide for quiet enjoyment<sup>17</sup>, and for payment of rates and taxes, and for the maintenance of the premises, so far as these obligations are to be borne by him. If an agreement for a lease does not specify what covenants are to be inserted in the lease, the parties may require the insertion of the usual covenants<sup>18</sup>.

In Barrett v Lounova (1982) Ltd [1990] 1 QB 348, [1989] 1 All ER 351, CA, exceptionally, an external repairing covenant was implied on behalf of the landlord to give business efficacy to the contract (there was an express covenant by the tenant to keep the interior in good repair). ### 133. Conditions or provisos.

The terms 'condition' and 'proviso' are now virtually synonymous. Strictly speaking, a condition in a lease is a quality annexed to an estate, by virtue of which it may be defeated, enlarged or created upon an uncertain event<sup>1</sup>. In more modern usage it is a stipulation upon the breach of which, or a stipulation that upon the happening of a particular event, the term may be determined before the appointed period<sup>2</sup>. A condition may be express or implied. The words 'provided always' or 'upon condition' are suitable for introducing an express condition, but no precise form of words is necessary; it is sufficient if the words used were intended to have the effect of creating a condition, and a clause may operate as a condition even though it also includes words of covenant<sup>3</sup>. If the clause constitutes only an agreement on the part of the tenant to do or not to do a specific act, it will not be construed as a condition, but as a covenant<sup>4</sup>. The conditions in a lease commonly include a power of re-entry on non-payment of rent or breach of covenant<sup>5</sup>.

In certain circumstances, it is possible for a stipulation in a lease to have the dual character of a covenant and a condition<sup>6</sup>.

The word 'condition' has, however, acquired a number of other meanings outside the law of landlord and tenant and the word 'proviso' is the more commonly used term in modern conveyancing. A proviso is merely a stipulation which cuts down upon the effect of the main operative part of the instrument which precedes it. Traditionally it commences with words such as 'provided and it is agreed that ...' and often it enables one party to take a step by which that party may readjust the obligations owed by the landlord and the tenant one to the other<sup>7</sup>, for example a proviso for re-entry on non-payment of rent or breach of covenant<sup>8</sup> or an option to renew<sup>9</sup> the lease or to determine the lease<sup>10</sup> or an option for the tenant to purchase the reversion<sup>11</sup>, all of which are conditions properly so called.

A rent review clause is also a stipulation which is sometimes expressed as a proviso<sup>12</sup>. The term 'proviso' is also sometimes used merely to express a qualification or exception to an otherwise wider provision, as, for example, where a repairing covenant is qualified by the exception of liability arising by reason of fair wear and tear<sup>13</sup>.

2 Taylor v Martindale (1842) 1 Y & C Ch Cas 658 at 662.

3 Doe d Henniker v Watt (1828) 8 B & C 308 at 315, where it was 'stipulated and conditioned' that the tenant should not assign the premises otherwise than to his wife and children. This was a condition for the breach of which the landlord was entitled to maintain ejectment: see Co Litt 203b; Earl of Pembroke v Barkley (1601) Gouldsb 130; Harrington v Wise (1596) Cro Eliz 486. A distinction was, however, formerly made between conditions for breach of which a penalty is attached and conditions where there is no penalty. The former are sufficiently protected by the penalty and may be construed as covenants only; the latter would be futile unless enforceable by re-entry: Simpson v Titterell (1591) Cro Eliz 242. The conditions must not be illegal or repugnant to the grant: 4 Bac Abr, Leases and Terms of Years (T2). See further DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 252.

4 Bashir v Lands Comr [1960] AC 44, [1960] 1 All ER 117, PC; Doe d Willson v Phillips (1814) 2 Bing 13 (agreement to give up part of the premises on landlord's requisition); Shaw v Coffin (1863) 14 CBNS 372 (agreement not to sublet without consent); Crawley v Price (1875) LR 10 QB 302.

6 See Bashir v Lands Comr [1960] AC 44, [1960] 1 All ER 117, PC.

7 Such a proviso is, therefore, a unilateral stipulation in the sense that that word is used by Diplock LJ in United Dominions Trust (Commercial) Ltd v Eagle Aircraft Services Ltd [1968] 1 All ER 104 at 108-111, [1968] 1 WLR 74 at 82-84, CA. Whether stipulations of this type are expressed as 'options' or 'provisos' will usually be entirely a matter of drafting technique or fashion and not of substantive significance.

8 See PARA 603 et seq post.

9 See PARAS 139-140 post.

10 See PARAS 141-143 post.

11 See PARAS 135-138 post.

12 The use of the wording of a proviso as opposed to the use of the form of words usually associated with a covenant is not determinative; and many true 'provisos' will be expressed as a covenant by A to do something upon B's triggering that obligation on the part of A as, for example, by serving a notice. As to rent review see PARA 292 et seq post.

13 As to the effect of such a proviso see PARA 442 post.

134. Remedies for breach of covenant or condition.

On the happening of an event specified in a condition subject to which the term was created, the landlord, whether or not the lease contains a proviso for re-entry, may exercise his right of determining the lease, subject to the court's powers to relieve against forfeiture<sup>1</sup>. A proviso for re-entry on breach of covenant operates as a condition; and, therefore, if a lease contains such a proviso, but not otherwise, the remedy of forfeiture is available to the landlord on the breach by the tenant of any of the covenants in it<sup>2</sup>.

Alternatively, a breach of covenant may be remedied by a claim for damages, or, in certain cases, by an injunction or a claim for specific performance<sup>3</sup>. The governing purpose of awarding damages is to put the party whose rights have been violated in the same position, so far as money can do so, as if his rights had been observed<sup>4</sup>. Generally, the measure of damages in the case of a breach of the tenant's covenants is the injury to the value of the reversion<sup>5</sup>; but in some cases the landlord is entitled to the cost of restoring the demised premises to the state in which they would have been if the covenant had been observed<sup>6</sup>. Where the landlord has broken his covenant, the measure of damages is generally the difference between the value of the lease with the covenant performed and its value with the covenant broken<sup>7</sup>.

The grant of an injunction to restrain a breach of covenant is discretionary<sup>8</sup>; and the court will consider (inter alia) whether the breach produces injury to the party seeking the injunction<sup>9</sup>, and will decline to enforce an oppressive covenant by injunction<sup>10</sup>. As a general rule, however, the court will grant an injunction to restrain a breach of a negative covenant without proof of damage being necessary<sup>11</sup>, provided that the words of the covenant are clear<sup>12</sup>. An interim injunction will be granted in an appropriate case, the deciding factor being the balance of convenience between the parties<sup>13</sup>.

Thus, in a proper case the court will restrain the breach of a covenant not to carry on any business, trade or dealings<sup>14</sup>, or a particular trade<sup>15</sup> or trades<sup>16</sup>, or any trade other than a specified trade<sup>17</sup>, or not to sell any goods other than such as shall have been purchased from the landlord<sup>18</sup>. The court will also restrain the breach of a covenant not to alter the demised premises without the consent of the landlord<sup>19</sup>, or not to affix or permit any outward mark or show of business on the demised premises<sup>20</sup>, or not to permit or suffer anything to be done to the annoyance or damage of the landlord's adjoining premises<sup>21</sup>, or not to assign without the landlord's consent<sup>22</sup>. A tenant may also be restrained from committing a breach of a farming covenant<sup>23</sup>.

The landlord is not precluded from obtaining an injunction by the inclusion in the lease of a power of re-entry<sup>24</sup>.

A decree for specific performance of a covenant is also discretionary, and will not be granted where damages would be an adequate remedy, or the performance of the covenant could not be supervised by the court<sup>25</sup>. In general, therefore, specific performance will not be ordered of a covenant to repair<sup>26</sup>, nor of a covenant to provide an employee to perform certain duties<sup>27</sup>, nor of a covenant to build<sup>28</sup>, unless what is to be done is clearly defined and damages would not be an adequate remedy<sup>29</sup>. Nor will specific performance be ordered of a covenant to keep a shop open for trading or to carry on a business<sup>30</sup>. An order for the specific performance of a covenant to repair may, however, in an appropriate case be made against a landlord where there has been a plain breach of the covenant to repair and there is no doubt as to what is required to be done to remedy the breach<sup>31</sup>.

Remedies are also available for breach of particular covenants<sup>32</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(iii) Options/A. OPTION TO PURCHASE/135. Nature of option to purchase.

(iii) Options

A. OPTION TO PURCHASE

135. Nature of option to purchase.

A lease may confer upon the tenant an option to purchase the landlord's interest in the demised premises<sup>1</sup>. The option usually takes the form of a covenant by the landlord that, if the tenant within a specified period gives to the landlord written notice of a specified length of his desire to purchase the fee simple or other interest of the landlord in the premises, the landlord will on payment of a specified purchase price, and of any arrears of rent, convey the demised premises to the tenant<sup>2</sup>. Such an option is collateral to, independent of, and not incident to, the relation of landlord and tenant<sup>3</sup>. It is not, therefore, one of the terms which will be incorporated in the terms of a yearly tenancy created by the tenant holding over after the expiration of the original lease<sup>4</sup> or ordered to be included in a new business lease granted pursuant to an order of the court<sup>5</sup>; and, when the parties agree that a lease is to be extended, unless it is clearly shown that it was their intention that the option to purchase should continue throughout the extended period, it will not be deemed to be one of the terms of the extended tenancy<sup>6</sup>. An option to purchase may, however, be so worded that the benefit of it passes on an assignment of the property comprised in and demised by the lease notwithstanding the omission of any reference in the assignment to the option<sup>7</sup>. It has not yet been determined whether, in the absence of such wording in the option and of any reference to it in the assignment, the benefit of an option to purchase passes on an assignment of the lease<sup>8</sup>.

The rule against perpetuities does not apply to a disposition consisting of the conferring of an option to acquire for valuable consideration an interest reversionary, whether directly or indirectly, on the term of a lease if:

303 (1) the option is exercisable only by the lessee or his successors in title; and 304 (2) it ceases to be exercisable at or before the expiration of one year following the determination of the lease<sup>9</sup>.

If these conditions are not satisfied, the rule against perpetuities does apply and the perpetuity period is 21 years<sup>10</sup>. Where a disposition inter vivos would fall to be treated as void for remoteness if the rights and duties thereunder were capable of transmission to persons other than the original parties and had been so transmitted, it is treated as void as between the person by whom it was made and the person to whom or in whose favour it was made or any successor of his; and no remedy lies in contract or otherwise for giving effect to it or making restitution for its lack of effect<sup>11</sup>.

Subject to the rule against perpetuities, an option may be phrased so as to be binding on the landlord's successors in title. If the option is not phrased so as to be binding on the landlord's successors in title, it does not run with the land and may be enforced only against the landlord and his personal representatives<sup>12</sup>.

An option to purchase, or to renew, is registrable as an estate contract<sup>13</sup>. If the land is registered land, the option may be enforceable against a purchaser of the reversion, even though it has not been protected by entry of notice or otherwise upon the registers, as an interest overriding first registration or a registered disposition<sup>14</sup>.

A tenant who remains in occupation of the demised premises pending the exercise by him of an option to purchase does so as tenant and not solely as potential purchaser so that he is obliged to pay rent<sup>15</sup> unless, as is often the case, on the particular wording of the option clause the exercise of the option itself operates as a surrender of the tenancy<sup>16</sup>.

1 In addition, where the tenancy is a long tenancy at a low rent, the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 confers on certain tenants the right to acquire the freehold: see PARA 1389 et seq post. As to the right to collective enfranchisement exercisable by certain tenants of flats see PARA 1532 et seq post; and as to the right to buy exercisable by secure tenants see PARA 1795 et seq post.

2 The absence of a specified purchase price and of detailed provisions for fixing the purchase price may not prevent a valid exercise of the option: see Grimes (AP) Ltd v Grayshott Motor Co Ltd [1967] EGD 82. Cf King's Motors (Oxford) Ltd v Lax [1969] 3 All ER 665, [1970] 1 WLR 426 (option for renewal of lease); Smith v Morgan [1971] 2 All ER 1500, [1971] 1 WLR 803 (right of pre-emption); Brown v Gould [1972] Ch 53 at 58, [1971] 2 All ER 1505 at 1509, dicta of Megarry J; and see further SALE OF LAND. For methods of valuing the interest to be purchased see Grimes (AP) Ltd v Grayshott Motor Co Ltd supra; cf Re Nagel's Lease, Allen v Little Abbey School (Newbury) Ltd [1974] 3 All ER 34, [1974] 1 WLR 1077. Unless there are indications to the contrary, the court will infer that the price is to be determined by reference to the open market value of the premises subject to the existing lease. As to the enforcing by a local authority of an option to purchase where the contract granting the option was not a reasonable bargain see Re Staines UDC's Agreement, Triggs v Staines UDC [1969] 1 Ch 10, [1968] 2 All ER 1. 3 Woodall v Clifton [1905] 2 Ch 257 at 279, CA, per Romer LJ; Sherwood v Tucker [1924] 2 Ch 440, CA. An option is a right of property in the widest sense of the expression and is in principle capable of assignment: Re Button's Lease, Inman v Button [1964] Ch 263, [1963] 3 All ER 708 (where Griffith v Pehon [1958] Ch 205, [1957] 3 All ER 75, CA and Beesly v Hallwood Estates Ltd [1960] 2 All ER 314, [1960] 1 WLR 549 (affd [1961] Ch 105, [1961] 1 All ER 90, CA) were considered). See further SALE OF LAND.

4 Re Leeds and Batley Breweries Ltd and Bradbury's Lease, Bradbury v Grimble & Co [1920] 2 Ch 548. In this respect such an option differs from an option to renew, the exercise of which is not limited to a particular period, for such an option to renew is exercisable so long as the relationship of landlord and tenant continues: see PARA 140 post. An option to purchase the freehold 'at any time' may be construed restrictively to mean 'at any time during the contractual term'; and, therefore, a statutory tenant may not be able to exercise such an option: Longmuir v Kew [1960] 3 All ER 26, [1960] 1 WLR 862.

5 Pursuant to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 752 post.

6 Sherwood v Tuckey [1924] 2 Ch 440, CA. In such an agreement the word 'lease' prima facie refers to the relationship of landlord and tenant, as a document cannot be extended; but, in the case of an agreement to execute a new lease, the word 'lease' prima facie refers to the document creating the relationship, so that an option to purchase contained in the old document will be incorporated in the new lease: Batchelor v Murphy [1925] Ch 220, CA (affd [1926] AC 63 HL); Hill v Hill [1947] Ch 231, [1947] 1 All ER 54, CA.

7 Griffith v Pelton [1958] Ch 205, [1957] 3 All ER 75, CA (definition of 'lessee' in lease included assigns; option assignable to assignee of the lease); Re Adams and Kensington Vestry (1884) 27 ChD 394, CA. In the former case, as the parties were in doubt whether the benefit of the option had passed with the property on the assignment, the original tenant purported to assign it expressly by a subsequent deed to the assignee of the lease, and the Court of Appeal decided that, if (contrary to its decision) the assignment of the lease was not effectual to pass the option, it would remain vested in the original tenant, who would be competent to assign it to the assignee of the lease.

8 The point was left open in Re Button's Lease, Inman v Button [1964] Ch 263, [1963] 3 All ER 708, where it was suggested that where, in a lease conferring on the tenant an option to purchase, 'the tenant' is expressly defined as including his executors, administrators and assigns, the description may limit the possible assignees to persons who are assignees of the term, but that in the absence of that description the option is assignable to anyone.

9 Perpetuities and Accumulations Act 1964 s 9(1). Section 9(1) applies in relation to an agreement for a lease as it applies in relation to a lease; and 'lessee' is to be construed accordingly: s 9(1).

10 See ibid s 9(2); and PERPETUITIES AND ACCUMULATIONS vol 35 (Reissue) PARA 1037. Section 9(2) does not, however, apply to a right of pre-emption conferred on a public or local authority in respect of land used or to be used for religious purposes where the right becomes exercisable only if the land ceases to be used for those purposes: s 9(2) proviso.

11 See ibid s 10; and PERPETUITIES AND ACCUMULATIONS vol 35 (Reissue) PARAS 1036-1037.

13 le under the Land Charges Act 1972 s 2(1), (4), Class C(iv) (see LAND CHARGES vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARAS 628, 632), although there is no duty on the tenant so to register it (Wright v Dean [1948] Ch 686, [1948] 2 All ER 415; Beesly v Hallwood Estates Ltd [1960] 2 All ER 314, [1960] 1 WLR 549; affd on another point [1961] Ch 105, [1961] 1 All ER 90, CA). The failure of the tenant so to register does not determine the original landlord's contractual liability. The tenant may sue the original landlord for damages if the assignee of the reversion refuses to sell the property when called upon to do so: Wright v Dean supra. Once an option is registered, a later potential purchaser from the grantor is sufficiently warned by that registration; additional registration of the contract of sale resulting from the exercise of the option is not required: Armstrong & Holmes Ltd v Holmes [1994] 1 All ER 826, [1993] 1 WLR 1482.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(iii) Options/A. OPTION TO PURCHASE/136. Conditions precedent to exercise of option.

136. Conditions precedent to exercise of option.

Any matters which by the terms of the option are made conditions precedent to its exercise must be strictly observed<sup>1</sup>. Thus, the notice must be given within the specified period<sup>2</sup>; and, if payment of the purchase money at the expiration of the notice is made a condition precedent, the payment must be duly made<sup>3</sup>. It is not essential that the tenant is to have performed all the stipulations of the lease, unless that performance is made a condition precedent<sup>4</sup>. If performance of the covenants is made a condition precedent, the tenant satisfies the condition if there are no subsisting breaches of covenant<sup>5</sup> at the operative date<sup>6</sup>.

Provided that at the time when the option is exercised the lease is still current, that is to say it has not already been determined for breach of covenant, the exercise of the option creates the relationship of vendor and purchaser. Whether the exercise of the option operates to determine or merely suspend the parties' rights as landlord and tenant, or creates new legal rights co-existent therewith, depends on the parties' intentions<sup>7</sup>. Thus, where the option provides for interest on the purchase money to be paid as from the date of the exercise of the option or some other date, the intention to determine the lease at that date may be inferred<sup>8</sup>.

1 This rule is applicable to options of all sorts, including options to renew and determine leases (see PARA 139 et seq post): see Finch v Underwood (1876) 2 Ch D 310; Hare v Nicoll [1966] 2 QB 130, [1966] 1 All ER 285, CA; West Country Cleaners (Falmouth) Ltd v Saly [1966] 3 All ER 210, [1966] 1 WLR 1485, CA. See also, however, Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd [1997] AC 749, [1997] 3 All ER 352, HL, cited in PARA 142 the text and note 4 post.

2 In the case of an option time is of the essence of the contract: Lord Ranelagh v Melton (1864) 2 Drew & Sm 278; and see the general observations of the House of Lords in United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council, Cheapside Land Development Co Ltd v Messels Service Co [1978] AC 904, [1977] 2 All ER 62, HL, where rent review clauses were distinguished as not being options at all, so that in respect of those clauses time was not of the essence (see PARA 295 post). See also Riddell v Durnford (1893) 37 Sol Jo 267 (six calendar months' previous written notice held to mean at least six months' notice expiring before the date of purchase). The landlord may, however, by his conduct waive the delay: Pegg v Wisden (1852) 16 Beav 239. For other examples of judicial construction of provisions as to time see Wheatley v Burrell Enterprises Ltd [1963] EGD 393, CA; Page v Mallow Investments Ltd (1974) 29 P & CR 168; Afford v Till (1989) 60 P & CR 21, [1990] 2 EGLR 44, CA (tenant held able to exercise option to purchase by service of a notice, even though he had failed to comply with the conditions for the exercise of the option after service of an earlier notice, there being no provision, or grounds for implying such a provision, limiting the tenant to a single attempt at exercising the option); E Alton & Co Ltd v Orchard Development Holdings Ltd [1998] JPL 1138, CA (condition requiring submission of planning application and payment of relevant fee not complied with in time; option to purchase lapsed).

It is not necessary for a solicitor's letter referring to the option and purporting to exercise it to make specific reference to the notice period required: see Taylor v Crotty [2006] All ER (D) 32 (Oct), CA.

3 Lord Ranelagh v Melton (1864) 2 Drew & Sm 278; Weston v Collins (1865) 34 LJ Ch 353; Dawson v Dawson (1837) 8 Sim 346; Brooke v Garrod (1857) 3 K & J 608 (affd 2 De G & J 62) (option of purchase in a will); Afford v Till (1989) 60 P & CR 21, [1990] 2 EGLR 44, CA (payment of deposit required within three months after giving of notice). It is otherwise if payment is not a condition precedent: Mills v Haywood (1877) 6 ChD 196; Cockwell v Romford Sanitary Steam Laundry Ltd [1939] 4 All ER 370, CA.

4 Thus, the option may be exercised notwithstanding that there has been a breach by the tenant of a covenant to insure: Green v Low (1856) 22 Beav 625. Where the option is subject to a condition that the tenant in the meantime is to have 'duly' paid his rent, 'duly' does not mean punctually; and, if all rent is paid up to the exercise of the option, delay in payment is immaterial: Starkey v Barton [1909] 1 Ch 284. If performance of the covenants is made a condition precedent, the condition will be construed strictly: see West Country Cleaners (Falmouth) Ltd v Saly [1966] 3 All ER 210, [1966] 1 WLR 1485, CA; Bairstow Eves (Securities) Ltd v Ripley (1992) 65 P & CR 220, [1992] 2 EGLR 47, CA (covenant to paint internally and externally in last 12 months before end of term not complied with by painting 20 and 17 months before end of term).

5 A subsisting breach is one in respect of which the landlord has a cause of action based upon a breach, whether for forfeiture or damages or both: Bass Holdings Ltd v Morton Music Ltd [1988] Ch 493 at 511 at 517, [1987] 2 All ER 1001 at 1005, CA, per Kerr LJ and at 528 and 1013 per Nicholls LJ. A breach which is not subsisting is spent; but spent breaches do not destroy the tenant's right to exercise the option, whether the spent breaches were of positive or negative covenants: Bass Holdings Ltd v Morton Music Ltd supra. If breaches are otherwise to be regarded as spent, they will not be treated as subsisting breaches merely because a right to claim nominal damages is not yet statute-barred; but, if only nominal damages are recoverable for the breach, this does not exclude the breach from being taken into account as a subsisting breach: Bairstow Eves (Securities) Ltd v Ripley (1992) 65 P & CR 220 at 226, CA, per Scott LJ. Where, however, the tenant was required to have 'reasonably performed and observed' the covenants up to the operative date, the word 'reasonably' gives the court a discretion and then the tenant's past conduct may be considered: Bassett v Whiteley (1982) 45 P & CR 87, CA.

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(iii) Options/A. OPTION TO PURCHASE/137. How and by whom option exercisable.

137. How and by whom option exercisable.

The terms of the option usually require that it is to be exercised in writing; but this requirement, even where not expressed, is implied, as it is the intention that the resulting contract is to be binding on both parties<sup>1</sup>. An option may be exercised by service of a notice signed by the grantee only notwithstanding the statutory requirements<sup>2</sup> requiring a contract for the sale or other disposition of an interest in land to be signed by or on behalf of each party to the contract<sup>3</sup>. If the option is given to the tenant and his assigns, it is exercisable only by the person in whom the term is vested, and consequently cannot be exercised by an equitable assignee of the term<sup>4</sup>. On the tenant's death the benefit of the option passes with the lease to his personal representative<sup>5</sup>. Where the lease is granted by trustees, notice must be given to all the trustees or their survivors<sup>6</sup>. An option granted to an intending assignee of a lease made by deed to which the intending assignee is not a party may be enforced by the intending assignee<sup>7</sup>.

If the circumstances show that the parties must have contemplated that the postal service might be used as a means of communicating on all subjects connected with the option agreement, the option is validly exercised as soon as a notice of acceptance is posted<sup>8</sup>; but the mere posting of such a notice is not sufficient if the terms of the agreement indicate that acceptance must actually be communicated to the offeror<sup>9</sup>.

1 Birmingham Canal Co v Cartwright (1879) 11 ChD 421 at 434. The parties may waive this requirement: see Beatson v Nicholson (1842) 6 Jur 620. Notwithstanding the obvious or evident error in a tenant's notice, the notice is valid if when read in its context it is sufficiently clear to leave a reasonable recipient in no reasonable doubt as to its terms: see Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd [1997] AC 749, [1997] 3 All ER 352, HL; and see eg Peaceform Ltd v Cussens [2006] All ER (D) 174 (Oct), where this test was not satisfied because the expiry date of the notice period was neither clearly defined, nor clear from the context.

138. Effect of exercise of option.

Where the option is duly exercised, a contract arises for the sale and purchase of the demised premises and the usual consequences of such a contract follow<sup>1</sup>. The tenant is not, on the exercise of the option, entitled to the benefit of the landlord's insurance policy; but, where the option is exercised on the understanding that the landlord will rebuild premises which have been damaged by fire, and the landlord defaults on that understanding, the landlord is not entitled to specific performance<sup>2</sup>. The exercise of an option to purchase all the estate, interest and title vested in the landlord at the date of the lease does not entitle the tenant to demand that the landlord is to redeem a mortgage made before the grant of the lease<sup>3</sup>. The landlord must, however, discharge incumbrances incurred after the date of the lease even when the tenant has agreed to accept the landlord's title<sup>4</sup>.

1 Cockwell v Romford Sanitary Steam Laundry Ltd [1939] 4 All ER 370, CA (relationship of landlord and tenant ceased on expiration of notice exercising the option; no rent payable thereafter); Watney v Boardley [1975] 2 All ER 644, [1975] 1 WLR 857. It is a question of the construction of the contract in each case to decide whether the exercise of the option puts an end to the relationship of landlord and tenant as soon as the option is exercised (or on the contractual completion date as in Watney v Boardley supra), or whether the relationship of vendor and purchaser co-exists with that of landlord and tenant so that the relationship of landlord and tenant may survive the determination of the contract to purchase. ## B. OPTION TO RENEW LEASE

139. Option for further lease.

A lease which creates a tenancy for a term of years may confer on the tenant an option to take a lease for a further time<sup>1</sup>. Such an option constitutes an offer which the landlord is contractually precluded from withdrawing so long as the option remains exercisable<sup>2</sup>; and it may be possible to exercise the option by conduct<sup>3</sup>. The option may be so phrased that the tenant is entitled to a fresh lease containing all the terms, including the option to renew, contained in his original lease, in which case the lease is perpetually renewable<sup>4</sup>. Unlike an option to purchase, an option to renew is never affected by the rule against perpetuities, even though the new lease is not to be in terms similar to those of the original one<sup>5</sup>. An option to renew runs with the land and with the reversion, and so both the landlord's and the tenant's successors in title are bound<sup>6</sup>. It is an interest in land capable of assignment<sup>7</sup>; and, on the tenant's bankruptcy, the option vests in his trustee in bankruptcy<sup>8</sup>. A covenant to pay a sum if the tenant does not exercise an option to renew does not run with the land and cannot be enforced against the landlord's assignee<sup>9</sup>. An option to renew, like an option to purchase is, however, registrable as an estate contract under the Land Charges Act 1972<sup>10</sup>.

1 Moss v Barton (1866) LR 1 Eq 474; Austin v Newham [1906] 2 KB 167, DC. Similarly a lease for a fixed term may contain an option for a further yearly tenancy with the same covenants (Brown v Trumper (1858) 26 Beav 11; Jones v Nixon (1862) 1 H & C 48), and vice versa (Hersey v Giblett (1854) 18 Beav 174 (term held to run from the commencement of the yearly tenancy)); but the right to the lease may be lost by delay (Nunn v Truscott (1849) 3 De G & Sm 304). If the tenant continues in possession by himself or his undertenant after the original term without exercising his option, he is liable for the rent in a claim for use and occupation: Christy v Tancred (1840) 7 M & W 127; Waring v King (1841) 8 M & W 571. If the lease does not state by whom the option is to be exercisable, it is exercisable by the tenant only: Lewis v Stephenson (1898) 67 LJQB 296. As to the right to acquire an extended lease, where the tenancy is a long tenancy at a low rent, under the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 see PARA 1389 et seq post; and as to the right to acquire a new lease under the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 see PARA 1671 et seq post. This apart, a unilateral contract may never give rise to any obligation on the part of the promisor; it will only do so on the occurrence of the event specified in the contract, viz the doing (or refraining from doing) by the promisee of a particular thing': United Dominion Trust (Commercial) Ltd v Eagle Aircraft Services Ltd, United Dominion Trust (Commercial) Ltd v Eagle Aviation Ltd at 109 and at 83 per Diplock LJ. #### 140. Exercise of option.

A tenant who wishes to exercise an option to renew must conform with the conditions in the lease as to its exercise<sup>1</sup>, and those conditions will be strictly construed<sup>2</sup>. In general the option must be exercised by a notice given at or before the stated time before the termination of the lease<sup>3</sup>. If the tenant purports to exercise the option by a notice given before such a stated time, he must do so at a reasonable time before that stated time<sup>4</sup>. If no time is stated in which the option is to be exercised, the right to do so will continue so long as the relationship of landlord and tenant exists, even though the original term has expired<sup>5</sup>; but a landlord who has power to determine the tenancy at the end of some period prior to that at which the exercise of the option takes effect may lawfully do so at that time, notwithstanding that the tenant has given notice of his intention to exercise the option<sup>6</sup>.

If the option does not state the terms of renewal, the new lease will be for the same period and on the same terms as the original lease, so far as those terms arise out of the relationship of landlord and tenant<sup>7</sup>, but more often the clause which contains the option will specify machinery and/or a formula for the determination of the new rent (and, rarely, the new terms) for the new lease. The absence of any specified machinery for settling the new rent is not fatal if there is a formula to determine the new rent which the court can apply<sup>8</sup>.

In most cases, a contract for the renewal of a lease for a term exceeding 60 years from the termination of the lease is void<sup>9</sup>. Covenants to renew are collateral to the relationship of landlord and tenant and will not be incorporated in the new lease unless it is clearly shown that that was the parties' intention<sup>10</sup>.

1 Thus, an option to take a lease at a specified rent is not validly exercised by a notice demanding a lease at some lower rent: Mauray v Durley Chine (Investments) Ltd [1953] 2 QB 433, [1953] 2 All ER 458, CA. See also Newman v Dorrington Developments Ltd [1975] 3 All ER 928, [1975] 1 WLR 1642 (option to renew at 'the commercial yearly rack rent' not rendered unenforceable merely because the maximum rent lawfully recoverable was controlled by statute).

2 If the option is exercisable only on condition that the tenant has performed the covenants of the lease, any subsisting breach of covenant at the operative date will prevent its exercise, even though trivial and the landlord has been silent as to the breach: Bass Holdings Ltd v Morton Music Ltd [1988] Ch 493 at 511, [1987] 2 All ER 1001, CA; Bairstow Eves (Securities) Ltd v Ripley (1992) 65 P & CR 220, [1992] 2 EGLR 47, CA; Hare v Nicoll [1966] 2 QB 130, [1966] 1 All ER 285, CA; West Country Cleaners (Falmouth) v Saly [1966] 3 All ER 210, [1966] 1 WLR 1485, CA. Cf Gardner v Blaxill [1960] 2 All ER 457, [1960] 1 WLR 752. See further PARA 539 post. For the meaning of 'subsisting breach of covenant' see PARA 136 note 5 ante.

3 In Spiro v Glencrown Properties Ltd [1991] Ch 537, [1991] 1 All ER 600 it was held that an option to renew required by the terms of the lease to be exercised by service of notice on the landlord could be validly exercised by service of notice signed by the grantee only without its having to be countersigned by the grantor notwithstanding the statutory requirement that a contract for the sale or other disposition of an interest in land must be signed by or on behalf of each party to the contract: see PARA 79 ante. It is sufficient that the original grant of the option satisfies the necessary statutory formalities.

Cf King's Motors (Oxford) Ltd v Lax [1969] 3 All ER 665, [1970] 1 WLR 426 (option to renew 'at such rental as may be agreed' held to be void for uncertainty); doubted in Corson v Rhuddlan Borough Council (1989) 59 P & CR 185, [1990] 1 EGLR 255, CA (option to renew at 'a rental to be agreed [but not to exceed £1,150 per annum]' upheld, it being open to the court to imply a term that the rent was to be a fair rent with a specified upper limit).

If the machinery which the parties have provided for determining the rent payable fails, the court may substitute its own machinery: Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd v Eggleton [1983] 1 AC 444, [1982] 3 All ER 1, HL. See also Booker Industries Ltd v Wilson Parking (Qld) Pty Ltd (1982) 43 ALR 68 (similar result).

In Rothwell v Wakeling (1974) 29 P & CR 234 the words of an option to renew were held to mean that the tenant was entitled to a new lease at the same rent as in the previous lease. In National Westminster Bank Ltd v BSC Footwear Ltd (1980) 42 P & CR 90, [1981] 1 EGLR 89, CA, and Bracknell Development Corp v Greenlees Lennards Ltd (1981) 260 Estates Gazette 500, an option to renew 'at the then prevailing market rent' was held to require the determination of a single rent payable for the whole of the new term and did not empower the arbitrator to determine a rent subject to periodic review. See also Plummer v Tibsco Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 102 [2002] 1 EGLR 29, [2002] 12 EG 137 (tenant compromised rights under original option to renew by entering new lease on different terms).

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(6) CONTENTS OF LEASE/(iii) Options/C. OPTION TO DETERMINE LEASE/141. By whom option exercisable.

C. OPTION TO DETERMINE LEASE

141. By whom option exercisable.

A lease for a term of years may contain an option for the parties<sup>1</sup> or one of them to determine the lease at a stated time or times, or on the happening of stated events, before the expiration of the term<sup>2</sup>. Usually such an option is expressly made exercisable by the tenant only; and, if the lease is silent as to the person who is to exercise it, it may be exercised only by the tenant<sup>3</sup>.

If the lease has been assigned, the option is exercisable by the person in whom the term is for the time being legally vested<sup>4</sup>. The option may not, therefore, be exercised by an equitable assignee<sup>5</sup>, or by a beneficiary of the person in whom the term is legally vested<sup>6</sup>, unless the beneficiary was duly authorised for that purpose<sup>7</sup>.

In the case of a lease to two or more joint tenants with a proviso enabling the tenants to determine the lease by notice in writing, a notice by one of the tenants without evidence of authority from the others is not sufficient<sup>8</sup>.

An option to determine the lease may be made personal to the original tenant and in such cases the right is not assignable<sup>9</sup>.

1 A lease which is determinable 'if the parties think fit' may be determined only by the consent of both parties: Fowell v Tranter (1864) 3 H & C 458; Colton v Lingham (1815) 1 Stark 39.

2 If the option is exercisable by the landlord, and the tenant sells and assigns the lease with a stipulation that the purchase money is to be returned if the landlord determines the lease and the assignee 'leaves the house', the money is returnable if the tenancy is legally determined, notwithstanding that the assignee in fact remains in the house as a member of the family of the new tenant: Lucas v Rideout (1868) LR 3 HL 153.

3 Dann v Spurrier (1803) 3 Bos & P 399, overruling on this point Goodright d Hall v Richardson (1789) 3 Term Rep 462; and see Dann v Spurrier (1802) 7 Ves 231 at 236; Doe d Webb v Dixon (1807) 9 East 15; Price v Dyer (1810) 17 Ves 356 at 363; Fallon v Robins (1865) 16 I Ch R 422; cf Powell v Smith (1872) LR 14 Eq 85. A lease for three, six or nine years is a lease for nine years determinable by the tenant at the end of three or six years: Goodright d Hall v Richardson supra; cf Ferguson v Cornish (1760) 2 Burr 1032; and see 3 Term Rep 463 note (a). See also Lemmerbell Ltd v Britannia LAS Direct Ltd [1998] 3 EGLR 67, [1998] 48 EG 188, CA (lease permitted exercise of option by tenant's successors in title; notice given by party erroneously described as such was invalid).

4 Consequently, if he cannot be found, neither the original tenant nor a previous assignee may determine the lease: Seaward v Drew (1898) 67 LJQB 322. It appears (for the report is scanty) that it was held in Phippos v Callegari (1910) 54 Sol Jo 635 that, if a tenant for a term of 21 years, determinable at the end of seven or 14 years at his option, sublets the premises for a term exceeding 14 years, he ceases to be entitled to give a valid notice determining his own lease; but it may be that the result of such a transaction is merely to expose the tenant to a claim by the subtenant to restrain the tenant from exercising the option, as to do so would derogate from the tenant's grant of the sub-term, or to a claim for damages for that derogation where the option had already been exercised. It is unclear what the effect of the grant of the sub-term is as between landlord and tenant in those circumstances: see Bampton Property Group Ltd v Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District (1972) 223 Estates Gazette 2135, CA, where Phippos v Callegari supra was considered although the report does not indicate this.

7 Jones v Phipps (1868) LR 3 QB 567; and see Brown v Peto [1900] 1 QB 346, as reported in 16 TLR 131 at 132 per Bigham J; Re Knight and Hubbard's Underlease, Hubbard v Highton [1923] 1 Ch 130. As to service of a notice by an agent of the landlord see Townsend's Carriers Ltd v Pfizer Ltd (1977) 33 P & CR 361.

8 Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council v Monk [1992] 1 AC 478 at 490, [1992] 1 All ER 1 at 9, HL, per Lord Bridge of Harwich; and see Re Viola's Indenture of Lease, Humphrey v Stenbury [1909] 1 Ch 244, distinguishing Doe d Aslin v Summersett (1830) 1 B & Ad 135.

9 Brown & Root Technology Ltd v Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd [2001] Ch 733, [1997] 1 EGLR 39, CA. However, the option remains exercisable until assignment of the legal estate, so that in the absence of registration of the assignment (or, in the case of unregistered land, the execution of the deed of assignment and the consequent conveyance of the legal estate) a notice to terminate may be served by the original tenant: Brown & Root Technology Ltd v Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd supra.

142. Conditions of option.

As the exercise of the option by the tenant nullifies the covenant to pay rent during the residue of the term, and may relieve him from liability under repairing covenants<sup>1</sup>, the requirements of the proviso conferring the option must be strictly observed<sup>2</sup>; but this is subject to the general rule now applicable to the validity of notices served by a landlord or tenant<sup>3</sup>, so that a notice exercising the option will be valid provided that, when it is construed objectively in its context, it would unambiguously inform a reasonable recipient how and when it is to operate<sup>4</sup>. If the terms of the option require that the tenant is to have paid all arrears of rent and performed the covenants on his part, the payment and performance are a condition precedent to the exercise of the option<sup>5</sup>, and must be fulfilled at the date of the determination of the term for the exercise of the option to be effective<sup>6</sup>. Where the option is to determine the lease for building or other purposes, there is no right to determine the lease if the landlord has no intention of using the land for those purposes<sup>7</sup>. The period when the lease may be determined is to be reckoned from the commencement of the term, not from the date of the lease<sup>8</sup>.

Where the break clause provides that the tenant can give notice of termination on a specified date if it has 'materially complied' with all its obligations, the test of material compliance is an objective one and materiality is to be assessed by reference to the ability of the landlord to relet or sell the property without delay or additional expenditure. Where the provision is absolute then any breach precludes an exercise of the break clause, but there is no justification for attributing to the parties an intention that the insertion of the word 'material' was intended to permit only breaches which were trivial or trifling<sup>9</sup>. A minor mistake in a notice seeking to operate a break clause will not render it ineffective to terminate the tenancy<sup>10</sup>.

1 Dickinson v St Aubyn [1944] KB 454, [1944] 1 All ER 370, CA (tenant who covenanted to paint in 'the last quarter of the said term' of seven years held not to be liable to paint on determination of the lease at the end of five years).

2 Cadby v Martinez (1840) 11 Ad & El 720 (notice given for Midsummer instead of Michaelmas). If, however, the meaning of a notice would be quite clear to a reasonable person reading it, the notice is valid, even if it contains a clerical error: Carradine Properties Ltd v Aslam [1976] 1 All ER 573, [1976] 1 WLR 442. A break notice may be read together with a covering letter and if, from those documents, the notice is clear and no reasonable tenant would be misled, the notice is valid: Keith Bayley Rogers & Co (a firm) v Cubes Ltd (1975) 31 P & CR 412; Germax Securities Ltd v Spiegel (1978) 37 P & CR 204, CA. If the notice determining the lease is to be in writing, oral notice is not sufficient: Legg d Scot v Benion (1738) Willes 43. The notice may be in the form of a notice to quit (see PARA 221 post) referring to the determinable nature of the lease (Giddens v Dodd (1856) 3 Drew 485); or, in the case of a landlord's notice relating to business premises, in the form prescribed under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 716 post) (Scholl Manufacturing Co Ltd v Clifton (Slim-Line) Ltd [1967] Ch 41, [1966] 3 All ER 16, CA). Subject to that, the date specified in the lease as the date by which the option to determine is to be exercised is of the essence of the contract: see United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council, Cheapside Land Development Co Ltd v Messels Service Co [1978] AC 904 at 929, [1977] 2 All ER 62 at 71-72, HL, per Lord Diplock.

In the last two cases it was held that the conditions did not cease to be conditions precedent by reason of the landlord's right to sue for breaches of covenant prior to the determination being preserved; and, even though in the absence of such a proviso it has been held that the landlord has a right to sue for those breaches (Blore v Giulini [1903] 1 KB 356), it is still open to doubt whether, if the effect of the determination is to render the lease void, any such right continues in the absence of such a proviso (Burch v Farrows Bank Ltd supra at 611). ### 143. Release of option.

If the option is contained in a lease made by deed, it may be released at law only by an instrument by deed<sup>1</sup>; but in equity the form of release is immaterial if it is made for value<sup>2</sup>. Under a power to surrender and deliver up the premises at stated periods a formal surrender is not required<sup>3</sup>; and, although the notice of surrender is required to be in writing, the surrender may be proved by the tenant's oral admission<sup>4</sup>.

(7) VALIDATION OF DEFECTIVE LEASES

144. Validation of defective leases in equity.

In favour of a purchaser for value, equity will relieve against the defective execution of a power, although not against its non-execution<sup>1</sup>. For this purpose a lessee is a purchaser for value<sup>2</sup>. Consequently, where a lease is void at law through failure to comply with a mere formality required by the power, equity will relieve against the defect and will enforce the granting of a valid lease<sup>3</sup>. Upon the same principle a contract by a tenant for life to grant a lease under a power conferred by the settlement may be enforced after his death against the remainderman<sup>4</sup> or may be properly carried out by trustees<sup>5</sup>.

- 1 Shannon v Bradstreet (1803) 1 Sch & Lef 52 at 62; cf Ellard v Lord Llandaff (1810) 1 Ball & B 241. As to execution and attestation it is sufficient if the lease is by deed attested by two witnesses, notwithstanding that further or other formalities are required by the terms of the power: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 159(1); and DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 48. Equity will not relieve against the defective execution of a power which is originally in its nature legal, such as a statutory power: Earl of Darlington v Pulteney (1775) 1 Cowp 260 at 267.
- 2 Campbell v Leach (1775) Amb 740 at 748; Long v Rankin (1822) Sugden on Powers (8th Edn) 895 at 900, HL, per Abbott CJ; Re King's Leasehold Estates, ex p East of London Rly Co (1873) LR 16 Eq 521 at 525; Shepherd v Beetham (1877) 6 ChD 597 (as to premium); cf Donnell v Church and Clark (1842) 4 I Eq R 630. A lessee at a rack rent is not perhaps entitled to the interposition of equity unless he has expended money on the estate or there are other special circumstances which would make it unjust to deprive him of the lease: see Sugden on Powers (8th Edn) 567.
- 3 Doe d Collins v Weller (1798) 7 Term Rep 478 at 480; Clark v Smith (1842) 9 Cl & Fin 126 at 141, HL. Where, however, a necessary consent has not been obtained, the court will not enforce an agreement for a lease under the power: Lawrenson v Butler (1802) 1 Sch & Lef 13.
- 4 Shannon v Bradstreet (1803) 1 Sch & Lef 52; Dowell v Dew (1843) 12 LJ Ch 164. #### 145. Statutory validation of defective exercise of power.

Where, in the intended exercise of any power of leasing, whether conferred by an Act of Parliament or any other instrument, a lease<sup>1</sup> (an 'invalid lease'), not being a lease of land held on charitable, ecclesiastical or public trusts, is granted, which by reason of any failure to comply with the terms of the power is invalid, then:

305 (1) as against the person entitled after the determination of the interest of the grantor to the reversion<sup>2</sup>; or

306 (2) as against any other person who, subject to any lease properly granted under the power, would have been entitled to the land comprised in the lease, the lease, if it was made in good faith and the lessee<sup>3</sup> has entered thereunder, takes effect in equity as a contract<sup>4</sup> for the grant, at the request of the lessee, of a valid lease under the power, of like effect as the invalid lease, subject to such variations as may be necessary in order to comply with the terms of the power<sup>5</sup>. A lessee under an invalid lease is not, however, by virtue of any such implied contract, entitled to obtain a variation of the lease if the other persons who would have been bound by the contract are willing and able to confirm the lease without variation<sup>6</sup>.

Where a lease granted in the intended exercise of such a power is invalid by reason of the grantor not having power to grant the lease at the date thereof, but the grantor's interest in the land comprised therein continues after the time when he might, in the exercise of the power, have properly granted a lease in the like terms, the lease takes effect as a valid lease in like manner as if it had been granted at that time<sup>7</sup>.

Where, during the continuance of the possession taken under an invalid lease, the person for the time being entitled, subject to such possession, to the land comprised therein or to the rents and profits thereof, is able to confirm the lease without variation, the lessee or other person who would have been bound by the lease had it been valid is bound, at the request of the person so able to confirm the lease, to accept a confirmation<sup>8</sup> thereof, and thereupon the lease has effect and is deemed to have had effect as a valid lease from the grant thereof<sup>9</sup>.

Where a receipt or memorandum in writing confirming an invalid lease is, upon or before the acceptance of rent thereunder, signed by or on behalf of the person accepting the rent, the acceptance is deemed, as against that person, to be a confirmation of the lease<sup>10</sup>.

Where a valid power of leasing is vested in or may be exercised by a person who grants a lease which, by reason of the determination of the grantor's interest or otherwise, cannot have effect and continuance according to terms thereof independently of the power, the lease is deemed<sup>11</sup> to have been granted in the intended exercise of the power although the power is not referred to in the lease<sup>12</sup>. If, however, the lease is granted by a stranger to the power<sup>13</sup>, or if the grantor has deprived himself of the power<sup>14</sup>, the lease is not deemed to be granted in the intended exercise of the power.

Not every defect in a lease granted in intended exercise of a power may be cured. Where a lease was invalid on the technical ground that it did not take effect in possession within 12 months after its date<sup>15</sup>, the lessee was not entitled to claim that the lease took effect in equity in the absence of evidence that the lease reserved the best rent and was a proper lease in all other respects<sup>16</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'lease' includes an underlease or other tenancy: Law of Property Act 1925 s 154.

2 The grantor will be estopped from denying the validity of the lease: see PARA 4 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'lessee' includes an underlessee and a person deriving title under a lessee or underlessee: Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1)(xxiii).

5 Law of Property Act 1925 s 152(1), (7). Section 152 applies to leases whenever created (s 154); and takes effect without prejudice to the provisions in the Law of Property Act 1925 for the grant of leases in the name and on behalf of the estate owner of the land affected (s 152(8)). As to the saving of rights of lessees and lessors see PARA 146 post.

The statutory provisions relating to the validation of leases<sup>1</sup> do not affect prejudicially:

- 307 (1) any right of action or other right or remedy to which, but for those provisions or any enactment replaced by those provisions<sup>2</sup>, the lessee<sup>3</sup> named in an invalid lease<sup>4</sup> would or might have been entitled under any covenant on the grantor's part for title or quiet enjoyment contained therein or implied thereby; or
- 308 (2) any right of re-entry or other right or remedy to which, but for those provisions or any enactment replaced thereby, the grantor or other person for the time being entitled to the reversion expectant on the termination of the lease would or might have been entitled by reason of any breach of the covenants, conditions or provisions contained in the lease and binding on the lessee<sup>5</sup>.

Application may be made:

- 309 (1) for the variation of the provisions of a lease of a flat<sup>1</sup>;
- 310 (2) for the variation of insurance provisions of a lease of a dwelling house other than a flat<sup>2</sup>; and the court also has power to modify certain covenants in leases<sup>3</sup>.

Where premises are subject to a compulsory rights order, the court has power, on reference being duly made, to determine whether any of the terms and conditions of the tenancy, other than a tenancy in relation to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies or a farm business tenancy, should be varied in consequence of any change in the state of the premises while they are subject to the order<sup>4</sup>.

148. Stamp duty land tax and variation of leases.

Where a lease is varied so as to increase the amount of the rent, the variation is treated for the purposes of stamp duty land tax as if it were the grant of a lease in consideration of the additional rent made payable by it<sup>1</sup>. This does not apply to an increase of rent in pursuance of a provision contained in the lease<sup>2</sup>; but if, after the end of the fifth year of the term of a lease:

- 311 (1) the amount of rent payable increases, or is increased, in accordance with the provisions of the lease; and
- 312 (2) the rent payable as a result ('the new rent') is such that the increase falls to be regarded as abnormal<sup>3</sup>, the increase in rent is treated as if it were the grant of a lease in consideration of the excess rent<sup>4</sup>. The deemed grant is treated as:

- 313 (a) made on the date on which the increased rent first became payable; and
- 314 (b) for a term equal to the unexpired part of the original lease, and as linked with the grant of the original lease and with any other transaction with which that transaction is linked<sup>5</sup>.

Where a lease is varied so as to reduce the amount of the rent, the variation is treated for the purposes of stamp duty land tax as an acquisition of a chargeable interest by the lessee<sup>6</sup>; and where it is varied so as to reduce the term, the variation is treated for those purposes as an acquisition of a chargeable interest by the lessor<sup>7</sup>. Where any consideration in money or money's worth, other than an increase in rent, is given by the lessee for any variation of a lease, other than a variation of the amount of the rent or of the term of the lease, the variation is treated for those purposes as an acquisition of a chargeable interest by the lessee<sup>8</sup>.

<sup>4</sup> Ibid Sch 17A para 14(1), (2) (as added: see note 1 supra). The excess rent is the difference between the new rent and the rent previously taxed: Sch 17A para 14(3) (as so added). The rent previously taxed is (1) where the provisions of Sch 17A para 14 (as so added) have not previously applied to a rent increase under the lease, the rent that is assumed to be payable after the fifth year of the term of the lease (in accordance with Sch 17A para 7(3) (as added) (see PARA 252 post); (2) where the provisions of Sch 17A para 14 (as added) have previously so applied, the rent payable as a result of the last increase in relation to which those provisions applied: Sch 17A para 14(4) (as so added). The assumption in Sch 17A para 7(3) (as added) that the rent does not change after the end of the fifth year of the term of a lease does not apply for these purposes or for the purposes of Sch 17A para 15 (as added) except for the purpose of determining the rent previously taxed: Sch 17A para 14(6) (as so added).

149. Application by party to lease for variation.

Any party to a long lease<sup>1</sup> of a flat<sup>2</sup> may make an application to a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>3</sup> for an order varying the lease in such manner as is specified in the application<sup>4</sup>. The grounds on which any such application may be made are that the lease fails to make satisfactory provision with respect to one or more of the following matters, namely:

- 315 (1) the repair or maintenance of:
  - 29. (a) the flat in question; or
  - 30. (b) the building containing the flat; or
  - 31. (c) any land or building which is let to the tenant under the lease or in respect of which rights are conferred on him under it;
- 24
  - 316 (2) the insurance of the building containing the flat or of any such land or building as is mentioned in head (1)(c) above;
  - 317 (3) the repair or maintenance of any installations, whether they are in the same building as the flat or not, which are reasonably necessary to ensure that occupiers of the flat enjoy a reasonable standard of accommodation<sup>5</sup>;
  - 318 (4) the provision or maintenance of any services which are reasonably necessary to ensure that occupiers of the flat enjoy a reasonable standard of accommodation, whether they are services connected with any such installations or not, and whether they are services provided for the benefit of those occupiers or services provided for the benefit of the occupiers of a number of flats including that flat;
  - 319 (5) the recovery by one party to the lease from another party to it of expenditure incurred or to be incurred by him, or on his behalf, for the benefit of that other party or of a number of persons who include that other party<sup>6</sup>;
  - 320 (6) the computation of a service charge payable<sup>7</sup> under the lease;
  - 321 (7) such other matters as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State<sup>8</sup> or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minster<sup>9</sup>.

1 Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 ss 35, 36, 38 and 39 (as amended) (see the text and notes 2-9 infra; and PARA 150 et seq post) have effect as if references to a party to a long lease (apart from those in s 38(8) (as amended)) included the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102, Sch 7 para 10. For these purposes, 'long lease' means (1) a lease granted for a term certain exceeding 21 years, whether or not it is, or may become, terminable before the end of that term by notice given by the tenant or by re-entry or forfeiture; (2) a lease for a term fixed by law under a grant with a covenant or obligation for perpetual renewal, other than a lease by sub-demise from one which is not a long lease; or (3) a lease granted in pursuance of the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (ss 118-188) (as amended) (see PARA 1795 et seq post), including a lease granted in pursuance of that Part as it has effect by virtue of the Housing Act 1996 s 17 (as amended) (the right to acquire: see PARA 1804 et seq post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 ss 59(3), 60(1) (s 59(3) amended by the Housing Act 1996 (Consequential Amendments) (No 2) Order 1997, SI 1997/627, art 4, Schedule para 5). For the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt IV (ss 35-40) (as amended), however (see the text and notes 2-10 infra; and PARAS 150-154 post), a long lease is not regarded as a long lease of a flat if (a) the demised premises consist of or include three or more flats contained in the same building; or (b) the lease constitutes a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 36(6) (substituted by the Housing Act 1988 s 119, Sch 13 para 5). For the meaning of 'lease' and references to letting see PARA 53 note 1 ante; for the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 53 note 1 ante; and for the meaning of 'flat' see note 2 infra. As to covenants for perpetual renewal see PARAS 540-542 post.

2 For these purposes, 'flat' means a separate set of premises, whether or not on the same floor, which (1) forms part of a building; (2) is divided horizontally from some other part of that building; and (3) is constructed or adapted for use for the purposes of a dwelling: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 60(1).

3 A fee is payable on the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 3(3)(d), (4), (5); the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 3(3)(d), (4), (5). A fee is also payable for the hearing of the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5; the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5. As to the payment of such fees see further PARA 69 ante.

The application must be accompanied by: (1) the names and addresses of any person served with a notice in accordance with reg 4 of the relevant regulations (see note 4 infra); (2) a draft of the variation sought; and (3) a copy of the lease: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(7), Sch 1 para 6, Sch 2 para 6(1)-(3) (amended by SI 2004/3098); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(7), Sch 1 para 6, Sch 2 para 6(1)-(3). (amended by SI 2005/1356). As to the other particulars to be included, and the procedure on such an application, see PARA 59 et seq ante.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 35(1) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 163(1), (2)(a)). Procedure regulations under s 174, Sch 12 must make provision (1) for requiring notice of any application under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt IV (ss 35-40) (as amended) to be served by the person making the application, and by any respondent to the application, on any person who the applicant or, as the case may be, the respondent knows or has reason to believe is likely to be affected by any variation specified in the application; and (2) for enabling persons served with any such notice to be joined as parties to the proceedings: s 35(5) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 163(1), (2)(b)).

The applicant must give notice of such an application to the respondent and to any person who the applicant knows, or has reason to believe, is likely to be affected by any variation specified in the application; and on receipt of that notice the respondent must give notice of the application to any person not already so notified who the respondent knows, or has reason to believe, is likely to be affected by any variation specified in the application: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 4(1), (2); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 4(1), (2). For the meanings of 'applicant' and 'respondent' see PARA 60 notes 2-3 ante.

5 For the purposes of heads (3)-(4) in the text, the factors for determining, in relation to the occupiers of a flat, what is a reasonable standard of accommodation may include (1) factors relating to the safety and security of the flat and its occupiers and of any common parts of the building containing the flat; and (2) other factors relating to the condition of any such common parts: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 35(3). 'Common parts', in relation to any building or part of a building, includes the structure and exterior of that building or part and any common facilities within it: s 60(1).

6 For the purposes of head (5) in the text, the factors for determining, in relation to a service charge payable under a lease, whether the lease makes satisfactory provision include whether it makes provision for an amount to be payable (by way of interest or otherwise) in respect of a failure to pay the service charge by the due date: ibid s 35(3A) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 162(1), (4)). For these purposes, 'service charge' has the meaning given by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 ss 35(8), 60(1).

7 For the purposes of head (7) in the text, a lease fails to make satisfactory provision with respect to the computation of a service charge payable under it if (1) it provides for any such charge to be a proportion of expenditure incurred, or to be incurred, by or on behalf of the landlord or a superior landlord; and (2) other tenants of the landlord are also liable under their leases to pay by way of service charges proportions of any such expenditure; and (3) the aggregate of the amounts that would, in any particular case, be payable by reference to the proportions referred to in heads (1), (2) supra would either exceed or be less than the whole of any such expenditure: ibid s 35(4) (amended by the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 86). For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 53 note 1 ante.

8 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 35(2) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 162(1)-(3)). As to the transfer of functions of the Secretary of State under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

150. Application by respondent for variation of other leases.

Where an application ('the original application') is made for the variation of a lease<sup>1</sup> by any party to a lease, any other party to the lease<sup>2</sup> may make an application to the tribunal<sup>3</sup> asking it, in the event of its deciding to make an order effecting any variation of the lease in pursuance of the original application, to make an order which effects a corresponding variation of each such one or more other leases as are specified in the application<sup>4</sup>.

Any lease so specified:

- 322 (1) must be a long lease<sup>5</sup> of a flat<sup>6</sup> under which the landlord<sup>7</sup> is the same person as the landlord under the lease specified in the original application; but
- 323 (2) need not be a lease of a flat which is in the same building as the flat let under that lease, nor a lease drafted in terms identical to those of that lease<sup>8</sup>.

The grounds on which the application may be so made are:

- 324 (a) that each of the leases specified in the application fails to make satisfactory provision with respect to the matter or matters specified in the original application; and
- 325 (b) that, if any variation is effected in pursuance of the original application, it would be in the interests of the person making such an application, or in the interests of the other persons who are parties to the lease specified in that application, to have all of the leases in question, that is to say the ones specified in that application together with the one specified in the original application, varied to the same effect<sup>9</sup>.

1 Is an application under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 35 (as amended): see PARA 149 ante. For the meaning of 'lease' and references to letting see PARA 53 note 1 ante.

2 Is including, where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), that company: see PARA 149 note 1 ante.

3 As to the fee payable and the procedure on the application see PARA 149 notes 3-4 ante.

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(8) VARIATION OF LEASES/(ii) Variation of Leases on Application to a Leasehold Valuation Tribunal/A. FLATS/151. Application by majority of parties for variation of leases.

151. Application by majority of parties for variation of leases.

An application may be made<sup>1</sup> to a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>2</sup> in respect of two or more leases<sup>3</sup> for an order varying each of those leases in such manner as is specified in the application<sup>4</sup>. Those leases must, however, be long leases<sup>5</sup> of flats<sup>6</sup> under which the landlord<sup>7</sup> is the same person; but they need not be leases of flats which are in the same building, nor leases which are drafted in identical terms<sup>8</sup>.

The grounds on which such an application may be made are that the object to be achieved by the variation cannot be satisfactorily achieved unless all the leases are varied to the same effect<sup>9</sup>.

Such an application in respect of any leases may be made by the landlord or any of the tenants<sup>10</sup> under the leases<sup>11</sup>; but any such application may only be made if:

- 326 (1) in a case where the application is in respect of less than nine leases, all, or all but one, of the parties concerned consent to it; or
- 327 (2) in a case where the application is in respect of more than eight leases, it is not opposed for any reason by more than 10% of the total number of the parties concerned and at least 75% of that number consent to it<sup>12</sup>.

- 1 The subject to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 37(2)-(6): see the text and notes 5-12 infra.
- 2 As to the fee payable and the procedure on the application see PARA 149 notes 3-4 ante.
- 3 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 53 note 1 ante.
- 4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 37(1) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 163(1), (4)).
- 5 For the meaning of 'long lease' see PARA 149 note 1 ante.

- 9 Ibid s 37(3).
- 10 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 53 note 1 ante.
- 11 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 37(4).

12 Ibid s 37(5). For these purposes (1) in the case of each lease in respect of which the application is made, the tenant under the lease must constitute one of the parties concerned, so that, in determining the total number of the parties concerned, a person who is the tenant under a number of such leases is regarded as constituting a corresponding number of the parties concerned; and (2) the landlord must also constitute one of the parties concerned: s 37(6).

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(8) VARIATION OF LEASES/(ii) Variation of Leases on Application to a Leasehold Valuation Tribunal/A. FLATS/152. Orders by the court varying leases.

152. Orders by the court varying leases.

If:

- 328 (1) on an application by a party to a lease for variation of that lease<sup>1</sup>, the grounds on which the application was made are established to the satisfaction of the tribunal<sup>2</sup>, the tribunal may<sup>3</sup> make an order varying the lease specified in the application in such manner as is specified in the order<sup>4</sup>;
- 329 (2) an application by a respondent for variation of other leases<sup>5</sup> was made in connection with that application and the specified grounds<sup>6</sup> are established to the satisfaction of the tribunal with respect to the specified leases<sup>7</sup>, the tribunal may<sup>8</sup> also make an order varying each of those leases in such manner as is specified in the order<sup>9</sup>;
- 330 (3) on an application by a majority of the parties for variation of leases<sup>10</sup>, the specified grounds<sup>11</sup> are established to the satisfaction of the tribunal with respect to the leases specified in the application, the tribunal may<sup>12</sup> make an order varying each of those leases in such manner as is specified in the order<sup>13</sup>.

The variation specified in an order under heads (1) or (2) above may be either the variation specified in the relevant application<sup>14</sup> or such other variation as the tribunal thinks fit<sup>15</sup>.

If the grounds referred to in head (2) or head (3) above, as the case may be, are established to the satisfaction of the tribunal with respect to some but not all of the leases specified in the application, the power to make an order under those heads extends to those leases only<sup>16</sup>.

The tribunal may not, however, make an order under the above provisions effecting any variation of a lease if it appears to the tribunal:

- 331 (a) that the variation would be likely substantially to prejudice any respondent to the application or any person who is not a party to the application, and that an award of compensation<sup>17</sup> would not afford him adequate compensation; or
- 332 (b) that for any other reason it would not be reasonable in the circumstances for the variation to be effected<sup>18</sup>.

The tribunal may not, on an application relating to the provision to be made by a lease with respect to insurance, make an order under the above provisions effecting any variation of the lease:

- 333 (i) which terminates any existing right of the landlord<sup>19</sup> under its terms to nominate an insurer for insurance purposes; or

- 334 (ii) which requires the landlord to nominate a number of insurers from which the tenant<sup>20</sup> would be entitled to select an insurer for those purposes; or
- 335 (iii) which, in a case where the lease requires the tenant to effect insurance with a specified insurer, requires the tenant to effect insurance otherwise than with another specified insurer<sup>21</sup>.

The tribunal may, instead of making an order varying a lease in such manner as is specified in the order, make an order directing the parties to the lease to vary it in such manner as is so specified<sup>22</sup>.

The tribunal may by order direct that a memorandum of any variation of a lease effected by an order under the above provisions is to be indorsed on such documents as are specified in the order<sup>23</sup>.

Where the tribunal makes an order under the above provisions varying a lease, the tribunal may, if it thinks fit, make an order providing for any party to the lease to pay, to any other party to the lease or to any other person, compensation in respect of any loss or disadvantage that the tribunal considers he is likely to suffer as a result of the variation<sup>24</sup>.

NOTE 23--SI 2003/1474 r 78 revoked: SI 2008/1919.

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(8) VARIATION OF LEASES/(ii) Variation of Leases on Application to a Leasehold Valuation Tribunal/A. FLATS/153. Effect of orders varying leases; applications by third parties.

153. Effect of orders varying leases; applications by third parties.

Any variation of a lease effected by an order of a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>1</sup> is binding not only on the parties to the lease<sup>2</sup> for the time being but also on other persons, including any predecessors in title of those parties, whether or not they were parties to the proceedings in which the order was made or were served<sup>3</sup> with a notice of the application<sup>4</sup>.

Any variation effected by any such order is binding<sup>5</sup> on any surety who has guaranteed the performance of any obligation varied by the order; and the surety is accordingly taken to have guaranteed the performance of that obligation as so varied<sup>6</sup>.

Where any such order has been made and a person was required<sup>7</sup> to be served with a notice relating to the proceedings in which it was made, but he was not so served, he may:

- 336 (1) bring a claim for damages for breach of statutory duty against the person by whom any such notice was so required to be served in respect of that person's failure to serve it;
- 337 (2) apply to a leasehold valuation tribunal for the cancellation or modification of the variation in question<sup>8</sup>.

On an application under head (2) above with respect to any variation of a lease, the tribunal may:

- 338 (a) by order cancel that variation or modify it in such manner as is specified in the order; or
- 339 (b) make an order for compensation<sup>9</sup> in favour of the person making the application, as it thinks fit<sup>10</sup>.

Where a variation is cancelled or modified under head (a) above:

- 340 (i) the cancellation or modification takes effect as from the date of the making of the order under head (a) above or as from such later date as may be specified in the order; and
- 341 (ii) the tribunal may by order direct that a memorandum of the cancellation or modification shall be indorsed on such documents as are specified in the order<sup>11</sup>.

LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(8) VARIATION OF LEASES/(ii) Variation of Leases on Application to a Leasehold Valuation Tribunal/B. DWELLINGS OTHER THAN FLATS/154. Application for variation of insurance provisions.

B. DWELLINGS OTHER THAN FLATS

154. Application for variation of insurance provisions.

Any party to a long lease<sup>1</sup> of a dwelling may make an application to a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>2</sup> for an order varying the lease, in such manner as is specified in the application, on the grounds that the lease fails to make satisfactory provision with respect to any matter relating to the insurance of the dwelling, including the recovery of the costs of such insurance<sup>3</sup>.

Such an application may not, however, be made<sup>4</sup> by a person who is a tenant<sup>5</sup> under a long lease of a dwelling if, by virtue of that lease and one or more other long leases of dwellings, he is also a tenant from the same landlord of at least two other dwellings<sup>6</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'long lease' see PARA 149 note 1 ante. For these purposes, however, a long lease is not regarded as a long lease of a dwelling if (1) the demised premises consist of three or more dwellings; or (2) the lease constitutes a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 40(4) (substituted by the Housing Act 1988 s 119, Sch 13 para 6). 'Dwelling' means a dwelling other than a flat: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 40(5). For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 53 note 1 ante; for the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 53 note 2 ante; for the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 53 note 1 ante; and for the meaning of 'flat' see PARA 149 note 2 ante.

2 As to the fee payable and the procedure on the application see PARA 149 notes 3-4 ante.

3 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 40(1) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002, s 163(1), (7)). As to orders varying the lease see also PARA 152 note 22 ante.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 36 (as amended) (see PARA 150 ante) and s 38 (as amended) (see PARA 152 ante) apply to an application under s 40(1) (as amended) subject to the specified modifications: s 40(2), (3). The modifications so specified (see s 40(3)) are:

9 (1) in s 36(1) (as amended) the reference to s 35 (as amended) is to be read as a reference to s 40(1) (as amended) and in s 36(2) any reference to a flat is to be read as a reference to a dwelling; and

10 (2) in s 38 (as amended) any reference to an application under s 35 (as amended) is to be read as a reference to an application under s 40(1) (as amended) and any reference to an application under s 36 (as amended) is to be read as a reference to an application under s 36 (as amended) as applied by s 40(2).

4 le without prejudice to ibid s 40(4) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

5 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 53 note 1 ante.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 40(4A) (substituted by the Housing Act 1988 Sch 13 para 6). For these purposes, any tenant of a dwelling who is a body corporate is treated as a tenant of any other dwelling held from the same landlord which is let under a long lease to an associated company as defined in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 20(1) (as amended) (see PARA 1748 note 8 post): s 40(4B) (substituted by the Housing Act 1988 Sch 13 para 6).

(9) RECTIFICATION OF LEASES

155. Rectification of leases; in general.

Where a transaction has been completed by the execution of a deed or other instrument, but the instrument does not express what the parties had agreed, it may be rectified if proof of their agreement can be produced<sup>1</sup>. Rectification is an equitable remedy and thus the court has a discretion as to whether or not it ought to be granted<sup>2</sup>.

There must be strong evidence that, by mistake, the instrument does not reflect the true intentions of the parties<sup>3</sup>; to allege that a lease signed by the parties is erroneous is a serious allegation requiring a high degree of probability<sup>4</sup>. The intention of the parties may be established by written evidence, by their actions<sup>5</sup> or by oral evidence<sup>6</sup>, even though the instrument itself must comply with statutory requirements as to writing<sup>7</sup>, so that a lease which is required to be made by deed<sup>8</sup> may be rectified to reflect an oral agreement which preceded it<sup>9</sup>. An 'entire agreement' clause is not an automatic bar to rectification<sup>10</sup>.

Rectification is normally available only where there is a common mistake by all the parties<sup>11</sup> but in certain circumstances it may be ordered where there is a unilateral mistake<sup>12</sup>. The right to rectify passes to an assignee of the reversion but does not bind a bona fide purchaser for value without notice<sup>13</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/3. LEASES AND UNDERLEASES/(9) RECTIFICATION OF LEASES/156. Rectification on the grounds of common mistake.

156. Rectification on the grounds of common mistake.

Subject to the exceptions regarding unilateral mistake<sup>1</sup>, rectification<sup>2</sup> of a lease will not be granted unless there is a mistake that is common to all the parties<sup>3</sup>. There must be:

- 342 (1) a continuing common intention, whether or not amounting to an agreement, in respect of a particular matter in the lease to be rectified;
- 343 (2) an outward expression of accord (which may be written evidence or an oral agreement)<sup>4</sup>;
- 344 (3) an intention such as is described in head (1) above at the time of the execution of the lease sought to be rectified; and
- 345 (4) a mutual mistake<sup>5</sup>, which must be about the effect of that lease<sup>6</sup>, whereby the lease does not reflect that common intention; and the lease must, if rectified, be capable of carrying out that agreed common intention<sup>7</sup>. An outward expression of accord may not, however, be a strict legal requirement for rectification in a case where the party resisting rectification has in fact admitted that his true state of belief when he entered into the transaction was the same as that of the other party and there was therefore a continuing common intention which, by mistake, has not been given effect in the relevant legal document<sup>8</sup>. The relevant common intention is the intention of the parties at the time the lease was executed; if, under a mistake of law, the parties have intentionally executed the instrument in a particular form, it will not be rectified so as to incorporate provisions which they would have inserted had they known the law<sup>9</sup>. The standard of proof required to establish the common intention of the parties is the civil standard of balance of probability<sup>10</sup>; the evidence must, however, be sufficient to contradict the inherent probability that the written instrument truly represents the parties' intentions because it is a document signed by them<sup>11</sup>.

A common error as to parcels may be amended by rectification of the lease or conveyance<sup>12</sup>; and the provisions of Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 which confer a collective right of first refusal on tenants<sup>13</sup> do not prevent rectification of a transfer<sup>14</sup>. Other circumstances in which an order for rectification of a lease on the grounds of common mistake has been granted include:

- 346 (a) where by mutual mistake no rent review provisions were included in an underlease<sup>15</sup>;
- 347 (b) where there was good evidence that the parties had a common continuing intention to include a break clause in a new lease, but no break clause was in fact included<sup>16</sup>;
- 348 (c) where a tenancy agreement mistakenly described a premium as 'rent'<sup>17</sup>;
- 349 (d) where a lease mistakenly omitted a guarantee clause<sup>18</sup>;
- 350 (e) where a lease referred to rent reviews at the end of the seventh and fourteenth years of the term whereas the common intention of the parties was that the reviews should be every fifth year of the term<sup>19</sup>;
- 351 (f) where a lease, underlease and subunderlease were granted contemporaneously as part of a development scheme, and because of a common mistake over dates in the subunderlease, the rent increases at review which had been intended to be passed on in agreed proportions to the lessee and the underlessee were not passed on to the lessee until six years and nine months later<sup>20</sup>.

Circumstances in which an order for rectification has been refused include:

- 352 (i) where the order was sought on summary judgment and the case was not suitable for such judgment<sup>21</sup>;
- 353 (ii) where, even though a rent review clause in a lease was described by the court as an 'inelegant compromise' between the parties, there was no evidence of mistake<sup>22</sup>;
- 354 (iii) where one party misunderstood the consequence of the parties' common intention that both the lease and the underlease would expire on the same date<sup>23</sup>.

Heads (a) to (f) and (i) to (iii) above are by way of illustration only and do not purport to constitute exhaustive lists.

1 See PARA 157 post.

4 The agreement need not therefore comply with the statutory formalities now set out in the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (as amended) (see PARA 79 ante): see Cowen v Truefitt Ltd [1899] 2 Ch 309, 68 LJ Ch 563, CA; Joscelyne v Nissen [1970] 2 QB 86, [1970] 1 All ER 1213, CA.

5 Clear evidence of a mistake is essential: see eg Lansdown Estates Group Ltd v TNT Roadfreight (UK) Ltd [1989] 2 EGLR 120.

6 A mistaken belief as to the relation of the lease to the contents of another document is not sufficient: London Regional Transport v Wimpey Group Services Ltd (1986) 53 P & CR 356, [1986] 2 EGLR 41.

7 These principles are summarised in a number of judgments: see eg Lansdown Estates Group Ltd v TNT Roadfreight (UK) Ltd [1989] 2 EGLR 120; Regent Inns plc v Easybrand Ltd [2006] All ER (D) 414 (Mar). For an example of their application in practice see eg Cowen v Truefitt Ltd [1899] 2 Ch 309, 68 LJ Ch 563, CA (rooms on the second floor of Nos 13 and 14, Old Bond Street, were demised, together with free ingress and egress for the lessee 'through the staircase and passages of No 13' to and from the demised premises; there was no staircase in No 13 leading to the demised premises, but there was a staircase in No 14 and it was held that there had been a common mistake, the intention of the parties being that the lessee should have the use of the staircase of No 14; the court ordered the lease to be rectified by the substitution of the staircase of 'No 14' for that of 'No 13'). See also eg Swainland Builders Ltd v Freehold Properties Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 560, [2002] 2 EGLR 71, cited in note 14 infra.

Where there is evidence of an accord between the parties for a compensatory rent throughout the term, but the lease does not reflect this and there is no common intention or agreement as to how the compensation should be assessed, the court may, when ordering rectification, include machinery so as to provide for such assessment in the rent review clause: see Kings Reach Investments Ltd v Reed Publishing Holdings Ltd (21 June 1984, unreported), CA.

14 Swainland Builders Ltd v Freehold Properties Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 560, [2002] 2 EGLR 71 (the claimant vendor was the freehold owner of a block of 39 flats; it had granted 99-year leases at ground rents of all the flats except Nos 11 and 18 and intended to sell the block subject to the retention of those two flats which it initially proposed to let on shorthold tenancies, but with a view to granting long leases at premiums in the future. The defendant purchaser agreed to purchase the block, correctly understanding that the aggregate ground rents were £4,875 on the assumption that all 39 flats were let on the same long leasehold terms. The vendor's solicitor confirmed by letter to the purchaser's solicitor that the vendor was not intending to sell flats 11 and 18 and that in the interim the vendor was to be treated as any other tenant of the block. Long leases of the two flats were never granted and the transfer of the freehold by the vendor failed to reserve any rights to the two flats for the benefit of the vendor. On becoming aware of that omission, the vendor issued proceedings, claiming that there had been a mistake, which was common to the parties and contrary to their common intention; the trial judge ordered rectification of the transfer so as to provide for the grant to the vendor of leases in respect of the two flats; and on appeal this decision was upheld on the grounds that the transfer did not give effect to the clear, common, continuing intention of the parties: it was in the form intended by the purchaser, but the equitable remedy enabled the court to change that form to give effect to the true intention of the parties).

157. Rectification where there is unilateral mistake.

A unilateral mistake, whether of fact<sup>1</sup> or of law, in a deed or other instrument of conveyance is not in general a ground for setting aside the instrument<sup>2</sup>. The position is similar to cases of innocent misrepresentation<sup>3</sup>. In the case of a defect in title being overlooked by mistake, the remedy, as between vendor and purchaser, is on the vendor's covenants<sup>4</sup>; but there is an exception in the case of a conveyance to the purchaser of property which was already his own, in which case the purchase money is recoverable<sup>5</sup>.

There are, however, two situations in which rectification<sup>6</sup> may be granted of a lease which does not reflect the intentions of one party. The first such situation is where there is fraud by the party who is not mistaken<sup>7</sup>. The court will not act on the footing of fraud unless fraud is pleaded with the utmost particularity<sup>8</sup>; and fraud is unlikely in commercial leases with the parties bargaining at arm's length.

The second such situation is where one party knows that the lease contains a mistake in his favour but does nothing to correct it and behaves unconscionably in seeking to take advantage of the other party as a result<sup>9</sup>. For rectification to be available under this head, three conditions must be satisfied:

- 355 (1) there must be a mistake by the party seeking relief in executing a deed which did not give effect to that party's subjective intention and belief at the time of execution;

- 356 (2) there must be no mistake by the party against whom relief is sought, that party intending the result achieved by the deed or merely accepting that deed by execution;
- 357 (3) there must be an awareness by the party against whom relief is sought of the other party's mistake at the time of executing the deed plus an element of unconscionable behaviour, by inducing execution or by standing by and allowing it<sup>10</sup>.

Lack of diligence on the part of one party or his agents, which led them to be unaware of the other party's mistake, is not enough; in the absence of misrepresentation, neither party or his agents owes or owe the other party any relevant duty of care. Conversely, it does not matter that the mistake was caused by the negligence of the mistaken party or his adviser, since in almost all cases where rectification of a legal document is sought, the claimant's legal adviser has been negligent in failing to detect the mistake in the document. That mistake, even if negligent, is not a reason for refusing relief; rather, it is the premise on which relief is granted. The jurisdiction to rectify on the ground of unilateral mistake is one to be exercised cautiously, and clear evidence is required before an order is made. That is consistent with the basis of the jurisdiction being misconduct on the part of the defendant; the standard of proof has to reflect the gravity of the charge<sup>11</sup>.

A mere unilateral mistake on the part of one party which is unknown to the other party will not entitle the mistaken party to an order for rectification<sup>12</sup>.

It had not been agreed by the parties that the reference to arbitration should be omitted, and the tenants although aware of the omission at the time they executed the new lease did not bring it to the landlords' attention; rectification was granted); Central & Metropolitan Estates Ltd v Compusave [1983] 1 EGLR 60, (1982) 266 Estates Gazette 900 (lease created a term of 20 years at £3,500 per annum with no provision for rent review; evidence that in the course of negotiations leading up to the grant it was contemplated that the rent was to be £3,500 for the first five years but would be subject to variation thereafter; judge was satisfied from documentary evidence and from the inherent probabilities that by the time the lease was executed the defendant lessees were fully aware that the plaintiffs intended that the lease should contain a rent review clause and that the omission was due to the plaintiff's mistake; held that it would be against conscience to allow the defendant lessees, who must be taken to have suppressed their recognition of the mistake, to take advantage of the omission; rectification ordered so as to include provision for rent review, subject to the defendants having the opportunity of surrendering the lease at the end of the fifth year on giving not less than three months' notice in writing).

10 See Kemp v Neptune Concrete Ltd [1988] 2 EGLR 87, [1988] 48 EG 71, CA, where the authorities are reviewed. In that case, there was a prior agreement for a six-year term with three-year rent reviews and the parties' solicitors drafted and considered a draft lease on this basis. After the tenant had been let into possession but before any lease had been executed the parties agreed to extend the term to 12 years; no alteration was, however, made to the rent review clause so that the lease only provided for one review at three years in the 12-year term. It was held that the first and third conditions (see heads (1) and (3) in the text) were not satisfied; the existence of a mistake by the landlord when executing the deed had not been shown, although an ex post facto intention might have been formed; also, the findings at trial as to the state of mind of the tenant's solicitor did not establish unconscionable behaviour justifying equitable relief even if it were permissible to impute it to his principal. See also Taylor Barnard Ltd v Tozer [1984] 1 EGLR 21, (1983) 269 Estates Gazette 225 (clear agreement that lease should include a right of pre-emption in favour of the tenants but the lease as drafted by the landlord's solicitor contained no such right; the tenant's solicitor drafted an option to purchase the freehold which was accepted by the landlord's solicitor and incorporated into the lease; tenants not aware of mistake and no concealment on their part; rectification refused); Witney Golf Club Ltd v Parker [2006] All ER (D) 174 (Apr) (proposed variation to a lease; landlords' solicitor confirmed to the tenant's solicitor that the landlords had approved the draft deed of variation, subject to two minor alterations, and the deed of variation that was executed included a proposed 'simpler formula' for calculating additional rent that had been included in a draft of the deed sent to the tenant's solicitor; tenant applied for a declaration that the additional rent was to be calculated by reference to the terms of the deed of variation and the landlords counterclaimed for rectification, submitting that the tenant had wilfully shut its eyes to their mistake and had wilfully failed to make such inquiries as a reasonable and honest person would make; held that it would place an unrealistic burden on any party to an arm's length and commercial transaction to say that the tenant should have reverted to the defendants for confirmation of their approval of the 'simpler formula' after it had been told that they had approved the draft deed of variation; the counterclaim for rectification was dismissed).

158. Nature of the remedy; effect on third parties.

Rectification<sup>1</sup> will not be ordered where some other remedy is available<sup>2</sup>. Thus the court may construe a clause in a lease which contains an obvious mistake in such a way as to arrive at a sensible meaning, without formal rectification<sup>3</sup>. This ability is, however, limited to obvious clerical blunders and grammatical mistakes<sup>4</sup>. If all the parties voluntarily rectify the instrument, the court will not order rectification. Where an order is made for the grant of a new business tenancy under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>5</sup>, and the old tenancy agreement was intended to include premises which were misdescribed or in part omitted from the parcels clause, evidence will be admitted to show the true extent of the old demise, even without a formal claim for rectification<sup>6</sup>.

A claim for rectification passes<sup>7</sup> to an assignee of the reversion<sup>8</sup>; but a purchaser for value without notice is not affected by a tenant's claim for rectification which is an equitable remedy only<sup>9</sup>.

Rectification may not be ordered if there is undue delay or acquiescence once the mistake comes to light<sup>10</sup>. If it is ordered, the party seeking rectification may have to submit to terms<sup>11</sup>.

Where rectification is ordered, a copy of the court's order may be indorsed on the rectified instrument, which then operates accordingly<sup>12</sup>. The order has retrospective force<sup>13</sup>.

Rectification may be obtained in arbitral proceedings without the necessity for court action. An arbitrator appointed under a rent review clause in a usual form will not have express power to order rectification. An arbitration clause in a lease which provided that any dispute arising 'with respect to the construction or effect of the rights, duties or obligations of the parties' under the lease was to be determined by a single arbitrator was, however, held to confer jurisdiction to determine questions as to rectification as, in so doing, the arbitrator would be determining the rights, duties and obligations of the parties and their effect<sup>14</sup>. Where no such express power is conferred, the Arbitration Act 1996 confers on an arbitrator the same powers as a court to order the rectification, setting aside or cancellation of a deed or document<sup>15</sup>; but this is subject to any agreement to the contrary by the parties<sup>16</sup>.

4. DEMISED PREMISES

(1) PARCELS

159. Description in the case of registered land.

Where a lease is of the entirety of land comprised in a registered title, the title number is a sufficient description of the property concerned. The property register will contain a description of the registered estate including reference to a plan based on the Ordnance Survey map and known as the title plan<sup>1</sup>. In the case of a lease of part of land comprised in a registered title, the description of the property will include the title number out of which it is granted.

A prescribed clauses lease<sup>2</sup> must, in the prescribed wording with which it begins<sup>3</sup>, give in relation to the property either a full description of the land being leased or a reference to the clause, schedule or paragraph of a schedule in the lease in which the land being leased is more fully described, together with a statement that in the case of a conflict between that clause and the remainder of the lease then, for the purposes of registration, that clause will prevail<sup>4</sup>.

Where there is a letting of part of a registered title, a plan must be attached to the lease and any floor levels must be specified<sup>5</sup>.

1 See the Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, rr 5, 6; and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 814.

160. Description in the case of unregistered land.

The parcels in a lease describe and delimit the demised property<sup>1</sup>. This may be done either by giving a name or some denoting mark to the property as, for example, where a house in a town is described by the street and number, in which case extrinsic evidence may be necessary in order to ascertain what is intended by the description<sup>2</sup>, or by giving measurements or boundaries<sup>3</sup>, or by reference to a plan<sup>4</sup>, in which case, extrinsic evidence to identify the property may still be required, although the identification is assisted by these descriptions<sup>5</sup>. Where the property is described in more than one of these ways, it is possible that part of the description may be inconsistent with the rest, in which case it becomes necessary to determine which part is to be accepted, and which is to be rejected as a false description<sup>6</sup>, or the instrument may have to be rectified<sup>7</sup>.

Where the grant of the lease is an event that will trigger the requirement of first registration<sup>8</sup>, the application must be accompanied by sufficient details so that the land can be identified clearly on the Ordnance Survey map<sup>9</sup>. In practice such details are normally contained in the lease.

A single instrument may create two separate demises<sup>10</sup>.

1 As to parcels generally see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 226 et seq; and as to descriptions where a title is registered see PARA 159 ante.

2 Extrinsic evidence is admissible to identify the demised premises wherever there is doubt or difficulty as to the meaning of the description of the parcels; but the court will not admit evidence which contradicts the written document signed by the parties, except where there is a claim for rectification: Bisney v Swanston (1972) 225 Estates Gazette 2299, CA, applying Magee v Lavell (1874) LR 9 CP 107; and see Paddock v Fradley (1830) 1 Cr & J 90; Grigsby v Melville [1973] 3 All ER 455, [1974] 1 WLR 80, CA.

3 Boundaries and abutments are not necessarily construed strictly, unless the description by abutments, if correct, would increase the value of the property, and would be an inducement to the tenant to take it: Roberts v Karr (1809) 1 Taunt 495. Where measurements are qualified by the words 'more or less', and the abutments also are given, the abutments, if supported by the actual occupation, will show the extent of the property: Neale d Leroux v Parkin (1794) 1 Esp 228 at 230. Words such as 'more or less' (Cross v Eglin (1831) 2 B & Ad 106 at 110) or 'thereabouts' (Davis v Shepherd (1866) 1 Ch App 410 at 416, 418) authorise only variations which bear a very small proportion to the amount named (Day v Fynn (1601) Owen 133; Neale d Leroux v Parkin supra; Davis v Shepherd supra). A doubt as to what is intended to be comprised in the parcels may be removed by reference to a recital: Doe d White v Osborne (1840) 4 Jur 941, also reported 9 LJCP 313 at 318.

4 A plan may be relied on though not referred to expressly in the parcels; Leachman v L & K Richardson Ltd [1969] 3 All ER 20, [1969] 1 WLR 1129. As to the effect of a plan see Truckell v Stock [1957] 1 All ER 74, [1957] 1 WLR 161, CA. 5 As to evidence of boundaries see BOUNDARIES 4(1) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 904-908.

6 As to inaccurate descriptions see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 226 et seq; and as to rectifying mistakes in the parcels see Mortimer v Shortall (1842) 2 Dr & War 363; Paget v Marshall (1884) 28 ChD 255; and MISTAKE vol 77 (2010) PARA 57 et seq. A purchaser for value without notice is not affected by a tenant's claim to rectification which is an equitable remedy only: Smith v Jones [1954] 2 All ER 823, [1954] 1 WLR 1089.

7 A claim to rectification has been held to be an overriding interest within the Land Registration Act 1925 s 70(1)(g) (repealed; as to interests overriding first registration or registered dispositions under the Land Registration Act 2002 see LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARAS 866, 962); see Blacklocks v JB Developments (Godalming) Ltd [1982] Ch 183, [1981] 3 All ER 392. Where it is the landlord who has the claim, it passes automatically to the assignee on an assignment of the reversionary interest pursuant to the Law of Property Act 1925 s 63(1): Boots the Chemist Ltd v Street (1983) 268 Estates Gazette 817. As to rectification see further PARAS 155-158 ante.

161. Meanings of specific words.

When used in a lease or other assurance, 'land' includes, if there is nothing to restrict its technical meaning, all kinds of land, whether arable, meadow or otherwise<sup>1</sup>, and also everything on or under the soil, all buildings erected on it<sup>2</sup> and all mines and minerals<sup>3</sup> beneath it<sup>4</sup> and the airspace above it to such height as is necessary for the ordinary use and enjoyment of it and the structures on it<sup>5</sup>. A lease of woods includes not only the trees, but the land on which they grow<sup>6</sup>. Words which are appropriate for granting part of the profits of the land do not carry the land itself, for example a grant to dig turfs<sup>7</sup>, or a grant of water, which ordinarily gives only the fishery in the water<sup>8</sup>. Where the soil under the water is intended to pass, the expression 'land covered with water' should be used. A grant of all the profits of land is, however, equivalent to a grant of the land itself<sup>9</sup>.

By a lease of a 'house' outbuildings occupied with and necessary for the convenient occupation of the house will pass<sup>10</sup>, and also a courtyard, garden and orchard<sup>11</sup>. 'Messuage' has the same meaning as 'house'<sup>12</sup>. In the expression 'house and premises', 'premises' refers only to matters intimately connected with the house<sup>13</sup>. The words 'with the appurtenances' do not extend the demise so as to include land or buildings which are used with the demised property, but are not parcel of it<sup>14</sup>; nor do they include a part of the building which has been separated from it and has not been occupied with it for many years previous to the demise<sup>15</sup>. The words 'lands appertaining to' or 'lands belonging to' are more easily extended to land usually occupied with the demised premises<sup>16</sup>.

'Tenements' and 'hereditaments' mean respectively whatever can be the subject of tenure and whatever is capable of devolving upon death, whether as real property or as personal property, to personal representatives<sup>17</sup>; but they are used in a general sense to include both the corporeal things, such as houses and land, and the rights which rise out of them<sup>18</sup>. Where these rights extend to the exclusive possession of the thing which is the subject of property, they are called corporeal hereditaments, a term which is used to denote both the thing itself and the right of property in the thing; and, where they fall short of this, as, for example, in the case of profits à prendre, they are called incorporeal hereditaments<sup>19</sup>.

1 Co Litt 4a; Shep Touch (8th Edn) 91; Cooke v Yates (1827) 4 Bing 90. If a particular kind of land is mentioned, such as meadow or marsh land, only that kind will pass: Co Litt 5a.

2 Cf the Law of Property Act 1925 ss 62(2), 205(1)(ix); Newcomen v Coulson (1877) 5 ChD 133 at 142, CA.

3 Mines of gold and silver belong, however, to the Crown (see CROWN PROPERTY vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 218), as also does the property in petroleum in its natural strata (see the Petroleum Act 1998 s 2; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1634).

4 Newcomen v Coulson (1877) 5 ChD 133, CA. An inclosed piece of land is technically a 'close', and this term carries the soil and what lies beneath it: see Cox v Glue (1848) 5 CB 533 at 551. 'Farm' includes the farmhouse, farm buildings and land used with it (Shep Touch (8th Edn) 93), and also woodlands (Goodtitle d Paul v Paul (1760) 2 Burr 1089; Portman v Mill (1839) 3 Jur 356). 'Farming buildings' in a will includes farmhouses: Cooke v Cholmondeley (1858) 4 Drew 326.

Unless the lease expresses a contrary intention, certain general words are imported by statute into it, if made after 31 December 1881, to the effect that the lease is deemed to include all rights, privileges, easements etc appertaining or reputed to appertain to the land or enjoyed with it: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 62(1), (2), (4), (6). A lease is a conveyance within the meaning of that Act: see s 205(1)(ii). See further PARA 165 post; and DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 236. The tenant's right to receive services, such as a supply of hot water, does not, however, pass by virtue of the general words: Regis Property Co Ltd v Redman [1956] 2 QB 612 at 627, 632, [1956] 2 All ER 335 at 344, 347, CA.

162. Parcels may depend on the circumstances of the property.

In the case of a prescribed clauses lease<sup>1</sup>, where there is a letting of part of a registered title, a plan must be attached to the lease and any floor levels must be specified<sup>2</sup>. Otherwise, whether any particular property is included in the lease may depend upon the wording of the lease as applied to the circumstances of the property<sup>3</sup>, evidence being admissible to show the state and condition of the property at the time the lease was granted; and, even if prima facie particular property would be included, this will not be so if the circumstances show a contrary intention<sup>4</sup>. Where the lease comprises part only of a building, whether it be of a floor or a room or an office, it will prima facie include both sides of any external wall there may be and fixtures attached to it, unless there is an exception or reservation or something in the context of the lease to exclude them<sup>5</sup>, and will include all that space between the floor of the demised part to at least as far as the joists of the underside of the floor above it<sup>6</sup>. The demise of a whole building will prima facie include the roof and air space above the building, even if this is not mentioned in the demise<sup>7</sup>.

In general the lease is construed with reference to the circumstances existing at the time of execution but, where it is clear that it had reference to previous circumstances, such as those existing at the time of the agreement for the lease, the earlier circumstances would apparently determine the construction: see Crisp v Price (1814) 5 Taunt 548; Mappin Bros v Liberty & Co Ltd [1903] 1 Ch 118 at 127. Part of the common roof of a terrace of buildings may, however, form part of the demise of one of the buildings within the terrace, even though the parcels do not expressly refer to the roof: Tennant Radiant Heat Ltd v Warrington Development Corp'n [1988] 1 EGLR 41, CA.

163. Additions and improvements.

Where a building which is demised is altered or extended, any addition to it (as opposed to a fixture annexed<sup>1</sup> to it) will accede to the realty, and so become part of the parcels. Ordinarily the covenants on the tenant's part in relation to repair are expressly worded so as to apply to any such additions. Unless it is specifically agreed that any additions made by, or paid for by, the tenant are to be disregarded on the determination of the rent for the demised premises, on a rent review the rent falls to be determined for the whole parcels, including any improvements made by, or paid for by, the tenant<sup>2</sup>; but, where the premises are business premises, special rules apply both as to the assessment of the new rent upon renewal of the lease pursuant to any court order<sup>3</sup> and as to compensation at the expiry of the term<sup>4</sup>.

164. Roads.

Where the premises are referred to as bounded by a public road, and the soil of the road is vested in the landlord, the lease will prima facie include the soil from the edge of the premises to the middle of the road<sup>1</sup>. If there is a small quantity of uninclosed land between the highway and the demised premises, this also, if vested in the landlord, will be presumed to be included in the demise<sup>2</sup>, but the presumption may be rebutted<sup>3</sup>.

165. Easements.

A lease of land, or of land and buildings, made after 31 December 1881 includes, without express mention, all easements appertaining or reputed to appertain to the demised property or any part of it, or at the time of the lease occupied or enjoyed with it or with any part of it or reputed or known as part or parcel of or appurtenant to the demised property or any part of it, so far as a contrary intention is not expressed in the lease<sup>1</sup>.

There will also pass to the tenant of one of two tenements both belonging to the landlord all those continuous and apparent quasi-easements which are required for the reasonable enjoyment of the demised tenement and which, at the date of the lease, are used for its benefit over the other tenement. If the landlord intends to reserve to himself any such right over the demised tenement, he must do so expressly in the lease, except in the case of a continuous easement of necessity, such as a necessary right of way<sup>2</sup>.

1 Law of Property Act 1925 s 62(1), (2), (4), (6). 'Conveyance' in that Act includes a lease: see s 205(1)(ii) (cited in PARA 79 note 1 ante). An agreement for a lease for term exceeding three years is not a conveyance within the meaning of s 205 (as amended) (Borman v Griffith [1930] 1 Ch 493); but an agreement under hand for a term not exceeding three years is a conveyance within the meaning of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 205 (as amended) because, by virtue of ss 52(2)(d), 54(2), the agreement is effective to create a legal estate (Wright v Macadam [1949] 2 KB 744, [1949] 2 All ER 565, CA). ### 166. Game, sporting rights and livestock.

Unless otherwise provided by the lease, the right to game passes to the tenant<sup>1</sup>, but, subject to the restriction as to ground game<sup>2</sup>, the landlord may reserve the right to himself<sup>3</sup>.

A sporting lease authorises the tenant to enter upon land for the purpose of killing game or fishing, and to carry away the game which he kills or the fish which he catches, and is in effect a licence coupled with a profit à prendre<sup>4</sup>. In order to create an effective legal right the lease must be by deed<sup>5</sup>.

During a lease of livestock, their progeny belongs to the tenant unless there is an express stipulation to the contrary<sup>6</sup>.

(2) EXCEPTIONS AND RESERVATIONS

167. Nature of exceptions.

An exception is always of part of the thing granted and refers, therefore, to an object in being<sup>1</sup>. Thus, there may be a grant of a house except certain rooms, or of a farm except certain fields, or of land except the timber growing on it<sup>2</sup> or the minerals underneath it<sup>3</sup>. All these are true exceptions; they withdraw a physical part from that which is first mentioned as passing<sup>4</sup>, the result being that the thing excepted is not part of the parcels<sup>5</sup>.

1 Co Litt 47a; Shep Touch (8th Edn) 79; Mason v Clarke [1954] 1 QB 460, [1954] 1 All ER 189, CA; revsd on other grounds [1955] AC 778, [1955] 1 All ER 14, HL; and see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 237-239; EASEMENTS AND PROFITS A PRENDRE vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 59 note 1.

2 As to the exception of timber and trees from a lease see PARA 191 post.

3 An exception of 'all mosses and turbaries' has been held to except all places in which turf, or matter in the course of becoming turf, is found (Quinn v Shields (1877) IR 11 CL 254), and an exception of all waters and watercourses has been held to except a well (Whelan v Leonard [1917] 2 IR 323, Ir CA). As to minerals vested in the Crown and other bodies see PARA 161 note 3 ante.

4 An exception of the whole of what has been granted is, however, repugnant and void, eg a lease of all the landlord's land in a certain place, except specified land which is in fact all that he has there: Dorrell v Collins (1582) Cro Eliz 6. Similarly, the exception is void if it is of something specifically mentioned in the parcels, even though not the whole of them (Horneby v Clifton (1567) 3 Dyer 264b; and see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 238; cf Miller v Pratt (1606) 3 Dyer 264b note (40)), unless the thing has been mentioned merely as assisting in the description of the whole, and not by way of grant (Ellis v Lord Primate (1865) 16 I Ch R 184, CA; Cochrane v M'Cleary (1869) IR 4 CL 165, Ex Ch). Where the terms of the lease prevent an apparent exception from operating as such, it may operate as a redemise of the part purporting to be excepted: Moroney v Macnamara (1872) 20 WR 905. As to uncertainty in an exception see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 178, 238. Premises excepted out of an exception pass as part of the premises demised: Leigh v Shaw (1594) Cro Eliz 372. As to whether premises are to be treated as demised or reserved see Hebbert v Thomas (1835) 1 Cr M & R 861.

5 Cooper v Stuart (1889) 14 App Cas 286 at 289-290, PC; and see Fancy v Scott (1828) 6 LJOSKB 305. The exception is construed most strongly against the landlord and in favour of the tenant: see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 178. An exception of 'bogs and turf-mosses' excepts the soil: Boyle v Opherts (1841) 4 I Eq R 241.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/4. DEMISED PREMISES/(2) EXCEPTIONS AND RESERVATIONS/168. Nature of reservations.

168. Nature of reservations.

If used in its strict legal sense, 'reservation' refers to the payment of rent or rendering of other services by the tenant<sup>1</sup>. The term may, however, be used in a wide sense as meaning any benefit in respect of the subject matter of the grant which is kept by the grantor for himself. Thus, it may imply a keeping back of a physical part of the thing, in which case it is equivalent to an exception; and, accordingly, where the context requires it, 'reserving' is construed as making an exception<sup>2</sup>.

'Reserving' may also imply that the grantor is keeping for himself some right of user or of taking the profits of the land, and in conveyancing practice the words 'except and reserving' usually introduce the creation in favour of the landlord of an easement, or of a profit à prendre, such as the free running of water and soil coming from adjacent buildings<sup>3</sup>, the right to make and maintain sewers under the demised premises<sup>4</sup>, rights of way and other easements over the demised premises<sup>5</sup>, or sporting rights<sup>6</sup>. In this case the clause operates as the regrant of an incorporeal hereditament by the grantee to the grantor<sup>7</sup>. To give the regrant legal validity the instrument had formerly to be executed by the grantee, and in the case of a lease this requirement was satisfied by the tenant's execution of the counterpart<sup>8</sup>. A reservation of a legal estate<sup>9</sup> made on or after 1 January 1926 operates at law without any execution of the conveyance by the grantee of the legal estate out of which the reservation is made, or any regrant by him, so as to create the legal estate reserved, and so as to vest the same in possession in the person, whether being the grantor or not, for whose benefit the reservation is made<sup>10</sup>. A conveyance of a legal estate expressed to be made subject to another legal estate not in existence immediately before the date of the conveyance operates as a reservation unless a contrary intention appears<sup>11</sup>. The reservation may operate in favour of a person who is not a party to the deed<sup>12</sup>. There may be a reservation out of an oral demise<sup>13</sup>.

A reservation of sporting rights in favour of the landlord and his assigns, where the rights are exercisable concurrently with the tenant, is not available for the landlord's licensees<sup>14</sup>; but it is otherwise where the landlord excepts a part of the premises with right of access to it, and the landlord may authorise licensees to use the excepted part<sup>15</sup>.

1 Mason v Clarke [1954] 1 QB 460 at 466, [1954] 1 All ER 189 at 191, CA, per Denning LJ; overruled on another point [1955] AC 778, [1955] 1 All ER 914, HL.

2 Co Litt 143a; Doe d Douglas v Lock (1835) 2 Ad & El 705 at 745; but 'reservation' will not be construed as meaning 'exception' if effect can be given to the instrument by construing it in its technical sense: Doe d Douglas v Lock supra at 745-746; and see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 239. A landlord is entitled to agree with a tenant that the tenant should not be entitled to a prescriptive right of light, but only in relation to land owned by the landlord: Paragon Finance plc v City of London Real Property [2002] 1 EGLR 97, [2001] All ER (D) 205 (Jul).

3 Such a reservation extends to water and soil coming from the adjacent premises, whether it first arises there or not, but does not ordinarily extend beyond water in its natural condition, and such matters as are the product of the ordinary use of land for habitation: Chadwick v Marsden (1867) LR 2 Exch 285 at 289.

4 Lee v Stevenson (1858) EB & E 512. Where the right of passage of gas, water and other pipes is reserved, the right must be exercised in such a way as not to cause any unnecessary or avoidable inconvenience, annoyance, disturbance or injury to the person through whose property the right is to be exercised: Taylor v British Legal Life Assurance Co Ltd [1925] Ch 395; revsd without affecting this point (1925) 94 LJ Ch 284, CA. In Trailfinders Ltd v Razuki [1988] 2 EGLR 46 a reservation of free passage of (inter alia) electric current did not entitle the landlord to enter and lay computer cables.

5 A regrant securing a right of way to the landlord may disappear through merger with the reversion (Lord Dynevor v Tennant (1886) 33 ChD 420, CA; affd (1888) 13 App Cas 279, HL); and see Doe d Earl Egremont v Williams and Hole (1848) 11 QB 688 (reservation of a watercourse). As to watercourses see EASEMENTS AND PROFITS A PRENDRE vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 197 et seq; and WATER AND WATERWAYS vol 101 (2009) PARAS 602-603; as to the landlord's liability to maintain a culvert which he has reserved see Anderson v Cleland [1910] 2 IR 334, Ir CA; as to the reservation of power to the landlord to alter a road see Butt v Imperial Gas Light and Coke Co (1866) 2 Ch App 158; and as to the reservation of power to the landlord to interfere with and obstruct the tenant's right of access see Overcom Properties v Stockleigh Hall Residents Management Ltd (1988) 58 P & CR 1, [1989] 1 EGLR 75.

7 Mason v Clarke [1955] AC 778 at 786, [1955] 1 All ER 914 at 916, HL, per Viscount Simonds; Doe d Douglas v Lock (1835) 2 Ad & El 705 at 743 ('What relates to the privilege of hawking, hunting, fishing, and fowling, is not either a reservation or exception in point of law; and it is only a privilege or right granted to the lessor, though words of reservation and exception are used'). For this purpose an easement and a profit à prendre are on the same footing: Wickham v Hawker (1840) 7 M & W 63; Durham and Sunderland Rly Co v Walker (1842) 2 QB 940 at 967, Ex Ch (a right of way 'is neither parcel of the thing granted, nor is it issuing out of the thing granted, the former being essential to an exception and the latter to a reservation'). Sir E Coke's definition of a reservation (Co Litt 47a), that it is 'always of a thing not in esse, but newly created or reserved out of the land or tenement demised' suits the reservation of an easement as much as the reservation of a rent: see Houstoun v Marquis of Sligo (1886) 55 LT 614, HL.

8 Durham and Sunderland Rly Co v Walker (1842) 2 QB 940 at 967, 968, Ex Ch. Even without execution by the grantee, the grant could operate as evidence of an agreement to regrant the easement or profit à prendre: May v Belleville [1905] 2 Ch 605; and see Thellusson v Liddard [1900] 2 Ch 635 at 645. See also note 7 supra.

9 For these purposes, 'legal estate' includes an easement, right or privilege in or over land for an interest equivalent to an estate in fee simple absolute in possession or a term of years absolute: Law of Property Act 1925 s 1(2)(a), (4). For the meaning of 'term of years absolute' see PARA 2 note 3 ante.

10 Ibid s 65(1), (3). The reservation continues to operate by way of regrant even if there is not in terms any purported regrant by the grantee: see St Edmundsbury and Ipswich Diocesan Board of Finance v Clark (No 2) [1975] 1 All ER 772, [1975] 1 WLR 468, CA, applying Johnstone v Holdway [1963] 1 QB 601, [1963] 1 All ER 432, CA.

(3) FLATS

169. In general.

The ordinary principles which regulate the relationship of landlord and tenant apply to the letting of flats so far as concerns the premises actually demised<sup>1</sup>. There is no implied warranty at common law that an unfurnished flat is in a reasonably fit state for human habitation<sup>2</sup>. In the absence of express stipulation the landlord is under no liability to repair the premises actually demised<sup>3</sup>, except where such an obligation is implied or arises by virtue of the housing legislation; for example, a landlord has a statutory obligation to keep a dwelling fit for human habitation in certain cases<sup>4</sup>, and repairing obligations are imposed upon landlords in respect of leases of dwelling houses (including flats) of less than seven years' duration<sup>5</sup>. The landlord's statutory implied obligation<sup>6</sup> to repair the exterior of a flat applies to anything which, in the ordinary sense of words, would be regarded as part of the structure, or of the exterior, of the particular dwelling house, regarded as a separate part of the building<sup>7</sup>, and it is, therefore, irrelevant to the scope of the landlord's implied covenant that the external walls of a flat have been excluded from the demise<sup>8</sup>. Furthermore, the principle that a landlord is under an implied obligation to his tenant to take reasonable care over the repair and maintenance of premises within a building which are retained by the landlord, where the repair or maintenance of them is necessary for the safety or proper enjoyment of that part of the building which has been demised<sup>9</sup>, has been held to impose upon the landlord of a high-rise block of flats the obligation to take reasonable care to maintain and repair the lifts and staircases and the rubbish chutes serving the demised flat, and to maintain adequate lighting on the stairs and access ways to it<sup>10</sup>.

Modern leases of flats often contain an express covenant by the landlord to carry out repairs and maintenance to the whole building and to provide specified services to the tenant, and a covenant by the tenant to reimburse the landlord a due proportion of the landlord's expenditure, the resulting service charge being sometimes reserved as an additional rent<sup>11</sup> and sometimes merely a covenanted sum<sup>12</sup>.

Certain tenants have the following statutory rights in specified circumstances:

- 358 (1) the right of first refusal to buy the landlord's interest<sup>13</sup>;
- 359 (2) the right to apply for the appointment of a manager<sup>14</sup>;
- 360 (3) the right to acquire compulsorily the landlord's interest<sup>15</sup>;
- 361 (4) the right to apply for a variation of the terms of a long lease<sup>16</sup>;
- 362 (5) the right to collective enfranchisement<sup>17</sup>;
- 363 (6) the right to acquire a new lease<sup>18</sup>; and
- 364 (7) the right to buy or, in transitional cases, the right to acquire on rent to mortgage terms<sup>19</sup>.

As regards parts of the building which are necessary for the convenience of all the tenants and which the landlord is assumed to retain in his own possession and control, the landlord's liability for injuries suffered as a result of the non-repair of those parts depends upon the common law rules of nuisance and negligence, and the provisions of the Occupiers' Liability Act 1957 and the Defective Premises Act 1972<sup>1</sup>.

171. Landlord's covenants as to employees.

A covenant by the landlord to employ a resident porter<sup>1</sup> for the purposes of carrying out duties clearly defined by the terms of the lease may be the subject of specific performance<sup>2</sup>.

1 Whether the obligation is one requiring the employment of a resident porter is clearly a matter of construction: see Barnes v City of London Real Property Co [1918] 2 Ch 18 (covenant by the landlord that the premises should be cleaned by the housekeeper held not to impose upon the landlord the obligation to provide a resident housekeeper); Hupfield v Bourne (1974) 28 P & CR 77 (covenant by the landlord of a luxury block of flats to employ 'such person or persons as shall be reasonably necessary for the due performance of his covenants and for the proper management of the block' held to oblige the landlord to provide the services of a resident porter); Russell v Laimond Properties Ltd (1983) 269 Estates Gazette 947 (landlord unable to recover the costs of employing a resident porter in reliance upon a covenant to provide maintenance staff).

The difficulty faced by the court in supervising the execution of the obligation appears no longer to be a conclusive deterrent to ordering specific performance: see CH Giles & Co Ltd v Morris [1972] 1 All ER 960, [1972] 1 WLR 307; Shiloh Spinners Ltd v Harding [1973] AC 691 at 724, [1973] 1 All ER 90 at 102, HL; Tito v Waddell (No 2) [1977] Ch 106 at 321, [1977] 3 All ER 129 at 307; Posner v Scott-Lewis supra; para 95 ante; and SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 806.

(4) FIXTURES

(i) What are Fixtures

172. Classification of objects brought onto the land.

An object brought onto the land may be:

- 365 (1) a chattel;
- 366 (2) a fixture; or
- 367 (3) part and parcel of the land itself<sup>1</sup>.

Unlike objects falling within head (1) above, objects falling within head (2) or head (3) above are treated as, and become, part of the land<sup>2</sup>.

Fixtures (that is, former chattels that had become part of the land) were usually distinguished from chattels (that is, property that remained chattels and had not become part of the land); but because of the confusion sometimes surrounding the terminology, the House of Lords has now stated a preference for the threefold classification set out in heads (1) to (3) above rather than the traditional twofold distinction between chattels and fixtures<sup>3</sup>. The consequence of this new threefold classification is that 'fixture' now has a more limited technical meaning<sup>4</sup>.

1 See Elitestone Ltd v Morris [1997] 2 All ER 513 at 518, [1997] 1 WLR 687 at 691, HL, per Lord Lloyd of Berwick, approving Woodfall Landlord and Tenant release 36 (1994) vol 1, p 13/83, PARA 13.131; applied in Wessex Reserve Forces and Cadets Association v White [2005] EWHC 983 (QB), [2005] 3 EGLR 127, [2005] All ER (D) 310 (May); affd [2005] EWCA Civ 1744, [2006] 1 EGLR 56, [2005] All ER (D) 18 (Dec), (a Portakabin, a garden shed and sectional concrete buildings were both part of the land and, as items erected by the tenant, tenant's fixtures; a stone shed which had probably been on the land before the lease commenced was part of the land and not a tenant's fixture).

2 ie unless and until they are severed lawfully and removed from the land: see PARAS 178-186 post. A houseboat attached to land at several points by various ropes, cables and service connections, all of which may be undone, does not possess a sufficient degree of annexation so as to require recognition of it as part of the land: Chelsea Yacht and Boat Club Ltd v Pope [2001] 2 All ER 409, [2000] 1 WLR 1941, CA.

3 Elitestone Ltd v Morris [1997] 2 All ER 513, [1997] 1 WLR 687, HL, per curiam. Lord Lloyd of Berwick gave (at 517-518 and 691) two reasons for the 'better' threefold classification. First, the legal meaning of 'fixtures' does not bear the same meaning as it does in everyday life where one thinks of the term 'fixture' as being something fixed to a building. While a fixture may be understood as something affixed to the freehold as accessory to the house (Boswell v Crucible Steel Co [1925] 1 KB 119 at 123, CA, per Atkin LJ (plate glass windows forming part of the wall could not be landlord's fixtures as they were made part of the house when it was constructed)), a house itself has been described as a fixture once built into the land (Billing v Pill [1954] 1 QB 70 at 75, [1953] 2 All ER 1061 at 1063, DC, per Lord Goddard CJ). Second, and perhaps more significantly, the traditional distinction has led to the category of 'tenant's fixtures' (a term used to cover both trade fixtures and ornamental fixtures: see PARAS 179-180 post) which are fixtures in the full sense of the word in its traditional meaning, since they form part of the realty, but which may nevertheless be removed by a tenant in the course of or at the end of his tenancy. Such fixtures can be confused with chattels that never become fixtures at all.

4 The extensive caselaw discussed in PARAS 173-186 post must be read in the context of the traditional twofold classification.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/4. DEMISED PREMISES/(4) FIXTURES/(i) What are Fixtures/173. Ownership of fixtures.

173. Ownership of fixtures.

In accordance with the general rule of law that anything fixed to the freehold becomes part of the freehold<sup>1</sup>, chattels affixed to premises at the date of a lease by a landlord, or some prior owner or tenant, pass under the demise<sup>2</sup> unless expressly or impliedly excluded<sup>3</sup>. Chattels so affixed, and chattels affixed subsequent to the commencement of the lease, must be delivered up to the landlord on the determination of the tenancy, unless the tenant is entitled to remove them by virtue of some special rule of law, statute or agreement, in accordance with the rule of law that whatever has once become part of the inheritance cannot be severed by a limited owner, whether he is owner for life or for years, without the commission of waste<sup>4</sup>.

Two questions usually arise for consideration with regard to chattels attached to land or other premises:

- 368 (1) whether the attachment is such that they are to be regarded as forming part of the premises, whether permanently or as fixtures; and
- 369 (2) if they are fixtures, whether they can be removed by some person other than the owner of the freehold by virtue of some special rule of law, statute<sup>5</sup> or agreement.

For the purposes of distinction, items which the tenant may not remove (and which have become part of the land) are usually referred to as 'landlord's fixtures'<sup>6</sup>. This term includes fixtures attached to the premises at the date of the demise, those fixed by the landlord during the term, and also those fixed by the tenant which he is not entitled to remove<sup>7</sup>. Those removable by the tenant are usually referred to as 'tenant's fixtures' and, while attached to the premises, form part of the realty<sup>8</sup>. If the fixtures are not removed by the tenant, they pass to the landlord, and a subsequent tenant takes no interest in them other than as part of the premises demised to him<sup>9</sup>. In practice, the theoretical distinction between items which are removable by the tenant because they have never become fixtures (and remain chattels belonging to the tenant) and items which have become fixtures but so removable as 'tenant's fixtures' has often become blurred<sup>10</sup>.

1 Bain v Brand (1876) 1 App Cas 762 at 767, HL, per Lord Cairns LC; Wake v Hall (1880) 7 QBD 295 at 301, CA, per Lord Selborne LC; Elwes v Maw (1802) 3 East 38 at 51; Buckland v Butterfield (1820) 2 Brod & Bing 54 at 58. As to the rule quicquid plantatur solo, solo cedit (whatever is affixed to the soil belongs to the soil) see Wake v Hall (1883) 8 App Cas 195 at 203, HL, per Lord Blackburn. Similar principles apply to articles fixed to the freehold by a licensee, and, in the absence of any express or implied stipulation, a licensee cannot be compelled to remove them at the termination of his licence: Never-Stop Railway (Wembley) Ltd v British Empire Exhibition (1924) Inc [1926] Ch 877.

2 See Colegrave v Dias Santos (1823) 2 B & C 76; Longstaff v Meagoe (1834) 2 Ad & El 167. The tenant does not, by accepting the lease, come under an implied contract to pay for fixtures: Goff v Harris (1843) 5 Man & G 573.

3 Thus the express mention of certain fixtures may show an intention to exclude others: Hare v Horton (1833) 5 B & Ad 715. Cf Simmons v Midford [1969] 2 Ch 415, [1969] 2 All ER 1269 (a drain laid under servient land held not to adhere to the freehold of that land but to remain in the ownership of the dominant tenement). See also Montague v Long (1972) 116 Sol Jo 712 (bridge built under licence by an adjacent owner with a right of way over the licensor's land held to be affixed to the soil).

4 See note 1 supra.

5 A tenant of an agricultural holding has a statutory right on giving due notice to the landlord to remove fixtures and buildings: see AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 336.

6 Boswell v Crucible Steel Co [1925] 1 KB 119, CA. This expression has been said to be an inaccurate one (Elliott v Bishop (1854) 10 Exch 496 at 508), but it is generally useful for the purposes of distinction. See, however, PARA 172 ante. The term 'fixtures' is sometimes used as meaning only articles affixed to the freehold which are removable at the will of the person who affixed them (Hallen v Runder (1834) 1 Cr M & R 266; Elliott v Bishop (1854) 10 Exch 496 at 508; Re Gawan, ex p Barclay (1855) 5 De GM & G 403 at 410; Re de Falbe, Ward v Taylor [1901] 1 Ch 523 at 538, CA), but this seems an unnecessarily limited application of the word. It is a term which in any event is not properly applicable to articles forming part of the construction of premises, and it should be applied only to articles affixed to the freehold as accessories: Boswell v Crucible Steel Co [1925] 1 KB 119, CA. Plate-glass windows forming one side of a building are not fixtures (Boswell v Crucible Steel Co supra), and it is doubtful whether doors and windows of premises are properly described as fixtures, although they have been so referred to on occasions (Co Litt 53a; Climie v Wood (1869) LR 4 Exch 328 at 329, Ex Ch; Herlakenden's Case (1589) 4 Co Rep 62a at 64a). Cf para 177 note 3 post.

7 As to the time at which fixtures must be removed see PARA 182 post.

8 Bain v Brand (1876) 1 App Cas 762 at 770, 772, HL; Minshall v Lloyd (1837) 2 M & W 450 at 459; Gibson v Hammersmith and City Rly Co (1863) 2 Drew & Sm 603 at 609; Horwich v Symond (1914) 110 LT 1016; affd (1915) 84 LJB 1083, CA. It has been said that in cases where the right of removal exists, the chattel has never become part of the freehold (Re Sir Edward Hulse, Beattie v Hulse [1905] 1 Ch 406 at 411), but in the light of the cases cited supra this is conceived to be erroneous, although it is true that articles so lightly attached as not to be regarded as fixtures never lose their chattel character. As to the distinction between tenant's fixtures and improvements see New Zealand Government Property Corp'n v HM & S Ltd [1982] QB 1145, [1982] 1 All ER 624, CA (cited in PARA 755 note 4 post).

174. Test to determine what are fixtures.

Whether an object that has been brought onto the land has been affixed to the premises so as to become a fixture (or a permanent part of the land)<sup>1</sup> is a question of fact which principally depends first on the mode and extent of the annexation, and especially on whether the object can easily be removed without injury to itself or to the premises; and secondly on the purpose of the annexation, that is to say, whether it was for the permanent and substantial improvement of the premises or merely for a temporary purpose or for the more complete enjoyment and use of the object as a chattel<sup>2</sup>. The mode of annexation is, therefore, only one of the circumstances to be considered, and may not be the most important consideration<sup>3</sup>.

An object which is attached to the premises only by its own weight<sup>4</sup> will not in general be regarded as a fixture (or part and parcel of the land), unless circumstances show that it was intended to become part of the premises, and the onus of proving that there was such an intention rests on the party asserting that the object has become a fixture or part of the land<sup>5</sup>. If, however, an object is to some extent attached to the premises, it will be considered to be a fixture or part of the land unless the circumstances show that it was intended all along to remain a chattel, and in such a case the onus is on the party asserting that it is still a chattel<sup>6</sup>.

The facts which may be relied upon to show the intention of the annexation are those which exist at the time and are patent, and do not include the existence of a hire-purchase agreement with a third person relating to the object: Hobson v Gorringe [1897] 1 Ch 182 at 193, CA. An agreement between the parties interested in the land that an article is not to be a fixture does not, however, prevent its in fact becoming a fixture, even though the agreement may give a right to remove it: Hobson v Gorringe supra; and see Wood v Hewett (1846) 8 QB 913.

4 Eg cisterns resting on the ground (Mather v Fraser (1856) 2 K & J 536 at 559) or a barn placed upon pattens and blocks of timber lying on the ground (Culling v Tufnal (1694) Bull NP 34); and it is immaterial that those chattels may sink into the ground (Wood v Hewett (1846) 8 QB 913 at 919; Huntley v Russell (1849) 13 QB 572 at 577 note (a)) or are operated by machinery, such as an electric motor, which is attached to the land (Hulme v Brigham [1943] KB 152, [1943] 1 All ER 204).

175. Mode of annexation.

Mere juxtaposition is not in general enough to make an article brought onto the land a fixture (or part of the land)<sup>1</sup>; there must ordinarily be some attachment to the land or building<sup>2</sup>. Attachment is not essential, however, if the intention is to make the article a part of the land, as where blocks of stone are used without mortar or cement to form a stone wall<sup>3</sup>, or where sculptured figures or vases are part of the architectural scheme of a house<sup>4</sup>, or where movable dog grates are substituted for fixed grates<sup>5</sup>; and such articles become fixtures or part of the land although resting only by their own weight. Further, an article will be treated as a fixture or part of the land if it is essential to the use of the land or building, even though it is temporarily removed from it<sup>6</sup>, or exists as a mere chattel<sup>7</sup>.

If the article cannot be removed without great damage to the land or building, there is a strong presumption that it was intended to form part of the realty<sup>8</sup>. This applies also where the article, even though removable by digging, has become in fact a part of the land, such as an advertisement hoarding fixed to the soil in a substantial manner<sup>9</sup>. The attachment is often such that, although the article is firmly affixed, it can be removed without great damage to the land or building, and therefore may not be a fixture, as, for example, where a greenhouse is fastened by mortar on walls built to support it<sup>10</sup>, or a gas-engine is fastened by bolts and screws to iron plates embedded in concrete<sup>11</sup>, or a boiler is fixed in brickwork<sup>12</sup> or is bolted to a wooden framework embedded in mortar laid on brickwork<sup>13</sup>, or looms in a cotton mill are fastened by nails through the loom feet to wooden plugs<sup>14</sup>, or to beams<sup>15</sup>, in the floor, or machinery is fastened to buildings by bolts and nuts<sup>16</sup>, or a threshing machine is fixed by bolts and screws to posts let into the ground<sup>17</sup>, or machinery is fastened by bolts and nuts to concrete beds and worked by power transmitted from an engine by shafts, wheels, and gearing<sup>18</sup>. Whether or not an article has become a fixture or part of the land is ultimately a question of intention<sup>19</sup>, and therefore in one case tip-up seats screwed to the floor of a hall used as a cinema were held to be part of the land because they were intended to be used as part of the permanent equipment of the building<sup>20</sup>, whereas in another case similar seats were held not to be fixtures as they were there for a temporary purpose only<sup>21</sup>.

176. Purpose of annexation.

Although the immediate reason for fastening an article, such as a loom, may be only to steady it and make it more convenient for use, the article will be deemed to be a fixture if it is intended that it is to remain on the premises for the remainder of the term as a means of more effectually enjoying the use of the premises<sup>1</sup>. If there is such an intention, the article will be treated as permanently attached to the premises even though it is capable of being moved from one part of the premises and fastened in another<sup>2</sup>. Hence articles and machinery necessary for the use of land as agricultural land<sup>3</sup>, or of premises as a factory<sup>4</sup>, and attached to it in the manner already described, may be fixtures notwithstanding that they could be removed without substantial damage to the land or premises.

These cases overrule the particular application of the rule as to fixtures (see PARA 174 note 2 ante) made in Hellawell v Eastwood (1851) 6 Exch 295, although the rule itself is still good law. In Lincolnshire Finance Co v Farrant (1886) 2 TLR 248 an engine and machinery were held not to be fixtures, but it is not stated how they were erected. See also Fisher v Dixon (1845) 12 Cl & Fin 312 at 329, HL. ## (ii) Removal of Fixtures

178. Relaxations of the general rule.

The general rule that chattels, once annexed to the land, become part of the property demised and therefore cannot properly be removed by the tenant<sup>1</sup> has been relaxed to some extent as between landlord and tenant<sup>2</sup>. Where an article has been attached to the demised premises by the tenant so as to become a fixture, if it has been affixed for the purposes of trade or ornament, the tenant is entitled, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, to sever the article from the premises and to remove it<sup>3</sup>.

1 See PARA 173 ante. The question of whether an item has become part of the land must be distinguished from the question of whether a person (generally the tenant) has a right to remove it: see Elitestone Ltd v Morris [1997] 2 All ER 513 at 522, [1997] 1 WLR 687 at 695-696, HL, per Lord Clyde.

Questions of the right to remove fixtures also arise on the devise of land, as between competing claims of devisees and those entitled to the personalty (see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 351 the text and notes 7-10), or between mortgagor and legal mortgagee (see Mather v Fraser (1856) 2 K & J 536; Walmsley v Milne (1859) 7 CBNS 115; Meux v Jacobs (1875) LR 7 HL 481; and MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 195. In those cases the decisions that establish a tenant's right to remove trade fixtures have no application: Climie v Wood (1869) LR 4 Exch 328 at 330, Ex Ch; Grymes v Boweren (1830) 6 Bing 437 at 440 (rule as between heir and executor more strict than between landlord and tenant). As to the rights of landlords and mortgagees in relation to chattels that are the subject of hire purchase or consumer credit agreements by the tenant see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARA 195.

Questions of the right to remove fixtures also arise between the personal representatives of a tenant for life, if he affixed the articles during his life tenancy, and the remainderman. In this class of case there is a similar relaxation of the ordinary rule of irremovability so that ornamental fixtures and trade fixtures may be removed: see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 351.

2 Elwes v Maw (1802) 3 East 38.

3 These fixtures are known as 'tenant's fixtures', and these relaxations have been grafted on to the general rule in the progress of time as the injustice of denying the right of removal to the tenant came to be clearly recognised: see Elliott v Bishop (1854) 10 Exch 496 at 507; Spyer v Phillipson [1931] 2 Ch 183 at 192, 193, CA. The purpose of the annexation therefore has again to be considered when deciding whether a fixture is a 'tenant's fixture', just as it has to be considered when deciding whether an article has become a fixture at all: see Webb v Frank Bevis Ltd [1940] 1 All ER 247, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/4. DEMISED PREMISES/(4) FIXTURES/(ii) Removal of Fixtures/179. Trade fixtures.

179. Trade fixtures.

A tenant may remove fixtures if they have been affixed for the purposes of trade or manufacture, so long as the lease does not provide to the contrary<sup>1</sup>, and so long as they are capable of being severed from the land without irreparable injury to it<sup>2</sup>. This relaxation of the ordinary rule as to the irremovability of fixtures was made in order to encourage industry<sup>3</sup>, but the relaxation has not been extended to agricultural fixtures<sup>4</sup>, and such fixtures may be removed only in circumstances where there is a statutory right to do so<sup>5</sup>.

1 See PARA 185 post.

2 See Climie v Wood (1869) LR 4 Exch 328, Ex Ch; Smith v City Petroleum Co Ltd [1940] 1 All ER 260; and PARA 151 post. Thus, a tenant might remove vats used for soap boiling (Poole's Case (1703) 1 Salk 368), salt pans (Lawton v Salmon (1782) 1 Hy Bl 260n (b)) and engines for working collieries (Lawton v Lawton (1743) 3 Atk 13; Lord Dudley v Lord Warde (1751) Amb 113; Ward v Countess Dudley (1887) 57 LT 20).

180. Ornamental fixtures.

Objects which have been fixed to the freehold by way of ornament<sup>1</sup> or for domestic convenience and utility<sup>2</sup> have from the earliest times been removable by the tenant provided that the lease does not provide to the contrary<sup>3</sup> and that they are capable of being severed without irreparable injury to the land<sup>4</sup>.

Articles which form an essential part of a house at the time of its construction may not be removed<sup>5</sup>; and it is doubtful whether such articles may properly be called fixtures of any description<sup>6</sup>. Skylights are not fixtures but form part of the roof<sup>7</sup>.

The removal of certain fixtures may require listed building consent<sup>8</sup>.

The articles of ornament dealt with in them were ornamental chimney-pieces, pier-glasses, tapestry and other hangings, and wainscot fixed only by screws (Elwes v Maw (1802) 3 East 38 at 53; Buckland v Butterfield (1820) 2 Brod & Bing 54 at 58); marble chimney-pieces (Allen v Allen (1729) Mos 112; Lawton v Lawton (1743) 3 Atk 13 at 15; Ex p Quincy (1750) 1 Atk 477; Lord Dudley v Lord Warde (1751) Amb 113; Lawton v Salmon (1782) 1 Hy Bl 260n(b); Elliott v Bishop (1854) 10 Exch 496 at 510 (on appeal (1855) 11 Exch 113 at 119, Ex Ch)); pier-glasses (Beck v Rebow (1706) 1 P Wms 94); tapestry (Squier v Mayer (1701) Freem Ch 249; Harvey v Harvey (1740) 2 Stra 1141; Beck v Rebow supra; Leigh v Taylor supra; affg Re de Falbe, Ward v Taylor supra which overruled on this point D'Eyncourt v Gregory (1866) LR 3 Eq 382), but tapestry fixed as a part of a general and permanent scheme of decoration will pass as a fixture under a devise of a mansion house (Norton v Dashwood [1896] 2 Ch 497; Re Whaley, Whaley v Roehrich [1908] 1 Ch 615); stuffed birds and other specimens in cases forming the contents of a museum in a settled mansion house (Viscount Hill v Bullock [1897] 2 Ch 482, CA).

The relaxation of the rule requires that the article should be specifically ornamental, and not an ordinary accessory to the house, such as a conservatory on a brick foundation, communicating with the rest of the house: Buckland v Butterfield supra at 58; Leach v Thomas (1835) 7 C & P 327; Jenkins v Gething (1862) 2 John & H 520. A marble chimney-piece, when these chimney-pieces became more common, was not necessarily ornamental, and a chimney-piece may be ornamental even if not made of marble: Bishop v Elliott (1855) 11 Exch 113 at 121. A cornice, if ornamental, is removable: Avery v Cheslyn (1835) 3 Ad & El 75.

2 The following articles of domestic utility have been held removable: stoves and grates, fixed with brickwork in the chimney-places, which can be removed without doing injury to the chimney-places (R v St Dunstan, Kent, Inhabitants (1825) 4 B & C 686 at 691; Grymes v Boweren (1830) 6 Bing 437 at 439; Re Gawan, ex p Barclay (1855) 5 De GM & G 403 at 410; R v Lee Inhabitants (1866) LR 1 QB 241 at 254; Squier v Mayer (1701) Freem Ch 249); kitchen ranges, ovens and boilers (Grymes v Boweren supra; Darby v Harris (1841) 1 QB 895; Winn v Ingilby (1822) 5 B & Ald 625); cupboards which stand on the ground and are removable without other injury to the walls than the marks of a few nails (R v St Dunstan, Kent, Inhabitants supra; Re Gawan, ex p Barclay supra); pumps (Grymes v Boweren supra); bells (Lyde v Russell (1830) 1 B & Ad 394; Pugh v Arton (1869) LR 8 Eq 626 at 629).

181. Removal causing serious damage.

So long as an article can be removed without doing irreparable damage to the demised premises, neither the method nor the degree of annexation, nor the quantum of damage that would be done either to the article itself or to the demised premises by the removal, have any bearing upon the tenant's right to remove it, except in so far as they indicate the intention with which the tenant affixed the article to the premises<sup>1</sup>. Where trade fixtures have to be taken to pieces in the removal, in general it is essential that they are capable of being put together in the same form in some other place<sup>2</sup>. Buildings of a permanent nature are not removable<sup>3</sup>, but a temporary corrugated iron shed used for trade is removable<sup>4</sup>. Glasshouses are removable when erected for the purpose of his business by a market gardener<sup>5</sup> but, when erected for ornament or convenience, are not removable<sup>6</sup>. Slight buildings, erected for the purpose of trade<sup>7</sup>, and buildings which are accessory to removable machinery are removable<sup>8</sup>.

Petrol pumps affixed to tanks embedded in the ground are removable tenant's fixtures, but the tanks themselves are irremovable fixtures: Smith v City Petroleum Co Ltd [1940] 1 All ER 260. Formerly a fixture was removable only if it could be removed without material damage being done to the freehold (Trappes v Harter (1833) 2 Cr & M 153 at 181; Avery v Cheslyn (1835) 3 Ad & El 75; Re Gawan, ex p Barclay (1855) 5 De GM & G 403; Gibson v Hammersmith and City Rly Co (1863) 2 Drew & Sm 603 at 608; Wake v Hall (1883) 8 App Cas 195 at 205, HL), but trifling damage to the freehold was not regarded (Martin v Roe (1857) 7 E & B 237 at 244). Fixtures affixed for convenience or utility formerly could be removed only when they were slightly affixed and could be removed entire: Grymes v Boweren (1830) 6 Bing 437 at 440. It appears to be general practice that the tenant is liable to repair the damage done by the removal (see Spyer v Phillipson supra at 201) but, where the removal causes injury to brickwork, the brickwork need not be restored to a perfect state as though the article it was intended to support were still there, but may be left in such a state as to be most useful to the landlord or the next tenant (Foley v Addenbrooke (1844) 13 M & W 174 at 196).

182. Time for removal.

Where fixtures are removable by a tenant, the general rule is that he is entitled to exercise this right only during the term<sup>1</sup> and, if he omits to do so, the fixtures become the reversioner's absolute property<sup>2</sup>. If, however, the tenant remains in possession after the term in such circumstances that he is entitled still to consider himself as tenant, his right to remove fixtures continues as long as this state of things lasts<sup>3</sup>. Thus, where the tenant takes a new lease from his landlord thereby effecting a surrender by operation of law of his existing tenancy, the tenant's right to remove tenant's fixtures nevertheless continues<sup>4</sup>. If he is a tenant holding on an uncertain tenancy, his right to remove fixtures continues for such a time as is reasonable to enable him to remove the fixtures after the determination of his tenancy<sup>5</sup>. The general rule applies in whatever manner the term comes to an end, whether by effluxion of time or by surrender<sup>6</sup> or forfeiture<sup>7</sup>, but in a case of surrender<sup>8</sup> or forfeiture<sup>9</sup> a third person, such as a mortgagee of the fixtures from the tenant, is entitled to a reasonable time<sup>10</sup> within which to remove them. A tenant who is entitled to remove fixtures under the stipulations of the lease may remove them within a reasonable time after the determination of the term<sup>11</sup> but he has an obligation to make good damage caused by their installation and removal<sup>12</sup>.

In the case of land requisitioned in the exercise of emergency powers, the right of removal may be exercised within a reasonable time after the requisitioning authority gives up possession, when that occurs after or shortly before the expiry of the term: see the Landlord and Tenant (Requisitioned Land) Act 1942 s 7.

There is authority that the tenant's right to remove fixtures continues so long as he retains possession: Penton v Robart (1801) 2 East 88 at 90-91 (tenant held entitled to remove fixtures after the expiration of the term and judgment for possession had been obtained as they were removed when the tenant 'was in fact still in possession of the premises'). Penton v Robart supra has, however, been doubted and distinguished (see Weeton v Woodcock supra; Leader v Homewood supra; and Barff v Probyn (1895) 64 LJQB 557) and expressly dissented from (see Deeble v McMullen (1857) 8 Ir CLR 355); but it was referred to with approval in New Zealand Government Property Corp v HM and S Ltd supra. It seems that a tenant at sufferance may be entitled to remove fixtures: Barff v Probyn supra. Where possession proceedings are compromised between the parties, the effect of which is to postpone the date on which the tenant is to deliver up possession of the premises, the question whether the tenant is entitled to remove fixtures in the interim depends upon the construction of the compromise agreement: see Fitzherbert v Shaw (1789) 1 Hy Bl 258, followed in Heap v Barton (1852) 12 CB 274.

183. Effect of new lease.

If the previous tenancy has expired by effluxion of time or is determined by surrender by operation of law, the right to remove fixtures is carried forward into the new tenancy<sup>1</sup>. Where there is an express surrender, the question must be determined in accordance with the provisions of the deed but, in the absence of an express renunciation of the right to remove tenant's fixtures, the right carries forward into the new tenancy<sup>2</sup>.

1 New Zealand Government Property Corp'n v HM and S Ltd [1982] QB 1145, [1982] 1 All ER 624, CA. It was formerly supposed that the tenant lost his right to remove tenant's fixtures upon the determination of the term and the tenant's taking a new lease of the premises unless express provision was made to carry forward into the new tenancy the tenant's right to remove: see Leschallas v Woolf [1908] 1 Ch 641; Slough Picture Hall Co Ltd v Wade, Wilson v Nevile, Reid & Co Ltd (1916) 32 TLR 542; Pole-Carew v Western Counties and General Manure Co Ltd [1920] 2 Ch 97, CA.

184. Licence to remove fixtures.

In order that a licence by the landlord for the removal of fixtures after the determination of the tenancy may be available against the succeeding tenant it should be by deed<sup>1</sup>. An oral agreement by the landlord to take fixtures which the tenant could remove is, however, enforceable, because it does not relate to an interest in land<sup>2</sup>.

1 Roffey v Henderson (1851) 17 QB 574. Fixtures may not be removed under such an agreement as against a mortgagee taking without notice of the agreement: Thomas v Jennings (1896) 45 WR 93.

As to conversion and other categories of wrongful interference with goods see TORT vol 45(2) (Reissue) PARA 542 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/4. DEMISED PREMISES/(4) FIXTURES/(ii) Removal of Fixtures/185. Contract to leave fixtures.

185. Contract to leave fixtures.

The tenant's right to remove trade or other fixtures is subject to the terms of the contract between the landlord and himself, and will be lost if he has covenanted to yield up the demised premises with the fixtures in such language as to make it imperative to construe 'fixtures' as including fixtures removable by a tenant. If it stands in the covenant by itself, the word 'fixtures' will include landlord's and tenant's fixtures<sup>1</sup> but, if the covenant enumerates a series of specific items all of which are of the nature of landlord's fixtures, and then concludes with general words such as 'all other fixtures', the general words will be construed according to the ejusdem generis rule<sup>2</sup> as including only landlord's fixtures and the tenant will retain his ordinary right to remove tenant's fixtures<sup>3</sup>. To restrict the general words in this manner it is sufficient that the specific words should refer only to articles which ordinarily are not removable by the tenant<sup>4</sup>. If the specific words are not assignable exclusively to landlord's fixtures, the general words will have their full effect and will prevent the removal of tenant's fixtures<sup>5</sup>.

A covenant to deliver up buildings erected during the term includes trade fixtures<sup>6</sup>, and a covenant to yield up specified machinery extends to substituted machinery<sup>7</sup>, but not to new machinery of an improved kind which was not contemplated at the time of the lease<sup>8</sup>. A covenant to leave in good repair all erections, fences and fixed machinery is sufficient to deprive the tenant of the right to remove trade fixtures<sup>9</sup>, but a covenant to yield up works does not extend to articles which are not fixtures<sup>10</sup>. For the lease to take away a tenant's ordinary legal right to remove 'tenant's fixtures', the intention to this effect must, however, be clearly expressed<sup>11</sup> so that it is not sufficient to deprive the tenant of this right that the tenant had installed the relevant item pursuant to a contractual obligation to do so<sup>12</sup>.

1 Leschallas v Woolf [1908] 1 Ch 641. It is possible that the new threefold classification of things brought onto the land (see PARA 172 ante) will mean that the word 'fixtures' will subsequently be construed rather more narrowly so that it is more likely, after Elitestone Ltd v Morris [1997] 2 All ER 513 at 522, [1997] 1 WLR 687 at 695-696, HL, to include fixtures removable by a tenant.

187. Tenant's right to timber.

The respective rights of landlord and tenant as to trees vary according to whether the trees are timber trees or not<sup>1</sup>. All trees pass as parcel of the demised premises unless they are excepted<sup>2</sup>, but the tenant has only a limited property in, and limited rights over, timber trees for so long as they are annexed to the land. By virtue thereof he is entitled to all benefit, such as fruit or shade, that may be derived from them while so annexed<sup>3</sup>. Subject to the general statutory restrictions on the felling of trees<sup>4</sup>, he is also entitled to fell timber for the purpose of repairing buildings and fences so as to keep them as he found them, and to mend implements, and also for fuel if there is not sufficient dead wood available<sup>5</sup>. If the house falls by tempest or other act of God, the tenant may take timber to rebuild it<sup>6</sup>. When timber trees are dead, the tenant is entitled to cut them down and take them<sup>7</sup>, and such dead trees also belong to him if they are blown down<sup>8</sup>. If the tenant cuts down timber under any other circumstances, or tops it or does any act by which it may decay, that is waste<sup>9</sup>.

4 With certain exceptions, no growing tree may be felled without the licence of the Forestry Commissioners: see the Forestry Act 1967 s 9(1); and FORESTRY vol 52 (2009) PARA 120. Where a tree preservation order has been made under the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 s 198 (as amended) (power to make tree preservation orders) or s 211 (as amended) (preservation of trees in conservation areas), the statutory consents must be obtained: see FORESTRY vol 52 (2009) PARAS 131-132. As to the preservation of trees generally see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(2) (Reissue) PARA 847 et seq; and as to the preservation of important hedgerows see OPEN SPACES AND COUNTRYSIDE vol 78 (2010) PARA 700 et seq.

5 Co Litt 53b. The use of timber for these purposes was called 'housebote', 'plowbote' and 'firebote' (Co Litt 53b), or 'estovers' (Co Litt 41b). Cf Courtenay v Fisher (1826) 4 Bing 3. Although the tenant may fell timber for such necessary purposes, he must, however, at his own peril select such trees as are fit for the purpose, and employ them accordingly (Simmons v Norton (1831) 7 Bing 640 at 649), and the tenant may not sell the timber and use the proceeds in the purchase of other material for the repair of buildings (Co Litt 53b), nor may he cut down timber in advance so as to be used for repairs as occasion requires (Gorges v Stanfield (1597) Cro Eliz 593). The tenant does not acquire a right of sale by the landlord's long acquiescence: see Lord Courtown v Ward (1802) 1 Sch & Lef 8. Similarly, a tenant may cut turf for fuel, but not for sale (Lord Courtown v Ward supra; Count De Salis v - (1809) 2 Mol 516; Lord Waterpark v Austen (1822) 1 Jo Ex Ir 627n; Pollard v Smith (1826) 1 Hog 391; White v Walsh (1829) 1 Jo Ex Ir 626n), unless nothing but bog is demised and it is not capable of use except by being cut for sale, or if it was cut for sale at the time of demise (Coppinger v Gubbins (1846) 3 Jo & Lat 397 at 410). ### 188. Landlord's right to timber.

The general property in timber trees, unless dead, is in the landlord<sup>1</sup> and, if the tenant or any other person severs them from the land, or if they are blown down, the limited property of the tenant is determined and the landlord may take them as parcel of his inheritance. Similarly, if the house is pulled down, the timber of which the house was made belongs at once to the landlord<sup>2</sup>.

189. Young timber trees.

Where trees have not attained the age necessary to make them timber trees, their prospective value as timber trees prevents the tenant from cutting them down, except in a proper course of thinning and, if he does so, he commits waste<sup>1</sup>. It is also waste for the tenant to allow the young plants or germens to be destroyed<sup>2</sup>; but, if he does this in a due course of cultivation, and for the purpose of improving the growth of adjacent timber trees, he is entitled to the proceeds<sup>3</sup>. There may also be a coppice of timber trees, where the trees are felled and shoots are allowed to grow from the stumps<sup>4</sup>, these being cut at intervals of 15 years and upwards. In that case the tenant is entitled to continue the same cutting at the proper time, and to take the proceeds without regard to the age of the trees<sup>5</sup>.

190. Tenant's general property in trees not being timber.

The general property in trees which are not timber and in underwood is in the tenant<sup>1</sup>, and he may cut them down, provided that they are not planted for ornament or for the protection of the house or for shade to animals at pasture<sup>2</sup>, and that the cutting does not change the nature of the property demised. Thus, the tenant may not cut down apple trees in a garden or orchard, or cut down a quick-set hedge<sup>3</sup>, or plough up strawberry beds in full bearing<sup>4</sup>. Where the tenant properly cuts down trees or underwood, he is entitled to the proceeds, and this applies also where the trees or underwood are cut down by a stranger and the tenant adopts his act<sup>5</sup>. The tenant may, however, cut down the trees or underwood in a reasonable manner only<sup>6</sup>, and not so as to prevent them from growing again<sup>7</sup>. He may not take up a growing tree<sup>8</sup> or grub up the stools from which the young shoots will spring<sup>9</sup> and, if he exceeds his right, he is liable to a claim for waste<sup>10</sup>.

191. Exception of trees from lease.

The common law rights of landlord and tenant in respect of trees growing on the demised land may be varied by the parties' contract, and this is done either by exception or by covenant or agreement. An exception of 'trees' refers prima facie to trees which are useful for their wood, and hence it does not extend to fruit trees<sup>1</sup>. In an exception of 'timber and other trees, underwood and bushes and thorns other than such bushes and thorns as shall be necessary for the repair of the fences', the final words do not specify any particular bushes and thorns, and hence they do not operate as an exception from the exception. All the bushes and thorns are excepted, subject to the tenant's right to take those necessary for the repair of fences<sup>2</sup>.

An exception of 'timber and other trees' refers only to the trees themselves and does not except the soil but only sufficient nutriment out of the land to sustain the life of the trees<sup>3</sup>. It is the same where the exception is of 'saleable woods'<sup>4</sup>, but an exception of 'plantations'<sup>5</sup>, or of 'woods and underwoods'<sup>6</sup>, refers also to the soil and excepts the soil on which the trees grow. If the exception is of 'timber and other trees, wood and underwood', the former words control the latter, and the soil of land covered with growing wood does not pass<sup>7</sup>.

- 1 London v Chapter of Southwell Collegiate Church (1618) Hob 303; Wyndham v Way (1812) 4 Taunt 316 at 318 note (a). An exception of 'all timber and other trees, but not the annual fruit thereof' will prima facie be construed in the same way, for the term 'fruit' is not in legal terminology confined to trees which are popularly known as fruit trees, but applies to the produce of oak, elm and walnut trees: Bullen v Denning (1826) 5 B & C 842 at 847 per Bagley J.

192. Right to enter and cut.

An exception of timber or other trees is usually accompanied by a reservation of the right to enter and to cut and carry them away, but this is not essential. An exception of trees carries with it the right to do all things necessary for getting and disposing of them, and consequently, without express reservation, the landlord may enter to show the trees to an intending purchaser, and either he or the purchaser may cut them down and carry them away<sup>1</sup>, unless the timber is ornamental and the landlord has so acted as to make it inequitable that he should fell it, as, for example, where he has consented to the tenant's spending money in improving the grounds<sup>2</sup>. In the absence of express agreement, the excepted trees are at the landlord's risk, and the tenant is not bound to protect them from his cattle<sup>3</sup>.

- 1 Liford's Case (1614) 11 Co Rep 46b. It is not necessary that the lease should be by deed; if the lease is under hand only, the landlord enters as the tenant's licensee: Hewitt v Isham (181) 7 Exch 77. See also DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 238.

- 3 Clithero v Higgs (1636) W Jo 388; Glenham v Hanby (1699) 1 Ld Raym 739. This seems to be contrary to principle, as the damage by the tenant's cattle is a trespass and, where a field contains young trees and shrubs, the tenant should give notice to the landlord before grazing cattle in it so that the landlord may protect them by fences: Fowler v Johnstone (1892) 8 TLR 327. As to trespass by animals generally see ANIMALS vol 2 (2008) PARA 752 et seq.

193. Effect of covenants as to trees.

The parties' rights may also be affected by express covenants relating to trees, such as a covenant by the landlord to provide for the delivery of timber for repairs or a covenant by the tenant to restrain interference with trees, whether they are included in the demise or excepted. Under a covenant by the landlord to deliver timber growing on the premises sufficient for the repair of those premises, he must deliver timber sufficient in quality as well as in quantity<sup>1</sup>.

Where trees are not excepted out of a demise, the tenant may nevertheless be placed under special restrictions as to removing them during the tenancy, or under special obligations as to delivering them up at the end of the tenancy. Under a covenant not to remove or grub up or destroy trees, the tenant is prevented from removing trees from one part of the premises to another, or taking them away (unless dead), even though he plants a greater number than he takes away<sup>2</sup>. However, under a covenant to deliver up at the end of the term all the orchard trees existing at the time of the demise, reasonable use and wear only excepted, it is a reasonable use of the orchard, if it is overcrowded, to remove trees past bearing<sup>3</sup>.

194. Cutting of excepted trees.

Where trees are excepted out of a demise, the cutting of them is not waste, as waste can only be committed of the thing demised<sup>1</sup>. Although the cutting would be actionable as trespass, it is usual to support the exception by an express covenant on the tenant's part not to fell, lop or top the trees<sup>2</sup>. Such a covenant will not prevent the tenant from cutting trees or underwood which interfere with the use of the land for the purpose for which it is demised<sup>3</sup>.

1 Goodright d Peters v Vivian (1807) 8 East 190 at 192; and see Barret v Barret (circa 1629) Het 34.

2 See Raymond v Fitch (1835) 2 Cr M & R 588. The landlord's executor may sue for a breach of the covenant committed in the landlord's lifetime: Raymond v Fitch supra.

3 Thus, where in a lease of a farm and quarries of stone, with liberty to work the quarries, there is an exception of trees and a covenant not to commit waste by cutting down wood or underwood, it is not a breach of the covenant to cut down wood and underwood required to be removed in order to work the quarries: Doe d Rogers v Price (1849) 8 CB 894.

(6) ENCROACHMENTS

195. Presumption as to encroachments by tenant.

Where, during the currency of his tenancy, a tenant encroaches<sup>1</sup> upon, or without title to do so takes possession of, other land, there is a presumption that the land so taken becomes annexed to the demised premises, whether or not it is immediately adjacent to the demised premises, and whether or not it belongs to the landlord or to a third person, and on the determination of the tenancy the land must be given up to the landlord together with the demised premises<sup>2</sup>. The presumption applies whether or not the land taken by the tenant is waste land<sup>3</sup>. Where the land belongs to a third person and the title is not registered, the third person's title is extinguished after the requisite period of adverse possession under the Limitation Act 1980<sup>4</sup>, and the tenant is entitled to retain possession until the determination of his tenancy, whereupon the landlord then becomes entitled to possession together with the property originally demised. Where the land belongs to the landlord, the presumption applies whether or not the landlord has given his consent to the encroachment<sup>5</sup>. The tenant may acquire an interest in the land after the requisite period of adverse possession, but that interest will be a leasehold interest only<sup>6</sup>. In the case of registered land, an adverse possessor may apply to be registered as proprietor of the registered estate after the period of ten years ending on the date of the application<sup>7</sup>.

1 Technically, encroachment occurs only in respect of waste land, but the same principles apply whether the land is waste or not: see the text and note 3 infra.

196. Presumption where encroachment not contiguous.

The application of the presumption as to an encroachment enuring for the benefit of the holding or of the landlord is not confined to encroachments on land immediately adjacent to the demised premises. It is enough if the encroachment is so near that by reason of its nearness the tenant gained the opportunity of making it, and the landlord might have tacitly acquiesced in it<sup>1</sup>. Thus, the presumption is not rebutted by the intervention of a small river and fence and a narrow strip of waste<sup>2</sup>, or of a road<sup>3</sup>.

197. Rebuttal of presumption.

The presumption that an encroachment by the tenant enures for the landlord's benefit may be rebutted by proving that the landlord and the tenant so conducted themselves as to show that the landlord treated the encroachment as not enuring for his benefit<sup>1</sup>. Thus, if the landlord on application refuses his consent to an encroachment and the tenant nevertheless incloses and builds, the presumption is rebutted<sup>2</sup>. Again, if, after an encroachment has been made, the land encroached upon is severed from the demised premises by a conveyance to a third person and the severance is brought to the landlord's knowledge, the presumption is rebutted; but, if the landlord is allowed to remain under the belief that the encroachment is part of the holding, the tenant is estopped from denying it<sup>3</sup>. The fact that an encroacher in adverse possession of land takes a lease of adjoining land from the owner of the land encroached upon does not raise the presumption that after the date of the lease the land encroached upon was occupied as part of the demised premises<sup>4</sup>.

5. DURATION OF TENANCY

(1) TENANCY AT WILL

198. Nature of tenancy at will.

A tenancy at will is a tenancy under which the tenant is in possession, and which is determinable at the will of either the landlord or the tenant. Although on its creation such a tenancy is expressed to be at the will of the landlord or, as the case may be, the tenant only, the law implies that it is to be at the will of the other party also, because every lease at will must in law be at the will of both parties<sup>1</sup>. As in other tenancies, a tenancy at will arises by contract binding both the landlord and the tenant<sup>2</sup>; and the contract may be express or implied<sup>3</sup>. An express tenancy at will may have effect as such even though an annual rent is reserved<sup>4</sup>. The use of the words 'tenant at will' in an agreement does not create a tenancy at will where the remainder of the agreement is inconsistent with such a tenancy<sup>5</sup>.

2 Ley v Peter (1858) 3 H & N 101 at 107. There must be a contract and an intention to enter into legal relations for a tenancy at will to be created; if there is no such intention, possession will be as licensee only: Heslop v Burns [1974] 3 All ER 406, [1974] 1 WLR 1241, CA.

199. Implied tenancy at will.

A tenancy at will is implied where a person is in possession by the owner's consent<sup>1</sup>, and his possession is not as employee or agent<sup>2</sup> or as a licensee holding under an irrevocable licence<sup>3</sup>, and is not held in virtue of any freehold estate or of any tenancy for a certain term<sup>4</sup>. Such a tenancy is implied accordingly in cases of mere permissive occupation without payment of rent<sup>5</sup>, for example the occupation of a house by a nonconformist minister under trustees in whom the property in the house is vested<sup>6</sup>.

Such a tenancy may be implied upon a mere general letting if there are circumstances from which the court may infer that the tenancy is not to be a periodic one<sup>7</sup>. The payment of a periodic rent is only one, albeit an important one, of the circumstances to consider<sup>8</sup>.

1 Doe d Hull v Wood (1845) 14 M & W 682 at 687. It has been said that this must be an affirmative consent, and not a mere negative or silent consent (Ley v Peter (1858) 3 H & N 101 at 108 per Bramwell B); but it seems to be sufficient if the circumstances show assent by the owner (see Wheeler v Mercer [1957] AC 416 at 423, [1956] 3 All ER 631 at 632, HL, per Viscount Simonds and at 432 and 638 per Lord Cohen, agreeing with the county court judge that positive assent could and must, in that case, be implied from the circumstances). Cf Wheeler v Mercer supra at 427-428 and at 635 per Lord Morton of Henryton, who inclined to the view that the tenancy was a tenancy at sufferance. As to tenancies at sufferance see PARAS 206-207 post.

See also Hughes v Griffin [1969] 1 All ER 460 at 465, [1969] 1 WLR 23 at 31, CA. A beneficiary in actual occupation is in law a tenant at will to the trustees (Garrard v Tuck (1849) 8 CB 231); but, if he is receiving the rents, he does this as the trustees' agent (Melling v Leak (1855) 16 CB 652 at 669). Cf Morgell v Paul (1828) 2 Man & Ry KB 303; Vallance v Savage (1831) 7 Bing 595. A tenancy at will without any consideration is not enlarged into a tenancy from year to year by the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 2: see Goldsack v Shore [1950] 1 KB 708, [1950] 1 All ER 276, CA.

6 See ECCLESIASTICAL LAW vol 14 para 1408.

7 The basic rule is that if one party permits another into possession of his land on payment of rent, failing more the inference sensibly and reasonably to be drawn is that the parties intended that there should be a periodic tenancy: see Javad v Aqil [1991] 1 All ER 243 at 249, [1991] 1 WLR 1007 at 1011, CA, per Nicholls LJ, applied in Walji v Mount Cook Land Ltd [2002] 1 P & CR 13, [2000] All ER (D) 2440, CA. See also Richardson v Langridge (1811) 4 Taunt 128 at 132 per Chambre J; Doe d Hull v Wood (1845) 14 M & W 682; Doe d Robertson v Gardiner (1852) 12 CB 319; and see Roe d Bree v Lees (1777) 2 Wm Bl 1171 at 1173; Re Stroud and East and West India Docks and Birmingham Junction Rly Co (1849) 8 CB 502; Bayley v Fitzmaurice (1857) 8 E & B 664 at 679 (on appeal sub nom Fitzmaurice v Bayley (1860) 9 HL Cas 78); Hunt v Allgood (1861) 10 CBNS 253; cf Doe d Martin v Watts (1797) 7 Term Rep 83 at 85 (a 'general occupation' said to be an occupation from year to year, but in that case rent had been paid).

8 Circumstances additional to possession of the land and payment of a rent may negate the inference of a periodic tenancy: see Javad v Aqil [1991] 1 All ER 243, [1991] 1 WLR 1007, CA (entry into occupation pending negotiation for the grant of a lease held to be a tenancy at will notwithstanding payment of a quarterly rent); Cardiothoracic Institute v Shrewdcrest Ltd [1986] 3 All ER 633, [1986] 1 WLR 368 (tenant holding over after expiry of a business tenancy excluded from the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 ss 24-28 (as amended) (see PARA 713 et seq post) pending negotiations for the grant of a new lease held to be a tenant at will notwithstanding payment of a monthly rent); but cf Walji v Mount Cook Land Ltd [2002] 1 P & CR 13, [2000] All ER (D) 2440, CA (business lease held by a company that was struck off the register; on expiry, a new lease was agreed in principle to the individuals (former directors of the struck-off company) who had remained in possession; rent was paid but there were no continuing negotiations for the grant of a new lease for over two years; held that a periodic tenancy had arisen rather than a tenancy at will). See also the other cases cited in note 7 supra which must be considered in the light of the modern tendency to inquire as to the correct inference to be drawn from the circumstances of the case as to the parties' intentions, rather than applying any presumption which is said to arise from the mere payment and acceptance of a periodic rent; and see PARA 209 post.

200. Possession pending completion.

A person who enters on land with the owner's consent under a contract which does not immediately give him a definite interest in the land enters as tenant at will. For example, a purchaser who enters into possession of land pending the completion of the purchase is generally a tenant at will<sup>1</sup>. This is so where the consideration is the payment of sums for use and occupation<sup>2</sup> or where there is no special stipulation<sup>3</sup>. If, however, a purchaser enters into possession of land pending the completion of the purchase on the terms that his right to possession is to cease if he defaults in payment of sums which are not payable for use and occupation but are payable in respect of the purchase price, interest and outgoings on the property, the purchaser is not a tenant at will<sup>4</sup>. Entry into occupation by a prospective purchaser prior to exchange of contracts but with an intention to purchase may, however, give rise to a periodic tenancy<sup>5</sup>.

Entry into occupation of land pending negotiation for the grant of a lease<sup>6</sup> or pursuant to an agreement for a lease<sup>7</sup> gives rise to a tenancy at will, unless there are circumstances from which the court may infer that the parties intended to grant a periodic tenancy<sup>8</sup>. The payment of periodic rent, even in advance, is not inconsistent with the grant of a tenancy at will, it being merely one, albeit an important one, of the circumstances to consider in determining the fair inference to be drawn as to the parties' intentions<sup>9</sup>. Similarly, entry under a lease which is void gives rise to a tenancy at will<sup>10</sup>, subject to the subsequent payment of rent giving rise to a periodic tenancy<sup>11</sup>.

1 Right d Lewis v Beard (1811) 13 East 210; Doe d Newby v Jackson (1823) 1 B & C 448; Ball v Cullimore (1835) 2 Cr M & R 120; Doe d Tones v Chamberlaine (1839) 5 M & W 14; Howard v Shaw (1841) 8 M & W 118; Doe d Stanway v Rock (1842) 4 Man & G 30; Doe d Parker v Boulton (1817) 6 M & S 148. Consequently the tenancy cannot be determined without demand of possession (see Pollen v Brewer (1859) 7 CBNS 371), although in Doe d Leeson v Sayer (1811) 3 Camp 8 this was not considered necessary; cf Doe d Moore v Lawder (1816) 1 Stark 308; Doe d Hiatt v Miller (1833) 5 C & P 595. While the purchaser is thus in possession, he is not bound to pay rent and a claim for use and occupation does not lie against him (Winterbottom v Ingham (1845) 7 QB 611; and see Hearn v Tomlin (1793) Peake 191; Kirtland v Pounsett (1809) 2 Taunt 145; Corringan v Woods (1867) 15 WR 318; cf Tew v Jones (1844) 13 M & W 12), save by virtue of special agreement (Saunders v Musgrave (1827) 6 B & C 524); although, if the remains in possession after the purchase has been abandoned, the claim does lie (Howard v Shaw supra; Markey v Coote (1876) IR 10 CL 149 at 155); and a vendor who remains in possession after the time for completion may be liable for use and occupation (Metropolitan Rly Co v Defries (1877) 2 QBD 387, CA). Contracts for the sale of land often expressly provide that, if the purchaser is allowed into possession in advance of completion, he takes possession as the vendor's licensee; and see the Standard Conditions of Sale (4th Edn) condition 5.2 which expressly provides that the purchaser is to occupy as licensee and not as tenant pending completion.

201. Possession after expiry of lease.

A tenant who, with the landlord's consent, remains in possession after his lease has expired is tenant at will until some other interest is created<sup>1</sup>, either by express grant or by implication by the payment and acceptance of rent<sup>2</sup>. Thus, where a lease of war-damaged premises was disclaimed and so deemed to have been surrendered<sup>3</sup> and the landlord and the tenant were willing that the tenant should remain in occupation as a trespasser, in law the tenant continued in possession as tenant at will<sup>4</sup>. The terms of a tenancy at will which arises in this way will be those of the expired lease unless inconsistent with the nature of a tenancy at will and unless there is evidence of a contrary intention<sup>5</sup>. A tenant who remains in possession after his lease has expired and who is entitled to the protection of the Rent Act 1977 or Part I of the Housing Act 1988<sup>6</sup> is, however, a statutory tenant or statutory periodic tenant and not a tenant at will<sup>7</sup>; and a tenant of a business tenancy under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>8</sup> remains in possession after the expiry of the term specified in his lease not as a tenant at will but because by the Act the term is continued unless and until the landlord or the tenant serves the notice or request prescribed<sup>9</sup>.

Cf Morgan v William Harrison Ltd [1907] 2 Ch 137, CA. In Simkin v Ashurst (1834) 1 Cr M & R 261, however, a holding over by a subtenant with consent was said to make him tenant at sufferance only. A notice to quit the premises, stating that the term has long since expired, does not recognise a yearly tenancy, but is a mere demand of possession: Doe d Godsell v Inglis (1810) 3 Taunt 54.

202. Determination of tenancy at will.

A tenancy at will is determinable by either party on his expressly or impliedly intimating to the other his wish that the tenancy should be at an end<sup>1</sup>. Until the intimation is thus given, the tenant is lawfully in possession; and accordingly the landlord may not recover the premises in a claim for recovery of land without a previous demand for possession<sup>2</sup> or other determination of the tenancy. A demand for possession by the landlord which determines the tenancy at will is not a notice to quit; and the issue of a possession claim is a sufficient demand for possession to bring the tenancy to an end<sup>3</sup>. The statutory minimum period of four weeks' notice to quit in respect of premises let as a dwelling<sup>4</sup> does not apply to a tenancy at will<sup>5</sup>. Where rent is payable under a tenancy at will and the tenancy is determined between the rent days, the rent is apportioned<sup>6</sup>.

1   A tenancy at will, whether created expressly or by implication, is not a tenancy within the meaning of that term in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 69(1) for the purposes of the provisions of that Act (see PARA 706 note 2 post) giving security of tenure for business, professional and other tenants: Wheeler v Mercer [1957] AC 416, [1956] 3 All ER 631, HL; Manfield & Sons Ltd v Botchin [1970] 2 QB 612, [1970] 3 All ER 143; approved in Hagee (London) Ltd v AB Erikson and Larson (a firm) [1976] QB 209, [1975] 3 All ER 234, CA. A tenancy at will is, however, within the provisions of the Rent Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45) (as amended) provided the rent is a monetary one (see PARAS 862, 1026 note 4 post) and is not a low rent within the meaning of those Acts (see PARAS 861, 1028 post): see Chamberlain v Farr [1942] 2 All ER 567, CA; Francis Jackson Development Ltd v Stemp [1943] 2 All ER 601, CA (cf Dunthorne and Shore v Wiggins Ltd [1943] 2 All ER 678, CA).

In Ellis v Rowbotham [1900] 1 QB 740, CA, it was, however, held that, in the absence of special statutory provisions or express covenants, the Apportionment Act 1870 did not apply to rent payable in advance. Formerly it was otherwise, and a tenant at a quarterly rent determining the tenancy during a quarter paid the rent for the quarter, but the landlord determining the tenancy lost it: Leighton v Theed (1701) 2 Salk 413; and see Disdale v Iles (1673) 2 Lev 88.

203. Determination by landlord.

Anything which amounts to a demand for possession, although not expressed in precise and formal language, is sufficient to indicate the determination of the landlord's will<sup>1</sup>. Thus, the landlord may expressly demand possession<sup>2</sup>, or state that the tenant is in against his, the landlord's, will, or send for the keys<sup>3</sup>. If the notice states terms and intimates that, if they are not accepted, the landlord will take steps to recover the premises, and the terms are rejected, this is a sufficient notice to determine the tenancy<sup>4</sup>. The landlord is not required to allow the tenant a reasonable time within which to vacate the premises<sup>5</sup>.

The tenancy is impliedly determined by the landlord when he does any act on the premises which is inconsistent with the continuance of the tenancy, as, for example, when he re-enters to take possession<sup>6</sup>, or puts in a new tenant<sup>7</sup>, or cuts down trees or carries away stone<sup>8</sup>, the trees and stone not being excepted from the demise<sup>9</sup>, and also when he does an act off the premises which is inconsistent with the tenancy, as, for example, when he grants a lease of the premises to commence forthwith<sup>10</sup>. An act done off the premises does not, however, determine the tenancy until the tenant has notice of it<sup>11</sup>.

If, however, 'the tenant, after the determination of his tenancy ... by a demand of possession, had entered on the premises for the sole purpose of removing his goods and continued there no longer than was necessary for that purpose, and did not exclude the landlord, perhaps he might not have been a trespasser': Doe d Nicholl v M'Kaeg supra at 723-724 per Lord Tenterden CJ.

205. Tenancy at will is personal relationship.

A tenancy at will is a personal relationship between the original landlord and tenant, and is determined by the death of either of them<sup>1</sup>. It is also determined if the landlord conveys away his reversion<sup>2</sup> or the tenant assigns<sup>3</sup> or sublets<sup>4</sup> the premises and the assignment or subletting comes to the landlord's notice<sup>5</sup>.

In Morton v Woods (1869) LR 4 QB 293 at 306, Ex Ch, it was, however, intimated that a tenancy at will might continue to subsist after the death of one of the parties unless the successor in title manifested his intention to determine it. See also Re Manser, Killick v Manser [1910] WN 61 (administrator of a deceased tenant at will accepted as tenant at will; her tenancy held to be on behalf of the deceased's estate). On the death of one of two joint tenants at will the tenancy at will subsists and vests in the surviving tenant: see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 195.

(2) TENANCY AT SUFFERANCE

206. Nature of tenancy at sufferance.

A person who enters on land by a lawful title<sup>1</sup> and, after his title has ended, continues in possession without statutory authority and without obtaining the consent of the person then entitled, is said to be a tenant at sufferance<sup>2</sup>, as distinct from a tenant at will who is in possession with the landlord's consent. This is so whatever the nature of the tenant's original estate, whether he was tenant for years<sup>3</sup>, or the subtenant of a tenant for years<sup>4</sup>, or a tenant at will<sup>5</sup>. A tenancy at sufferance arises by implication of law and may not be created by contract between the parties.

A tenancy at sufferance does not arise upon the holding over by one whose title was created by act of law<sup>6</sup>; and there can be no tenancy at sufferance against the Crown<sup>7</sup>. In these cases the person holding over is a mere trespasser<sup>8</sup>. One tenant at sufferance cannot make another<sup>9</sup>; but it seems that, on the death of a tenant at sufferance, the like tenancy will continue in favour of a person claiming under him<sup>10</sup>. A release from the landlord to the tenant at sufferance does not operate to enlarge the tenant's estate<sup>11</sup>.

1 A person who, in expectation of being granted a tenancy when a prospective landlord (as purchaser of the freehold) is in a position to grant one, pays 'advance rent' may find that he obtains no tenancy at all, but is only an occupier on sufferance and liable to eviction at the instance of mortgagees: see Hughes v Waite [1957] 1 All ER 603, [1957] 1 WLR 713. It has been held that a tenant who pays rent in advance and goes into possession or occupation will have a title good as against a mortgagee when the entry into possession was earlier than the date of the mortgage (Grace Rymer Investments Ltd v Waite [1958] Ch 831, [1958] 2 All ER 777, CA); but the case is probably no longer good law as one premise on which it was based (that there was a scintilla of time when the landlord was an absolute owner) was overruled in Abbey National Building Society v Cann [1991] 1 AC 56, [1990] 1 All ER 1085, HL (cited in PARA 34 note 4 ante).

2 Co Litt 57b. Any assent by the landlord to the holding over constitutes a tenancy at will, although a written acknowledgment that the tenant holds 'on sufferance only' has been held to be a mere acknowledgment and not to require to be stamped as an agreement for a tenancy: Barry v Goodman (1837) 2 M & W 768. Once the landlord indicates his dissent at the holding over, the tenant at sufferance becomes a trespasser. A tenant who holds over after the expiry of a protected tenancy of premises by virtue of the provisions of the Rent Act 1977 is, however, a statutory tenant and not a tenant at sufferance: see PARA 831 post. Similarly, a tenant who holds over after the expiry of an assured tenancy by virtue of the provisions of the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45) (as amended) (see PARA 1011 et seq post) or a business tenant who holds over by virtue of the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) is not a tenant at sufferance.

3 Co Litt 57b, 270b; and see Bayley v Bradley (1848) 5 CB 396; Doe d Patrick v Duke of Beaufort (1851) 6 Exch 498, 503. This applies also where the tenant under a landlord who was only tenant for life holds over after the landlord's death: Roe d Jordan v Ward (1789) 1 Hy Bl 96 at 99.

4 Simkin v Ashurst (1834) 1 Cr M & R 261.

5 Doe d Bennett v Turner (1840) 7 M & W 226; Turner v Doe d Bennett (1842) 9 M & W 643, Ex Ch (where it was left open whether he would be a trespasser or tenant at sufferance); Doe d Goody v Carter (1847) 9 QB 863 at 868; Day v Day (1871) LR 3 PC 751 at 760.

6 Eg where a guardian in socage held over after the heir had come of age: Co Litt 57b.

7 Co Litt 57b.

8 The recognition of a tenancy at sufferance in other cases probably arose from a desire to prevent the person holding over from being a disseisor and, therefore, in a position to acquire a title by adverse possession. The revision of the doctrine of adverse possession has rendered this use of the tenancy obsolete: see LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARA 901 et seq.

10 See Doe d Burrell v Perkins (1814) 3 M & S 271.

11 A tenant at sufferance has possession, but no privity of estate, and thus a release to him is void; but it is otherwise with a tenant at will: Co Litt 270b; Butler v Duckmanton (1607) Cro Jac 169. Such an instrument might, however, be held to operate as a grant: see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 177.

207. Rights of tenant and landlord.

A tenant at sufferance may maintain a claim of trespass by virtue of his possession<sup>1</sup>, and, like any other person holding without title who is deprived of possession, he may bring a claim for recovery of possession against a mere wrongdoer<sup>2</sup>.

The tenancy requires no notice to determine it; and consequently the landlord may enter, or the tenant may leave, at any time without notice<sup>3</sup>. A tenant at sufferance is not entitled to emblements<sup>4</sup>.

The landlord may sue the tenant at sufferance for use and occupation<sup>5</sup>, but he may not distrain<sup>6</sup>.

(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR

(i) Creation of Tenancy from Year to Year

208. Nature of tenancy.

A tenancy from year to year<sup>1</sup> arises either by express agreement or by implication of law or by statute<sup>2</sup>. It may be determined only by notice duly given<sup>3</sup> except where there is a stipulation for determination without notice<sup>4</sup>. The appropriate words for the express creation of the tenancy are 'from year to year'. The agreement may stipulate the time and length of any notice required to determine the tenancy<sup>5</sup>; but, in the absence of any such stipulation and of any statutory provision preventing determination<sup>6</sup>, the tenancy may be determined at the end of the first or any subsequent year<sup>7</sup>, unless the parties use further words showing that they contemplate a tenancy for two years at least<sup>8</sup>. Thus, where the lease is 'for one year certain and so on from year to year', the notice may not be given in the course of the first year<sup>9</sup>. A yearly tenancy does not become a tenancy for two years at least merely by the inclusion of expressions showing that the parties contemplated that it would last for more than one year<sup>10</sup>; and the lease may be so worded that it will be for one year only unless there is a further agreement between the parties<sup>11</sup>. A perpetual right of renewal is repugnant to a tenancy from year to year; but, where the tenant was given the right to renew by notice, the tenancy operated as a contract to create a succession of reversionary terms, each for one year certain, provided that the requisite notice was given<sup>12</sup>. A tenancy for 364 days and thereafter for successive periods of 364 days does not create a term of years or a tenancy from year to year<sup>13</sup>.

Where a tenancy from year to year continues beyond the first year, it is not treated as a tenancy determining and recommencing with every year. The tenant has a lease for one year certain, with a growing interest during every year thereafter, springing out of the original contract and parcel of it<sup>14</sup>. The tenancy does not determine with his death, but passes to his personal representative<sup>15</sup>. The tenancy may be assigned by the tenant unless there is an express provision to the contrary<sup>16</sup>. Where the lease is for a year<sup>17</sup>, or for one year and no longer, it expires at the end of the year without notice to quit<sup>18</sup>.

1 This tenancy is correctly described as a tenancy for a term (Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council v Monk [1992] 1 AC 478, [1992] 1 All ER 1, HL; Doe d Hull v Wood (1845) 14 M & W 682 at 686 per Parke B), and is included in the definition of 'term of years absolute' in the Law of Property Act 1925 s 205(1) (xxvii) (see PARA 2 note 3 ante).

2 Thus, an agreement to let agricultural land for a period of less than one year takes effect as a tenancy from year to year if it is a tenancy to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies: see s 2; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 327. See also Epsom and Ewell Borough Council v C Bell (Tadworth) Ltd [1983] 2 All ER 59, [1983] 1 WLR 379 (illustrating the statutory exception).

6 Unlike a tenancy at will, a tenancy from year to year attracts the protection of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 or falls within the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995; it also attracts the protection of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post). It is often, therefore, the case that the common law rules discussed in the text have to be applied with the addition of the relevant statutory provisions.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(i) Creation of Tenancy from Year to Year/209. Tenancy from year to year by presumption of law.

209. Tenancy from year to year by presumption of law.

The old common law presumption of a yearly or other periodic tenancy arising by entry upon premises with payment of rent by reference to a yearly holding or other period seldom now arises<sup>1</sup>. The fundamental question in each case is with what intent the rent was received and what was the real intention of both parties<sup>2</sup>. It is unclear whether subjective evidence of the intention of the parties is admissible in determining this question<sup>3</sup>.

If one party permits another to enter into<sup>4</sup> or remain in possession of<sup>5</sup> his land upon payment of rent<sup>6</sup> with reference to a yearly holding, failing more, the inference reasonably to be drawn is that the parties intended a yearly tenancy<sup>7</sup>. A typical case, however, involves more than the simple facts of possession and unexplained payment of rent<sup>8</sup>. Where there is more than the simple situation, the inference sensibly and reasonably to be drawn as to the intention of the parties depends upon a fair consideration of all the circumstances of which the payment of rent on a periodical basis is one, albeit a very important one<sup>9</sup>.

Where the tenant has a statutory right to remain in possession of the premises after expiry of the lease and he does so, paying rent, the fair inference to be drawn is that he does so in pursuance of his statutory rights and not under any new periodic tenancy<sup>10</sup>. Alternatively, where the tenant has no statutory right to remain in possession, the circumstances may show only an intention that the occupier should be a tenant at will<sup>11</sup>, or that no tenancy was intended to be granted<sup>12</sup>. Where a person is in possession under an agreement for a lease, he acquires a legal estate from year to year as soon as he pays rent on a yearly basis<sup>13</sup>. Where the agreement is specifically enforceable, the tenant is, in equity, entitled to hold for the term specified in the agreement<sup>14</sup>. The equitable rule prevails in all courts<sup>15</sup> and the tenant's equitable rights prevail over the position at common law<sup>16</sup>. The common law position is, however, still of importance where the agreement for lease is not specifically enforceable, as, for example, where the tenant has not performed a condition precedent<sup>17</sup>. A tenant who enters under a void lease and pays rent on a yearly basis similarly acquires a legal tenancy from year to year<sup>18</sup>; and in addition the void lease may be construed as an agreement for a lease<sup>19</sup> and may, therefore, be enforceable in equity<sup>20</sup>.

A tenancy from year to year is implied only where the rent paid is a yearly rent, even though it may be payable quarterly or at any other intervals constituting an aliquot part of a year. Thus payment of £100 under an agreement reserving a yearly rent of £1200 payable monthly will create a yearly tenancy, but payment of £100 under an agreement reserving a rent of £100 per month will create only a tenancy from month to month<sup>21</sup>. A tenant holding over after a term of years at a weekly rent acquires only a weekly tenancy<sup>22</sup>; and a tenant holding over after the expiration of a term which was for less than one year is only a tenant at will or a weekly tenant, or possibly not a tenant at all<sup>23</sup>.

1 In Longrigg, Burrough and Trounson v Smith (1979) 251 Estates Gazette 847 at 849, CA, Ormerod LJ was of the view that the presumption was 'unsound and no longer holds'; in Javad v Aqil [1991] 1 All ER 243 at 252, [1991] 1 WLR 1007 at 1017, CA, Nicholls LJ observed that the alternative view was rather that in present day conditions the circumstances in which the presumption will operate are very few and far between; but the continuing relevance of the common law presumption of a periodic tenancy was confirmed by Nicholls LJ in Javad v Aqil supra at 248 and 1012 and applied in Walji v Mount Cook Land Ltd [2002] 1 P & CR 13, [2000] All ER (D) 2440, CA.

209 Tenancy from year to year by presumption of law

NOTE 15--Amendment in force on 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/5. DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(i) Creation of Tenancy from Year to Year/210. Terms of yearly tenancy implied by law.

210. Terms of yearly tenancy implied by law.

Where there is an instrument of tenancy with reference to which possession is taken or retained, the yearly tenancy implied by law is deemed to be upon such of the terms of the instrument as are applicable to a yearly tenancy. Thus, upon an entry under an agreement for a lease, followed by payment of rent, the tenant becomes a yearly tenant upon such terms of the agreement as are consistent with that tenancy<sup>1</sup>; and the agreement so far controls the implied tenancy that the tenancy ceases without notice to quit at the end of the agreed term<sup>2</sup>. Similarly, a tenant who holds over after the expiration of the term and pays rent<sup>3</sup> in circumstances where the court implies the grant of a yearly tenancy<sup>4</sup> will, in the absence of facts pointing to a contrary conclusion, be held impliedly to have agreed to hold as tenant from year to year upon such terms of the old lease as are applicable to such a tenancy<sup>5</sup>. The applicable terms are not confined to those necessarily incident to a yearly tenancy, but include those terms which may be incident to such a tenancy<sup>6</sup>.

Certain terms are regarded as inconsistent with the nature of a yearly tenancy and they will not govern an implied yearly tenancy, for example a covenant to paint every three years<sup>7</sup>, a provision for two years' notice to quit<sup>8</sup> and an option to purchase the reversion<sup>9</sup>. Certain provisions, although not in their nature consistent with a yearly tenancy, bind the tenant if the implied yearly tenancy lasts long enough for them to apply<sup>10</sup>. The general principle is that, where a tenant has entered under an agreement for a lease and becomes a yearly tenant by reason of the payment of rent without the lease being granted, he is bound by all the covenants of the proposed lease if he actually occupies the premises for the term proposed<sup>11</sup>.

1 Roe d Jordan v Ward (1789) 1 Hy Bl 96; Doe d Rigge v Bell (1793) 5 Term Rep 471; Mann v Lovejoy (1826) Ry & M 355; Richardson v Gifford (1834) 1 Ad & El 52; Beale v Sanders (1837) 3 Bing NC 850; Doe d Thomson v Amey (1840) 12 Ad & El 476; Tress v Savage (1854) 4 E & B 36; Elliott v Johnson (1866) LR 2 QB 120 at 124; Wyatt v Cole (1877) 36 LT 613. Before payment of rent, and while the tenant is tenant at will, he is subject to the terms of the agreement (Richardson v Gifford supra at 56), and the doctrine applies equally to assignees of a void lease (Beale v Sanders supra), and to tenants who continue in occupation after the term under an express agreement that they are to be tenants at will (Morgan v William Harrison Ltd [1907] 2 Ch 137, CA). It follows that reference may be made to the instrument to ascertain the terms of the holding (De Medina v Polson (1815) Holt NP 47; Lee v Smith (1854) 9 Exch 662 at 665, 666; Tress v Savage supra); and reference may be made to it also to ascertain the commencement of the year of the tenancy (Roe d Jordan v Ward (1789) 1 Hy Bl 96; Kelly v Patterson (1874) LR 9 CP 681).

6 Hyatt v Griffiths (1851) 17 QB 505 at 509. Of this nature are provisions for payment of rent in advance (Finch v Miller (1848) 5 CB 428; Lee v Smith (1854) 9 Exch 662) or for payment of rent, damage by fire excepted (Bennett v Ireland (1858) EB & E 326); covenants to keep the premises in repair (Digby v Atkinson (1815) 4 Camp 275; Richardson v Gifford (1834) 1 Ad & El 52; Beale v Sanders (1837) 3 Bing NC 850; Arden v Sullivan (1850) 14 QB 832; Ecclesiastical Comrs v Merril (1869) LR 4 Exch 162; Wyatt v Cole (1877) 36 LT 613); covenants relating to the user of the premises, such as to carry on a particular trade (Sanders v Karnell (1858) 1 F & F 356); provisos with respect to the determination of the tenancy by a specified notice (Bridges v Potts (1864) 17 CBNS 314; Godfrey Thornfield Ltd v Bingham [1946] 2 All ER 485; Wembley Corp v Sherren [1938] 4 All ER 255); and provisos for re-entry on non-payment of rent or breach of covenant (Doe d Thomson v Amey (1840) 12 Ad & El 476; Thomas v Packer (1857) 1 H & N 669; Crawley v Price (1875) LR 10 QB 302). If the lease was subject to determination on a given event, so also is the yearly tenancy arising on holding over: Johnson v Reardon (1839) 2 I Eq R 123.

7 Pinero v Judson (1829) 6 Bing 206. A further example is a covenant to build or to do substantial repairs such as are not usually done by yearly tenants: Doe d Thomson v Amey (1840) 12 Ad & El 476 at 479; Bowes v Croll (1856) 6 E & B 255.

9 Re Leeds and Batley Breweries Ltd and Bradbury's Lease, Bradbury v Grimble & Co [1920] 2 Ch 548. As to stipulations in respect of notice to quit which are avoided for repugnancy see also PARA 213 post.

10 Thus a covenant to paint the premises every three or seven years of the term will be imported into the yearly tenancy if the tenant occupies that long: Martin v Smith (1874) LR 9 Exch 50.

11 Pistor v Cater (1842) 9 M & W 315; Adams v Clutterbuck (1883) 10 QBD 403 at 406. The same result will be achieved if the agreement is specifically enforceable: see PARA 76 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/5. DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(i) Creation of Tenancy from Year to Year/211. Effect of payment of rent.

211. Effect of payment of rent.

Payment of rent with reference to a yearly holding is not conclusive as to the creation of a tenancy from year to year; it is only evidence of such a tenancy. The fundamental question is always with what intention was the rent paid and received<sup>1</sup>. Accordingly, it is competent for either the payer or the receiver of rent to prove the circumstances in which the payment was made, and by those circumstances to rebut the inferences which would otherwise be drawn from the receipt of rent unexplained<sup>2</sup>. Whether the circumstances exclude the implication of a yearly tenancy is a question of fact to be decided on the circumstances of the case<sup>3</sup>. Thus, it is excluded where the parties have expressly created a tenancy at will<sup>4</sup>, or where the rent has been received in ignorance that the former tenancy has expired<sup>5</sup> or that the tenant has died<sup>6</sup>. In the case of a holding under a void lease, the yearly tenancy may be excluded if there is a great disproportion between the rent reserved by the void lease and the real value<sup>7</sup>.

1 Doe d Cheney v Batten (1775) 1 Cowp 243 at 245 per Lord Mansfield; and see PARA 209 note 2 ante; Holder v Holder [1968] Ch 353, [1968] 1 All ER 665, CA. See also Doe d Tucker v Morse (1830) 1 B & Ad 365; Doe d Pennington v Tanriere (1848) 12 QB 998 at 1013; Finlay v Bristol and Exeter Rly Co (1852) 7 Exch 409 at 420; Smith v Widlake (1877) 3 CPD 10, CA. Thus, the payment may be made in the course of negotiations for a new lease (Caulfield v Farr (1873) IR 7 CL 469); and mere payment of rent is not proof of a demise from year to year from a particular date (Phillips v Mosely (1824) 1 C & P 262). ### 212. Holding over.

A tenancy which arises by implication in favour of a tenant who holds over after the expiration of his lease and pays rent is only deemed to be on the terms of the old lease in the absence of evidence of a different understanding<sup>1</sup>. The question is one of fact; and, in the absence of any facts excluding an implied agreement between the parties to hold upon the terms of the old lease, so far as they are applicable to an annual tenancy, the law implies a new agreement to that effect between them<sup>2</sup>. Where nothing has been said by landlord or tenant with reference to any terms of tenancy, such an agreement is implied as a matter of law<sup>3</sup>; but, where there have been negotiations after the expiration of the old lease with regard to the terms of a tenancy, it is a question of fact whether there has been a consent by both parties to a continuance of the old tenancy and, if so, upon what terms<sup>4</sup>. The terms may be implied from the parties' relationship, as in the case of a landlord and tenant of an agricultural holding, from the use of certain words, such as the word 'demise', and from the surrounding circumstances existing at the time when the parties consent to the continuance of the tenancy; and what terms are to be implied is in each case an inference of fact<sup>5</sup>. Thus, where there have been negotiations for a letting at an increased rent, and the tenant stays on, it is not a necessary inference that he is liable only for the former rent<sup>6</sup>; although, if a different rent has been in fact agreed upon, this does not prevent the new tenancy being upon the old terms in other respects<sup>7</sup>.

The implied tenancy operates as a new contract and has reference to the state of affairs existing at its commencement, so that a covenant to repair and to leave premises in the same state as at the beginning of the lease, if imported into the new tenancy, has reference to the state of the premises at the commencement of the new, not of the old, tenancy<sup>8</sup>. The presumption that the former terms are incorporated in the new tenancy does not apply where the new tenancy is under a different landlord, as, for example, where the lease is by a tenant for life and then after his death the reversioner receives rent, so as to bind the new landlord by a term which is unusual and which was in fact unknown to him<sup>9</sup>.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/A. NOTICE TO QUIT/213. How tenancy is determined.

(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year

A. NOTICE TO QUIT

213. How tenancy is determined.

A tenancy from year to year is determinable by notice to quit<sup>1</sup>, and the parties may enter into special stipulations both as to the length of the notice and the time when the tenancy may be determined under it<sup>2</sup>. In the absence of special stipulation or of special custom<sup>3</sup> or statute<sup>4</sup>, a yearly tenancy may be determined by a half-year's notice, expiring at the end of some year of the tenancy<sup>5</sup>. Where there is a term specifying the length of notice required, then, in the absence of any provision to the contrary, that notice must be given so as to expire at the end of some year of the tenancy<sup>6</sup>. A notice to quit must be given by an existing landlord to an existing tenant. It cannot, therefore, be given so as to determine a tenancy before that tenancy has commenced<sup>7</sup>.

The right to determine a yearly tenancy by service of notice to quit is an essential characteristic of such a tenancy. If a provision of the tenancy purports wholly to deprive one or other party of the right to end the tenancy by notice to quit, that provision is void for repugnancy<sup>8</sup>. Although the parties may agree that a notice to quit cannot be given before a specified time, an agreement fettering the right of one or both of the parties to serve notice to quit before the occurrence of an event, the time of which is uncertain, is repugnant to the notion of a periodic tenancy and the term granted is void for uncertainty<sup>9</sup>. Thus a provision fettering the landlord's right to serve a notice to quit until the premises were required for road-widening purposes was void<sup>10</sup>.

Where a tenancy is for a year or years certain and thereafter from year to year, notice to quit cannot, unless there is a stipulation to the contrary<sup>11</sup>, be given so as to determine the tenancy at the end of the fixed term<sup>12</sup>.

The effect of a term that the tenancy is to be terminable 'at any time' by notice of a certain length is that the notice may be given for any date, notwithstanding that the date is not an anniversary of the commencement of the tenancy or a quarter day<sup>13</sup>; but, if the tenancy is a yearly one, such a term does not justify the termination of the tenancy before the expiration of the first year<sup>14</sup>.

If, on the construction of the tenancy agreement, the tenancy is not a yearly tenancy<sup>15</sup>, the notice must be given so as to expire at the end of any complete period of the tenancy<sup>16</sup>, and, in the absence of any stipulation as to its length, must be equal to the length of the period<sup>17</sup>.

1 A subtenant is not entitled to leave without notice because he anticipates a distress by the superior landlord: Rickett v Tullick (1833) 6 C & P 66. A tenancy from year to year may also be terminated by surrender (see the cases cited in PARA 232 note 3 post) or other appropriate means.

The parties may, however, agree that on a specified event (Bethell v Blencowe (1841) 3 Man & G 119), or on a date following a specified event, such as the sale of a farm (Allison v Scargall [1920] 3 KB 443), the tenancy is to determine without notice, or that the tenant may quit without notice (Bethell v Blencowe supra), or that he may quit on payment of an agreed sum by way of rent in advance (Florence v Robinson (1871) 24 LT 705).

5 le at the end of the first or any subsequent year, unless the tenancy is for two years certain, when it may be given only for the end of the second or some subsequent year: see PARA 208 ante. In the absence of express stipulation, the notice must be a reasonable notice: Doe d Martin v Watts (1797) 7 Term Rep 83 at 85. In the case of a tenancy from year to year, half a year's notice is a reasonable notice: Right d Flower v Darby and Bristow (1786) 1 Term Rep 159 at 163; Birch v Wright (1786) 1 Term Rep 378 at 379; Doe d Shore v Porter (1789) 3 Term Rep 13 at 17. This does not depend on the rent being reserved half-yearly, and it is the same where the rent is payable quarterly: Shirley v Newman (1795) 1 Esp 266. The rule applies where a minor becomes entitled to the reversion (Maddon d Baker v White (1787) 2 Term Rep 159) and where the tenancy devolves upon an executor (Gulliver d Tasker v Burr (1766) 1 Wm Bl 596).

11 The actual words of the demise may show that the notice may be given for the end of the fixed term: Jones v Nixon (1862) 1 H & C 48 (demise for a term of three years and, unless terminated by a six months' previous notice to quit, to continue from year to year).

The decision in Thompson v Maberly (1811) 2 Camp 573 to the contrary effect would seem not now to be good law. Similarly, where a term of five years is determinable by notice after the expiration of three years, the term may not be determined except by a notice given after the expiration of the three years: Gardner v Ingram (1889) 61 LT 729; DC; Re Lancashire and Yorkshire Bank's Lease, W Davis & Son v Lancashire and Yorkshire Bank [1914] 1 Ch 522, CA; cf Associated London Properties Ltd v Sheridan [1946] 1 All ER 20 ('if on or after 24 June 1945 either party shall desire to determine this lease'; notice given expiring on 24 June 1945; notice invalid). In British Iron and Steel Corp Ltd v Malpern [1946] KB 171, [1946] 1 All ER 408, however, a tenancy for two years from 24 June 1943 'and then quarterly subject to three calendar months' notice ... expiring on any quarter day' was held to be validly terminated on 29 September 1945 by a notice served on 21 June 1945.

14 Mayo v Joyce [1920] 1 KB 824, DC. This case did not, however, lay down any general proposition of law: H and G Simonds Ltd v Heywood [1948] 1 All ER 260 at 263, 264.

15 Kemp v Derrett (1814) 3 Camp 510 (tenant 'always' to 'be subject to quit at three months' notice'); Doe d King v Grafton (1852) 18 QB 496, where, although there was a reservation of a yearly rent payable quarterly, the habendum was 'until one of the said parties shall give unto the other six calendar months' notice in writing to quit'. These words rebutted the presumption of a yearly tenancy arising on the reservation of rent. In the first case, the notice could be given for the end of any period of three months; in the second, for the end of any period of six months. In Lewis v Baker [1905] 2 KB 576; affd [1906] 2 KB 599, CA, however, where the habendum was 'until such tenancy shall be determined as hereinafter mentioned', and it was provided that either party might determine the tenancy by three calendar months' notice, it was held that the reference in the habendum to determination by notice did not cut down the prima facie yearly tenancy, and the notice could be given only for the end of the current year. DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/A. NOTICE TO QUIT/214. Effect of statute.

214. Effect of statute.

By statute and notwithstanding any agreement to the contrary, a notice to quit an agricultural holding to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies is invalid if it purports to terminate the tenancy before the expiration of 12 months from the end of the then current year of the tenancy<sup>1</sup>. A notice to quit a farm business tenancy which is a tenancy from year to year is invalid unless it is to take effect at the end of a year of the tenancy and is given at least 12 months before the date on which it is to take effect<sup>2</sup>. These restrictions apply to an allotment which is an agricultural holding<sup>3</sup>, and to a smallholding which is an agricultural holding<sup>4</sup>.

A notice to quit an allotment garden must be for at least 12 months expiring on or before 6 April or on or after 29 September<sup>5</sup>.

A notice to determine a business tenancy given under statute must be given not more than 12 nor less than six months before the date of termination specified in it<sup>6</sup>.

No notice:

- 370 (1) by a landlord or a tenant to quit any premises let<sup>7</sup> as a dwelling<sup>8</sup>; or
- 371 (2) by a licensor or a licensee to determine a periodic licence<sup>9</sup> to occupy premises as a dwelling<sup>10</sup>, is valid unless it is in writing and contains such information as may be prescribed<sup>11</sup> and it is given not less than four weeks before the date on which it is to take effect<sup>12</sup>. This provision does not apply:

- 372 (a) to premises let on an excluded tenancy<sup>13</sup> or occupied under an excluded licence<sup>14</sup>;
- 373 (b) to a tenancy at will<sup>15</sup> or a tenancy arising under an attornment clause in a mortgage<sup>16</sup>.

A statute may prescribe and validate a notice to be given before the statute itself comes into force<sup>17</sup>.

1 See the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 ss 25-33; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 373 et seq. 8 It has been held for the purposes of the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 2 (see PARA 653 post) that 'let as a dwelling' means 'let wholly or partly as a dwelling' and so applies to premises which are let for mixed residential and business purposes: see Pirabakaran v Patel [2006] EWCA Civ 685, [2006] 23 EG 165 (CS), [2006] All ER (D) 380 (May), distinguishing National Trust for Places of Historic Interest or Natural Beauty v Knipe [1997] 4 All ER 627, [1998] 1 WLR 230, CA.

10 Ie whether the licence was granted before or after 29 July 1977.

11 For the purposes, 'prescribed' means prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister by statutory instrument; and a statutory instrument made by the Secretary of State containing any such regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 5(2). Regulations so made may make different provision in relation to different descriptions of lettings and different circumstances: s 5(3). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante; and as to the transfer of functions under the 1977 Act, so far as exercisable in relation to Wales, see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

In exercise of the power so conferred, and prior to the transfer of functions in relation to Wales, the Secretary of State made the Notices to Quit (Prescribed Information) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/2201, which came into force on 15 January 1989: reg 1. The prescribed information is information (1) that if the tenant or licensee does not leave the dwelling, the landlord or licensor must get an order for possession from the court before the tenant or licensee can lawfully be evicted; the landlord or licensor cannot apply for such an order before the notice to quit or notice to determine has run out; and (2) that a tenant or licensee who does not know if he has any right to remain in possession after a notice to quit or a notice to determine runs out can obtain advice from a solicitor (which may be publicly funded) or information from a Citizens' Advice Bureau, a Housing Aid Centre or a rent officer: see reg 2, Schedule.

12 Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 5(1), (1A) (respectively amended and added by the Housing Act 1988 s 32(1), (2)). It is not necessary that there should be four clear weeks: Schnabel v Allard [1967] 1 QB 627, [1966] 3 All ER 816, CA.

13 Ie an excluded tenancy which is entered into on or after 15 January 1989 unless it is entered into pursuant to a contract made before that date.

14 Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 5(1B) (added by the Housing Act 1988 s 32(2)). For these purposes, 'excluded tenancy' and 'excluded licence' have the meanings assigned by the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3A (as added and amended) (see PARA 215 post): s 8(4) (added by the Housing Act 1988 s 33(3)).

As to the special provisions which apply in the case of agricultural employees see the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 4 (as amended); and PARAS 1194-1195 post.

Where premises are let on a joint tenancy, the protection of s 5(1) (as so amended) cannot be avoided by an agreement made by one of those tenants; one joint tenant is not entitled to deprive the other of that protection: Hounslow London Borough Council v Pilling [1994] 1 All ER 432, [1993] 1 WLR 1242, CA, distinguishing Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council v Monk [1992] 1 AC 478, [1992] 1 All ER 1, HL.

Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/A. NOTICE TO QUIT/215. Meaning of 'excluded tenancy' and 'excluded licence'.

215. Meaning of 'excluded tenancy' and 'excluded licence'.

Any reference<sup>1</sup> to an excluded tenancy or an excluded licence is a reference to a tenancy<sup>2</sup> or licence which is excluded by virtue of any of the following provisions<sup>3</sup>.

A tenancy or licence is excluded:

374 (1) if:

32. (a) under its terms the occupier<sup>4</sup> shares any accommodation<sup>5</sup> with the landlord or licensor; and

33. (b) immediately before the tenancy or licence was granted and also at the time it comes to an end, the landlord or licensor occupied as his only or principal home premises of which the whole or part of the shared accommodation formed part<sup>6</sup>;

375 (2) if:

34. (a) under its terms the occupier shares any accommodation with a member of the family<sup>7</sup> of the landlord or licensor;

35. (b) immediately before the tenancy or licence was granted and also at the time it comes to an end, the member of the family of the landlord or licensor occupied as his only or principal home premises of which the whole or part of the shared accommodation formed part; and

36. (c) immediately before the tenancy or licence was granted and also at the time it comes to an end, the landlord or licensor occupied as his only or principal home premises in the same building as the shared accommodation and that building is not a purpose-built block of flats<sup>8</sup>;

376 (3) if it was granted as a temporary expedient to a person who entered the premises in question or any other premises as a trespasser, whether or not, before the beginning of that tenancy or licence, another tenancy or licence to occupy the premises or any other premises had been granted to him<sup>9</sup>;

377 (4) if:

37. (a) it confers on the tenant or licensee the right to occupy the premises for a holiday only; or

38. (b) it is granted otherwise than for money or money's worth<sup>10</sup>;

378 (5) if it is granted in order to provide accommodation under specified provisions<sup>11</sup> of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999<sup>12</sup>;

379 (6) if it is granted in order to provide accommodation under the Displaced Persons (Temporary Protection) Regulations 2005<sup>13</sup>.

A licence is excluded if it confers rights of occupation in a hostel<sup>14</sup> which is provided by:

380 (i) the council of a county, county borough<sup>15</sup>, district<sup>16</sup> or London borough<sup>17</sup>, the Common Council of the City of London<sup>18</sup>, the Council of the Isles of Scilly<sup>19</sup>, the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority<sup>20</sup> or a joint authority<sup>21</sup>;

381 (ii) a development corporation<sup>22</sup>;

382 (iii) the Commission for the New Towns<sup>23</sup>;

- 383 (iv) an urban development corporation<sup>24</sup>;
- 384 (v) a housing action trust<sup>25</sup>;
- 385 (vi) the Housing Corporation<sup>26</sup>;
- 386 (vii) the relevant authority<sup>27</sup> under the specified provision of the Housing Associations Act 1985<sup>28</sup>;
- 387 (viii) a housing trust<sup>29</sup> which is a charity<sup>30</sup> or a registered social landlord<sup>31</sup>; or
- 388 (ix) any other person who is, or who belongs to a class of person which is, specified in an order<sup>32</sup> made by the Secretary of State<sup>33</sup> or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>34</sup>.

Any licence which a resident of an accommodation centre for asylum-seekers established under Part 2 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002<sup>35</sup> has to occupy premises in the centre is also to be an excluded licence for these purposes<sup>36</sup>.

2    For the purposes of ibid Pt I (ss 1-4) (as amended): see the text and notes 3-36 infra; and PARAS 653, 1194-1195 post), a person who, under the terms of his employment, had exclusive possession of any premises other than as a tenant is deemed to have been a tenant; and the expressions 'let' and 'tenancy' are to be construed accordingly: s 8(2).

3    Ibid s 3A(1) (s 3A added by the Housing Act 1988 s 31). If, on or after 15 January 1989, the terms of an excluded tenancy or excluded licence entered into before that date are varied, then (1) if the variation affects the amount of the rent which is payable under the tenancy or licence, the tenancy or licence is treated for the purposes of the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 3(2C) (as added) (see PARA 653 post) and s 5(1B) (as added) (see PARA 214 ante) as a new tenancy or licence entered into at the time of the variation; and (2) if the variation does not affect the amount of the rent which is so payable, nothing in the 1977 Act affects the determination of the question whether the variation is such as to give rise to a new tenancy or licence: s 8(5) (s 8(5), (6) added by the Housing Act 1988 s 33(3)). For these purposes, any reference to a variation affecting the amount of the rent which is payable under a tenancy or licence does not include a reference to (a) a reduction or increase effected under the Rent Act 1977 Pt III (ss 44-61) (as amended) (see PARA 891 et seq post) or Pt VI (ss 86-97) (as amended) (see PARA 905 et seq post), s 78 (as amended) (see PARA 991 post) or the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 ss 11-14 (as amended) (see PARA 1160 et seq post); or (b) a variation which is made by the parties and has the effect of making the rent expressed to be payable under the tenancy or licence the same as a rent for the dwelling which is entered in the register under the Rent Act 1977 Pt IV (ss 62-75) (as amended) (see PARA 909 et seq post) or s 79 (as amended) (see PARA 996 post): Protection from Eviction Act 1977 s 8(6) (as so added).

4    For the purposes, 'occupier' means, in relation to a tenancy, the tenant and, in relation to a licence, the licensee: ibid s 3A(5)(b) (as added: see note 3 supra).

5    For these purposes, 'accommodation' includes neither an area used for storage nor a staircase, passage, corridor or other means of access: ibid s 3A(5)(a) (as added: see note 3 supra). An occupier shares accommodation with another person if he has the use of it in common with that person, whether or not also in common with others, and any reference to shared accommodation is to be construed accordingly; and, if in relation to any tenancy or licence there is at any time more than one person who is the landlord or licensor, any reference to the landlord or licensor is to be construed as a reference to any one of those persons: s 3A(4) (as so added).

B. PERIOD OF NOTICE TO DETERMINE A TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR

216. Tenancy commencing on quarter day.

The reckoning of the period of half a year<sup>1</sup> varies according as to whether the tenancy commences on one of the usual quarter days, or on some intermediate day. Where the tenancy commences on a quarter day, the period of the notice is a customary half-year, that is to say, the interval between one quarter day and the next quarter day but one. Such a notice is sufficient even if in point of length it falls short of the actual period of half a year, namely 182 days<sup>2</sup>; and it is necessary even though it may exceed that period. Thus, notice may be given on 29 September to quit on 25 March, although the interval is only 177 days<sup>3</sup>; and notice to quit on 29 September must be given not later than 25 March, although the interval is 187 days<sup>4</sup>.

217. Tenancy commencing on intermediate day.

Where the tenancy commences on an intermediate day, the length of the notice must be 182 days at least, the days being reckoned by including the one extreme and excluding the other<sup>1</sup>. If, however, there is an express stipulation for determination on six months' notice, this will be construed literally whether the tenancy commences on a quarter day or between two quarter days; and, unless the context otherwise requires, a notice of six calendar months is sufficient<sup>2</sup>.

2 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 61(a) ('month', in all deeds, contracts, and other instruments made or coming into operation after 31 December 1925, unless the context otherwise requires, means a calendar month). Before that Act, if 'calendar month' was not used (Travers v Mason (1896) 45 WR 77; and see Quartermaine v Selby (1889) 5 TLR 223, CA), notice of six lunar months was sufficient: Rogers v Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co (1864) 12 WR 1101 (affd 13 WR 217); Johnstone v Hudlestone (1825) 4 B & C 922 at 932; Wilkins v M'Ginity [1907] 2 IR 660, Ir CA. DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/B. PERIOD OF NOTICE TO DETERMINE A TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/218. Date of expiration of notice.

218. Date of expiration of notice.

In the absence of any specific agreement to the contrary, the notice must be given so as to expire at the end of the year or other period of the tenancy<sup>1</sup>; and, if it expires at a later date, it is bad<sup>2</sup>. Strictly the notice should be given so as to expire on the last day of the current year or period, although, as the tenant has the whole of that day in which to leave, it must not be given for any particular hour of the day<sup>3</sup>. The exact ascertainment of the last day of the year depends upon whether the tenancy began 'on' or 'from' the day named for commencement; and to avoid the inconvenience arising from this distinction it has been settled that the notice may in all cases be given for the anniversary of the commencement of the tenancy without considering whether the word 'on' or 'from' or any similar expression was used<sup>4</sup>.

1 See PARAS 208, 213 ante. As to expressing the notice in an alternative form see PARA 221 post. Where an agreement not made by deed specifies Lady Day or Michaelmas as the commencement of the tenancy, evidence may be given that Old Lady Day and Old Michaelmas Day were intended (Doe d Hall v Benson (1821) 4 B & Ald 588; Den d Peters v Hopkinson (1823) 3 Dow & Ry KB 507; cf Hogg v Norris and Berrington (1860) 2 F & F 246; Rogers v Kingston-upon-Hull Dock Co (1864) 13 WR 217 at 218); but not where the agreement is by deed (Doe d Spicer v Lea (1809) 11 East 312; cf Smith v Walton (1832) 8 Bing 235). Where the commencement of the tenancy is on one of the feast-days, Old Style, a notice to quit at the corresponding feast-day will be construed to mean Old Style: Denn d Willan v Walker (1800) Peake Add Cas 194; Doe d Hinde v Vince (1809) 2 Camp 256; Doe d Willis v Perrin (1840) 9 C & P 467; and see Furley d Canterbury Corp'n v Wood (1794) 1 Esp 198.

According to strict reckoning the whole of the first day must be included in the tenancy (Clayton's Case (1585) 5 Co Rep 1a), so that in a tenancy commencing on 19 May, 18 May is the last day. If, however, the tenancy commences from 19 May, that day would be excluded, and 19 May would be the last day: see eg Savory v Bayley (1922) 38 TLR 619 per Bailhache J (where a tenancy from 8 March was held to commence on 9 March); Dempsey v Tracy [1924] 2 IR 171, CA (where a tenancy from 1 September was held to commence on 2 September, thereby making a notice to quit on a subsequent 1 September valid). In practice the notice is usually given for the anniversary of the day of commencement: see Roe d Durant v Doe (1830) 6 Bing 574; Doe d Cornwall v Matthews (1851) 11 CB 675; Papillon v Brunton (1860) 5 H & N 518; Herron v Martin (1911) 27 TLR 431. DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/B. PERIOD OF NOTICE TO DETERMINE A TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/219. Necessity for ascertaining date of commencement of tenancy.

219. Necessity for ascertaining date of commencement of tenancy.

In order to ascertain the effect of a notice to quit, it is necessary to know the day of the commencement of the tenancy. Where the agreement expressly specifies that day, the words of the agreement prevail over any contrary indication afforded by the dates for payment of rent<sup>1</sup>. Where no day is expressly specified, and the tenant enters as yearly tenant in the middle of a quarter, the commencement of the year depends on the manner in which rent is paid or agreed to be paid. If the tenant pays rent up to the next quarter day, and then pays quarterly<sup>2</sup>, or if the agreement specifies a quarter day as the day for first payment<sup>3</sup>, the broken part of the quarter is neglected, and the year is taken to begin from the first quarter day; but otherwise the year runs from the date of the agreement<sup>4</sup>. Where the tenant enters upon different parts of the premises at different times, it must be ascertained which is the principal part of the premises in value and importance, and which is accessory<sup>5</sup>; and it is sufficient if the notice is given with reference to the entry on the principal part<sup>6</sup>. The effect of giving and accepting a notice before a tenancy begins may be to create a new tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/B. PERIOD OF NOTICE TO DETERMINE A TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/220. Proof of date of commencement.

220. Proof of date of commencement.

If there is any doubt as to the day of the commencement of the tenancy, this is a matter of fact to be proved by evidence<sup>1</sup>. The mere specifying of a particular date for quitting in a notice given by the landlord is not evidence that such was the date of commencement, nor does it throw upon the tenant the onus of proving that the tenancy commenced on a different date<sup>2</sup>. If, however, the date is a day on which rent has been paid, and the contents of the notice are brought to the tenant's attention when he is served with it and he makes no objection to the date, this is prima facie evidence that the specified date is correct<sup>3</sup>, although the tenant is not precluded from afterwards disproving it<sup>4</sup>. If the tenant is asked as to the commencement of the tenancy and specifies a particular day, and notice to quit on that day is given accordingly, he may not afterwards allege that the tenancy began on a different day; and the result is the same whether he gave erroneous information by mistake or by design<sup>5</sup>. If, however, in giving notice to quit, a tenant gives it for a day previous to the end of the year, this does not bind him, notwithstanding that it is accepted by the landlord<sup>6</sup>.

Where a lease is for a certain number of years and a part of another year, and the tenant holds over and becomes a yearly tenant by payment of rent, notice must be given for the anniversary of the commencement of the yearly tenancy, that is to say, the date when the term certain expired<sup>7</sup>.

Where a tenant enters under a void lease, or under an agreement for lease, and becomes a yearly tenant, he holds on the terms of the lease as to quitting. His holding determines without notice to quit at the end of the specified term and, if there is any further provision as to the date of quitting, it applies to the yearly tenancy<sup>8</sup>; but, subject thereto, the current year dates from the time of entry and notice to determine it must be given accordingly<sup>9</sup>.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/C. FORM AND CONSTRUCTION OF NOTICE TO QUIT/221. Form of notice.

C. FORM AND CONSTRUCTION OF NOTICE TO QUIT

221. Form of notice.

Subject to any term of the tenancy, and to any statutory requirements<sup>1</sup>, a notice to quit need not be in any particular form<sup>2</sup>, nor need it be addressed to the tenant by name, provided it is properly served on him<sup>3</sup>. A notice to quit addressed to the directors of a company may be a good notice to the company<sup>4</sup>. If the tenancy was created orally, the notice may be given orally<sup>5</sup>. Errors in the description of the premises<sup>6</sup>, or as to the tenant's first name<sup>7</sup>, do not invalidate the notice if the tenant is not misled by them<sup>8</sup>. In the absence of an express or statutory<sup>9</sup> power to resume possession of part of the premises it must be a notice to quit the whole; and a notice to quit a part only is void<sup>10</sup>. The notice need not state to whom the premises are to be given up<sup>11</sup>, although, if this is stated, it should be stated with certainty<sup>12</sup>; but the notice must indicate when the premises are to be given up, and it must be expressed unequivocally<sup>13</sup>.

A notice to quit 'on or before' a fixed date<sup>14</sup> or even 'by' a fixed date<sup>15</sup> may be valid, as may a notice to quit 'within' a specified period<sup>16</sup>. Where the landlord gave 'three months' notice to terminate the lease' without specifying the date on which possession was to be given, the notice was valid and the period of three months ran from the date of receipt of the notice by the tenant<sup>17</sup>. If the lease and the notice to quit involve so many difficult questions of construction that there is a failure on the landlord's part to give a certain date or to supply the tenant with a formula from which certainty could be ascertained, the notice is bad; but the fact that the notice, instead of specifying a date of determination, identifies that date by reference to terms of the lease which are themselves ambiguous does not necessarily render the notice bad<sup>18</sup>. Each case depends upon its own facts and circumstances. Where a tenant under a tenancy beginning on 1 January was on 30 June 1939 given 'formal notice of determination at the end of the last quarter of this year', the notice was effective to determine the tenancy on 1 January 1940<sup>19</sup>.

The notice may state the exact day on which the premises are to be given up<sup>20</sup>; or it may be expressed generally by such words as 'at the expiration of the present year's tenancy'<sup>21</sup>. A notice in the latter form is not void, because it does not purport to be served half a year before the end of the current year; and the onus of proving that it was not in fact served in due time is on the party who disputes its sufficiency<sup>22</sup>. The appropriate general words are, however, 'at the end of the year of the tenancy which will expire next after the end of one half-year from the date of the service of this notice'<sup>23</sup>; and it is usual, after first mentioning the day which is believed to be the anniversary of the commencement of the tenancy, to add these general words in the alternative, so that an error as to the specific day may not invalidate the notice<sup>24</sup>.

8 The test to be applied is whether the notice is clear to the person reading it so that the recipient cannot be misled: Carradine Properties Ltd v Aslam [1976] 1 All ER 573, [1976] 1 WLR 442, approved and applied in Mannai Investment Co Ltd v Eagle Star Life Assurance Co Ltd [1997] AC 749, [1997] 3 All ER 352, HL, where it was said (at 370-371 and at 768 per Lord Steyn) that notices containing errors may be valid if they are sufficiently clear and unambiguous to leave the reasonable recipient in no reasonable doubt as to how and why they are intended to operate, and it was also made clear that this principle applies generally to unilateral notices served under contractual rights reserved in a lease, including notices to quit.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/C. FORM AND CONSTRUCTION OF NOTICE TO QUIT/222. Construction of incorrect notice.

222. Construction of incorrect notice.

If possible, a notice to quit will be construed so as to make it effectual, and inaccuracies obviously opposed to the intention of the party giving it will not invalidate it<sup>1</sup>. The test generally applicable is whether the notice is quite clear to a reasonable tenant reading it and whether it is plain that he cannot be misled by it<sup>2</sup>. The reasonable tenant reading the notice is to be taken to have the knowledge of the surrounding facts and circumstances which the actual landlord and tenant enjoyed<sup>3</sup>. Thus a notice to quit a 291 acre farm was valid notwithstanding that it purported to include a small strip of land which, to the knowledge of the tenant, the landlord no longer owned<sup>4</sup>.

A notice which is expressed to be for the end of the 'present' or 'current' year is effectual for the following year if this is clearly the intention<sup>5</sup>, as, for example, where the current year ends only two days after the service of the notice<sup>6</sup>. A notice which is not long enough to determine the tenancy at the end of the current year is not, however, merely on that ground treated as a notice for the end of the following year<sup>7</sup>. This will be done only if necessary to effectuate the obvious intention<sup>8</sup>. A notice to quit given after the determination of a term of years is not necessarily a recognition of an existing tenancy<sup>9</sup>.

See also Germax Securities Ltd v Spiegel (1978) 37 P & CR 204, CA (wrong date put on tenant's copy of notice to quit; notice sent with covering letter which referred to correct date; the correct test was held to be whether the notice would be clear to a reasonable tenant reading it; covering letter ensured that no reasonable tenant would be misled and, therefore, the notice was valid); applying Carradine Properties Ltd v Aslam [1976] 1 All ER 573, [1976] 1 WLR 442 (notice to operate a break clause in a lease dated 6 September 1974 referred to 27 September 1973 as the day on which the lease was to end, this being an obvious error for 27 September 1975; held to be valid notice). See also Doe d Duke of Bedford v Kightley (1796) 7 Term Rep 63 (notice given at Michaelmas 1795, to quit at Lady Day 1795, held good for Lady Day 1796). Where notice to quit was given for a specified day 'or at the expiration of the current period of your tenancy which shall expire next after the service upon you of this notice' and it was plain that the landlord regarded the 'current period' as weekly, however, the notice was ineffective to determine the tenancy which proved to be a yearly tenancy: Chez Auguste Ltd v Cottat [1951] 1 KB 292.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/C. FORM AND CONSTRUCTION OF NOTICE TO QUIT/223. Notice to quit on a contingency.

223. Notice to quit on a contingency.

A notice to quit must be clear and certain in its terms<sup>1</sup>. It is bad if it is expressed so as to take effect on a contingency, such as a notice to quit given by the landlord if a breach of covenant is committed<sup>2</sup>, or a notice by the tenant to take effect when he can get another situation<sup>3</sup>. If, however, a definite notice to quit is given, it is not invalidated by the addition of words requiring, in a notice by the landlord, an increase<sup>4</sup> or, in a notice by the tenant, a diminution, of rent, if the tenant stays on<sup>5</sup>. A notice so expressed operates as a notice to quit, with an offer to grant or to take a new tenancy as the case may be<sup>6</sup>. Similarly, a notice to quit containing a statement that the person giving it hopes that in certain circumstances the notice will be cancelled<sup>7</sup>, and a notice to quit accompanied by a letter stating that it is intended to terminate the tenancy unless the landlords see sufficient reason in the meantime to change their opinion<sup>8</sup>, have been held to be valid notices, because, by the addition of those statements, no rights are reserved to the persons giving them and they are not conditional.

3 Farrance v Elkington (1811) 2 Camp 591. Where the tenant gave notice that he would surrender his tenancy and not that he would quit, it was held that the notice was invalid as a notice to quit, as he could surrender only by agreement (Gardner v Ingram (1889) 61 LT 729), but it is doubtful whether this case would now be followed where it is obvious that the tenant intended to give notice to quit.

D. PERSONS TO GIVE AND RECEIVE NOTICE TO QUIT

224. Who may give or receive notice.

A notice to quit may be given by either the landlord or the tenant<sup>1</sup>. For these purposes, the landlord is the person in whom the legal reversion is vested, or the person whom the tenant is bound to recognise as his landlord by estoppel<sup>2</sup>. A valid notice to quit may not be given before the commencement of the tenancy as there is then no existing landlord and no existing tenant<sup>3</sup>. The notice, once given, enures for the benefit of the successors in title of the landlord or tenant giving it<sup>4</sup>. Similarly, the notice must be given to the tenant or the reversioner. Where the tenant has died intestate, or leaving a will which does not appoint executors, then, before letters of administration are taken out, notice to quit may be served on the Public Trustee<sup>5</sup>. A notice may not be given by a landlord to a subtenant of part of the premises so as to determine the subtenancy, even though the intermediate tenant has given up possession of the remainder of the premises<sup>6</sup>; but, where no subletting has taken place, a person who succeeds the tenant in the occupation of the premises is presumed to be his assign, and notice may be given to him<sup>7</sup>.

1 Any provision which purports wholly to deprive the landlord or the tenant of the right to serve a notice to quit is void: see PARA 213 ante.

2 Doe d Green v Baker (1818) 8 Taunt 241; and see Burton v Dickenson (1867) 17 LT 264; and PARA 4 ante. A beneficiary (Stait v Fenner [1912] 2 Ch 504) or a purchaser before completion (Thompson v McCullough [1947] KB 447, [1947] 1 All ER 265, CA; Graham v M'Ilwaine [1918] 2 IR 353) cannot, unless he is acting for the persons having the legal estate (Re Knight and Hubbard's Underlease, Hubbard v Highton [1923] 1 Ch 130), give a valid notice to quit. A purchaser may, however, after completion, be estopped by his conduct from alleging the invalidity of the notice: Farrow v Orttewell [1933] Ch 480, CA. When the landlord has granted a lease for a term by deed to a third person, he ceases to be entitled to the reversion on the yearly tenancy, and may not give a notice to quit to the yearly tenant: Wordsley Brewery Co v Halford (1903) 90 LT 89. Where the tenancy was in existence at the time of a mortgage, it was formerly necessary that the notice should be given by the mortgagee (see Miles v Murphy (1871) IR 5 CL 382) unless the mortgagor had been constituted his agent to give the notice (Stacpoole v Parkinson (1874) IR 8 CL 561); but the mortgagor, while in possession, may now perhaps give the notice by virtue of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 98. As to a mortgagor's rights while in possession see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 341-344.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/D. PERSONS TO GIVE AND RECEIVE NOTICE TO QUIT/225. Notice given by or to agent.

225. Notice given by or to agent.

A notice to quit may be given by the agent of either party, provided that he is duly authorised for that purpose at the time of giving it. If he is not so authorised, a subsequent ratification of the notice after the time for giving it has passed does not make it effectual<sup>1</sup>, as the notice must be one which is, in fact, binding on the landlord when it is served<sup>2</sup>. Moreover, the tenant must have reason to believe that it is so binding, so that he may safely act on it<sup>3</sup>. If it is given by an agent having only a special authority, the notice must be given in the principal's name or expressly on his behalf<sup>4</sup>; but this is not necessary if the agent has been held out as having a general authority<sup>5</sup>. Where a notice has to be given in the principal's name or expressly on the principal's behalf, it is sufficient if the agent identifies the principal in a manner which truly amounts to an identification even if the principal is not actually named<sup>6</sup>. An agent who is entrusted with the management of an estate, and who has authority to let and to receive rents, has a general authority in respect of the tenancies, and may give<sup>7</sup> or receive<sup>8</sup> notice to quit.

Notice may be validly given by being served on the tenant's agent<sup>9</sup> or on the landlord's agent<sup>10</sup>. Where both parties stand by and allow others to deal on their behalf with the tenancy, as, for example, by sending out demands for rent and accepting payment of rent, a general agency may be created in these other persons so as to give them authority to send and receive a notice determining the tenancy<sup>11</sup>.

In this case the trustees had given the beneficiary full authority to manage the property, and he was, therefore, entitled to give notice to quit as their agent. In Harmond Properties Ltd v Gajdzis [1968] 3 All ER 263, [1968] 1 WLR 1858, CA, it was held that a notice to quit in respect of a weekly tenancy signed by a director of the landlord company was a valid notice on the basis that the director was a general agent of the landlord company. A beneficiary who did not create the tenancy may not give notice unless he has been held out as the trustees' agent (Easton v Penny (1892) 67 LT 290) as, for example, where he has been permitted to have the management of the trust estate (Jones v Phipps (1868) LR 3 QB 567); and see PARA 224 notes 2, 4 ante. DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/D. PERSONS TO GIVE AND RECEIVE NOTICE TO QUIT/226. Notice given by one of several joint owners or joint tenants.

226. Notice given by one of several joint owners or joint tenants.

In the case of a periodic tenancy, such as a tenancy from year to year, a notice given by one of several joint owners is effective to determine the tenancy because the tenant enjoys the whole of the property only so long as he and all the landlords concur. Likewise a notice by one of several joint tenants will terminate a periodic tenancy<sup>1</sup>. Personal representatives are joint tenants, and one of several may give an effective notice<sup>2</sup>. Where, however, a lease is determinable under an express power contained in the lease for determination by 'the landlords', the lease may be determined by one of the landlords only if he has been authorised by all the landlords to exercise the power<sup>3</sup>. This rule must, however, give way to any contrary intention in the express terms of the lease<sup>4</sup>. Where the reversion to an agricultural holding has been severed without any legal apportionment of the rent, a notice to quit given by two reversioners is not invalidated by the fact that one of them enters into a contract subsequently to sell his part of the land<sup>5</sup>.

See also Fletcher v Brent London Borough Council [2006] EWCA Civ 960, [2006] All ER (D) 96 (Jul). Where, however, one of two joint periodic tenants purports to serve a notice to quit which is in fact a notice operating a break clause in the tenancy agreement, the notice is ineffective: see Hounslow London Borough Council v Pilling [1994] 1 All ER 432, [1993] 1 WLR 1242, CA, distinguishing Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council v Monk supra. Whether the phrase 'the tenant' in a statutory provision means 'the joint tenants or any one or more of them' is clearly a matter of statutory construction: see eg Featherstone v Staples [1986] 2 All ER 461, [1986] 1 WLR 861, CA (the expression 'the tenant' within the Agricultural Holdings (Notice to Quit) Act 1977 s 2(1) (repealed; see now the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 26(1)) meant all the tenants in the case of a joint tenancy and not any one or more of them). A joint tenant giving notice to quit is not acting as a trustee for the other joint tenant and service of the notice is not a function within the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996 s 11 (see TRUSTS (2007 Reissue) PARA 1036) requiring consultation with the other joint tenant: Notting Hill Housing Trust v Brackley [2001] EWCA Civ 601, [2001] 3 EGLR 11, [2002] HLR 212.

E. SERVICE OF NOTICE

227. Statutory provisions.

In the case of a lease executed or coming into operation after 31 December 1925, a notice to quit may be served in the manner provided by the Law of Property Act 1925<sup>1</sup>, unless a contrary intention appears<sup>2</sup>.

The provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 relating to the service of notices<sup>3</sup> apply for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954, including (inter alia) the service of notices terminating tenancies protected under that Act<sup>4</sup>.

Documents required or authorised by the Rent Act 1977 to be served by the tenant of a dwelling house on the landlord are deemed to be duly served if served on any agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or other similar document<sup>5</sup> or on the person who receives the rent of the dwelling house<sup>6</sup>.

Any notice, request, demand or other instrument under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 is duly given to or served on the person to or on whom it is to be given or served if it is delivered to him, or left at his proper address, or sent to him by post in a registered letter or by the recorded delivery service<sup>7</sup>. Any notice or other document required or authorised to be given under the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 may be given to a person by transmitting its text to him by facsimile or other electronic means, but only if this is a manner authorised by a written agreement made, at any time before the giving of the notice, between him and the person giving the notice; otherwise it must be delivered to him or left at his proper address<sup>8</sup>.

Normally, statutory provisions as to methods of service are permissive only in the sense that a notice which actually reaches the intended recipient is validly served even though none of the means of service stipulated by the statute has been used<sup>9</sup>.

1 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 196(2)-(4); the Recorded Delivery Service Act 1962 s 1(1); and PARA 621 post. Where a notice is sent by recorded delivery (or where a signature is required by way of acknowledgment of delivery) service is deemed to be effected on a presumed date (at the date when the letter would in the ordinary course of post be delivered: see the Law of Property Act 1925 s 196(4)) and not on the later date when the letter is handed over and signed for: WX Investments Ltd v Begg [2002] EWHC 925 (Ch), [2002] 1 WLR 2849, [2002] 3 EGLR 47 (service deemed on the first day that the postman attempted to deliver the letter).

2 Law of Property Act 1925 s 196(5).

3 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23: see PARA 703 post. In the case of notices given by virtue of s 23, the date of service is the date of entrusting the notice to the postal service since this provision does not provide for an attempted or actual delivery: CA Webber (Transport) Ltd v Railtrack plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1167, [2004] 3 All ER 202, [2004] 1 WLR 320, approving Beanby Estates v Egg Stores (Stamford Hill) [2003] EWHC 1252 (Ch), [2004] 3 All ER 184, [2003] All ER (D) 122 (May) and disapproving Lex Service plc v Johns (1989) 59 P & CR 427, [1990] 1 EGLR 92, CA.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/E. SERVICE OF NOTICE/228. Service on tenant.

228. Service on tenant.

A notice to quit need not be served personally upon the tenant<sup>1</sup>. It may be served upon his agent<sup>2</sup> and, when so served, it is unnecessary to prove that the notice actually came to his knowledge; it is sufficient if the fact of the agency is established. The spouse, or a member of the domestic staff, of the tenant at the tenant's dwelling house, whether this is on or off the demised premises, is an implied agent to receive a notice to quit, although the tenant may give evidence to rebut the implication<sup>3</sup>. Apart from any question of agency, the fact that the notice has been delivered to the tenant's spouse<sup>4</sup> or servant<sup>5</sup> raises a strong presumption that it has reached the tenant, especially if an explanation of the notice was given when it was delivered<sup>6</sup>. The presumption may be rebutted only by proof that the notice did not come to the tenant's knowledge at all<sup>7</sup>.

Even if the statutory provisions as to method of service<sup>8</sup> do not apply, a notice left at a tenant's house, but not served on anyone personally, is effectual if it can be proved that the notice actually came to his hands in time to give him notice of the proper length<sup>9</sup>.

It is not necessary that the notice should be directed to the tenant; it is sufficient if it can be proved, either by direct evidence or by his own admission<sup>10</sup>, that it was delivered to him in proper time<sup>11</sup>. If the tenant has disappeared, however, service becomes impossible unless the lease makes special provision for such a case, as, for example, by authorising service of the notice on the premises or at the tenant's last known address<sup>12</sup>, or unless the relevant statutory provisions<sup>13</sup> apply. Where the premises are held by two tenants jointly, the service of notice on one who lives on the premises is evidence that it reached the other who lives elsewhere<sup>14</sup>; and apparently, even without that evidence, it is effectual as to both<sup>15</sup>.

1 A memorandum of service should be indorsed on a duplicate of the notice at the time when the notice is served; the duplicate is then primary evidence: Doe d Patteshall v Turford (1832) 3 B & Ad 890; Doe d Fleming v Somerton (1845) 7 QB 58; Stapylton v Clough (1853) 2 E & B 933.

2 See Doe d Prior v Ongley (1850) 10 CB 25. In the case of a corporation service should be on an officer: Doe d Earl of Carlisle v Woodman (1807) 8 East 228.

Consequently it is immaterial that the notice came to the tenant's knowledge too late to allow for a proper length of service on him personally (Doe d Neville v Dunbar (1826) Mood & M 10); contra, if the notice was addressed to the wrong person (Doe d Exeter Corpn v Mitchell (1837) 1 Jur 795). ## 229. Service on landlord.

Apart from statute<sup>1</sup> a notice given by the tenant may be served on the landlord or his agent<sup>2</sup>. If sent by post, the notice is sufficient if it is delivered during the last day on which service may be made, even though after business hours<sup>3</sup>. If the posting is proved, the notice is presumed to have been delivered in due course of post<sup>4</sup>; and the time of delivery is the time of service<sup>5</sup>.

- 1 For special statutory provisions as to service of documents on the agent of landlords of dwelling houses under the Rent Act 1977 see s 151(1); and PARA 227 ante.

Where, however, a notice relating to a tenancy protected by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) is served by a primary method authorised by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 (see PARA 703 post), such as by recorded delivery post, it does not matter whether the notice is received and there is no scope for the application of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 7: CA Webber (Transport) Ltd v Railtrack plc [2003] EWCA Civ 1167, [2004] 3 All ER 202, [2004] 1 WLR 320, disapproving Lex Service plc v Johns (1989) 59 P & CR 427, [1990] 1 EGLR 92, CA. ## F. WAIVER OF, AND DISPENSING WITH, NOTICE TO QUIT

230. Withdrawal and waiver of notice.

Once a valid notice to quit has been served, it automatically brings the tenancy to an end on the expiration of the notice<sup>1</sup> and, strictly, may not be withdrawn or waived<sup>2</sup>. After a valid notice to quit has been served, the landlord and the tenant may, however, agree expressly or by implication for the grant of a new tenancy to take effect on the expiry of the notice. If such an agreement is effected during the currency of the notice to quit, the notice is, inaccurately, said to be 'withdrawn'<sup>3</sup>. If such an agreement is effected after the expiry of the notice to quit, the notice is, inaccurately, said to be 'waived'<sup>4</sup>. By reason of the fact that a new agreement is necessary, the person who gives the original notice to quit, whether landlord or tenant, may not 'withdraw' or 'waive' the notice without the consent of the person to whom the notice is given<sup>5</sup>.

While a person who serves a notice to quit may not unilaterally withdraw it, he may, even in the absence of an agreement for a new lease, so conduct himself as to be estopped from relying on the notice under the principles of equitable or promissory estoppel<sup>6</sup>.

DURATION OF TENANCY/(3) TENANCY FROM YEAR TO YEAR/(ii) Determination of Tenancy from Year to Year/F. WAIVER OF, AND DISPENSING WITH, NOTICE TO QUIT/231. Acts by which effect of a notice to quit may be lost.

231. Acts by which effect of a notice to quit may be lost.

Questions of so-called 'waiver' usually arise when some act is done by the landlord after the expiration of a notice to quit which either necessarily or prima facie imports the recognition of an existing tenancy. A distress levied for rent accrued due since the expiration of the notice, if acquiesced in by the tenant, necessarily operates as an acceptance by the landlord that he will not enforce the notice<sup>1</sup>. In other cases it may be possible to show that the landlord's act was done with some other intention; and, when that evidence is offered, it must be determined, as a question of fact, whether the act was intended to create a new tenancy<sup>2</sup>. A mere demand of rent accrued due after the expiration of the notice, not followed by a promise to pay by the tenant, cannot operate to create a new tenancy, for want of the tenant's consent<sup>3</sup>. Payment and acceptance of rent so accrued due<sup>4</sup> implies, however, the concurrence of both parties and may operate to create a new tenancy<sup>5</sup>. The crucial question is always with what intent the rent was paid and accepted, that is to say, whether it was with the mutual intention of creating a new tenancy<sup>6</sup>. Where one tenant is entitled to remain in possession by statute notwithstanding the determination of his tenancy, for example as a statutory tenant under the Rent Act 1977<sup>7</sup>, the continued payment and acceptance of rent after the expiration of the notice to quit does not normally amount to the 'waiver' of the notice by the creation of a new contractual tenancy as the landlord is entitled to be paid under the statutory tenancy or statutory continuation of the contractual tenancy<sup>8</sup>. Other instances of the acceptance of rent not operating as a 'waiver' of the notice to quit are where it is accepted because of an error in programming a computer<sup>9</sup>, or where it is accepted in lieu of double rent or double value<sup>10</sup>, or where it is accepted pending the hearing of a claim for possession<sup>11</sup>. It is common practice for landlords to accept monetary payments after the expiration of a notice to quit as mesne profits in order to prevent the possibility of waiver<sup>12</sup>.

Where a notice to quit is given and subsequently a second notice is given and the second notice is effective to determine the tenancy before the expiration of the first notice, the second notice is effective and determines the tenancy at the expiration of it<sup>13</sup>. Where a notice to quit is given, a second notice expiring after the currency of the first notice does not 'waive' or revoke the first notice, unless the second notice with other circumstances suffices to show that the parties intended to create a new tenancy to take effect after the expiration of the first notice<sup>14</sup>. It is plain that no new tenancy is contemplated where the second notice is given as a preliminary to recovering double value<sup>15</sup> or where the landlord is at the same time proceeding for recovery of possession<sup>16</sup>. Where there is some doubt as to the validity of the first notice, the landlord may give a second notice without thereby accepting the invalidity of the earlier notice; and the second notice operates without prejudice to the earlier notice even without its being marked as such<sup>17</sup>, although it is frequent and good practice to mark the second notice 'without prejudice'.

A mere holding over by the tenant after the expiration of the notice does not by itself operate as a waiver of the notice, whether the notice was given by himself<sup>18</sup> or by the landlord<sup>19</sup>. It is a question of fact whether the tenant intended to avail himself of the notice to quit, or whether the circumstances of the holding over amounted to a waiver of the notice<sup>20</sup>. An agreement by the landlord to suspend the exercise of his rights under a notice to quit, as, for example, where he promises that the tenant is not to be turned out until the premises are sold, is not a waiver of the notice, and the landlord retains all his rights under it, subject only to the agreement<sup>21</sup>. A statement by the landlord that he will not enforce his right to possession upon the expiration of the notice to quit may bind the landlord under the principles of promissory estoppel<sup>22</sup>.

232. Dispensing with notice.

Failure for a long time to pay rent accruing under a yearly tenancy raises a presumption that the tenancy has been determined<sup>1</sup>. If at the end of a year the landlord accepts a new tenant, he dispenses with notice to quit by the old tenant<sup>2</sup> and may not sue the old tenant for rent; but this is because there is a surrender by operation of law, and the immediate change of possession is an essential element<sup>3</sup>. There probably cannot be a surrender to operate in the future; and, therefore, the landlord's mere acquiescence in a short notice, whether that notice is oral or in writing, does not make the notice binding<sup>4</sup>. If, however, the tenant quits in accordance with the notice after that acquiescence, he is not liable for subsequent rent<sup>5</sup>.

1 Stagg v Wyatt (1838) 2 Jur 892.

2 Sparrow v Hawkes (1796) 2 Esp 504. The landlord may not dispense with notice so as to put an end to the tenancy unless the circumstances are such as to show that the tenant is offering to surrender the term. Dispensing with notice to quit is, therefore, relevant more often as a defence to a claim by a landlord for rent than in any other context.

(4) WEEKLY, MONTHLY OR OTHER PERIODIC TENANCIES

233. Nature of tenancy.

A weekly or other periodic tenancy is a tenancy by the week or the period<sup>1</sup> and does not expire without notice at the end of the first week or period or at the end of each succeeding week or period<sup>2</sup>, there being not a reletting at the beginning of every week or period but a springing interest which arises and which is determined only by a proper notice to quit<sup>3</sup>. A weekly or other periodic tenancy arises either by express agreement or presumption of law<sup>4</sup>. A holding over with the landlord's consent, which prima facie gives rise to a tenancy at will, may be converted by the parties by their acts or by agreement into a weekly or other periodic tenancy<sup>5</sup>.

234. Determination of tenancy.

A weekly or other periodic tenancy is determinable by notice to quit<sup>1</sup>, which, in the absence of special stipulations<sup>2</sup>, should be given so as to expire at the end of any complete period of the tenancy<sup>3</sup>, and should, subject to the statutory minimum in the case of dwellings<sup>4</sup>, be equal to the length of the period, that is to say, in a weekly tenancy a week's notice<sup>5</sup>, in a monthly tenancy a month's notice<sup>6</sup>, and in a quarterly tenancy a quarter's notice<sup>7</sup>.

A weekly tenancy which begins, for example, on a Saturday and, therefore, expires at midnight on Friday may be determined by notice to quit on a Friday or Saturday<sup>8</sup>. Any question as to the validity of the notice may be avoided by giving it in a general form, that is to say, to quit at the end of the next complete week or four weeks<sup>9</sup>, as the case may be, of the tenancy after the date of the notice<sup>10</sup>. The onus of proving that a notice expires on the correct date lies on the person who gives the notice specifying the date<sup>11</sup>. Parties to a periodic tenancy may, however, agree between themselves as to the terms of the notice to quit<sup>12</sup>. A covenant by the landlord in a quarterly tenancy not to determine the tenancy for a number of years except in certain circumstances may bind the landlord's assigns and is not repugnant to the grant of a quarterly tenancy<sup>13</sup>.

In the case of any premises let as a dwelling<sup>14</sup>, no notice to quit given by a landlord or tenant is valid unless given not less than four weeks before the date on which it is to take effect<sup>15</sup>. A notice to quit in respect of certain dwellings may be suspended as to its date of operation<sup>16</sup>.

1 See PARA 233 ante. Thus, upon the tenant's death, the tenancy passes under his will or on his intestacy and continues until determined by notice to quit: Youngmin v Heath [1974] 1 All ER 461, [1974] 1 WLR 135, CA. As to the form and construction of notices, the persons who may give and receive notices, the service of notices and waiver and dispensing with notices see PARA 221 et seq ante. ## (5) TERM OF YEARS

235. Tenancy for years.

A tenancy for a term of years arises by express contract or by statute<sup>1</sup>; and it is essential to the contract that the commencement and duration of the term should be so defined as either to be certain in the first instance<sup>2</sup>, or to be capable of being afterwards ascertained with certainty<sup>3</sup>. A term of years need not be for a continuous period<sup>4</sup>.

The term may commence either immediately or from a past or future date<sup>5</sup>. Where it is expressed to commence from a past day, the tenant's actual interest commences only on the execution of the deed<sup>6</sup>, and his liability is limited accordingly. Thus the tenant is not liable, for example, for matters arising before the date of execution under the covenant to repair<sup>7</sup>, or under a covenant not to erect buildings of less than a specified value<sup>8</sup>, unless the lease itself imposes such obligations in respect of the period prior to its execution<sup>9</sup>. Where in a provision of the lease there is a reference to a particular year of it, it is a question of construction whether time is to be measured from the execution of the lease or from the date by reference to which the term is measured. For example, in a lease granted to run for a term of years measured from a past date, a break clause to operate at the end of the seventh year was held to mean at the end of the seventh year reckoned from that past date<sup>10</sup>. Where the term is to commence from a future date, the tenant's interest in the land subsists as from the date of the lease<sup>11</sup> but his right to possession will arise only at the future date specified for the commencement of the term.

1 Eg leases for lives are converted by statute into terms of years: see PARAS 240-241 post. As to leases 'for the duration of the war' see PARA 238 note 1 post. At common law a lease for a term of years, without more, is a term for two years certain: Land Settlement Association Ltd v Carr [1944] KB 657, [1944] 2 All ER 126, CA, citing Bishop of Bath's Case (1606) 6 Co Rep 34b (where, however, it would appear the words commonly relied upon to support the proposition were not only obiter but unconnected with the subject matter of the decision: see EWP Ltd v Moore [1992] QB 460 at 472, [1992] 1 All ER 880 at 889, CA, per Nolan LJ). ### 236. Effect of the instrument.

The purpose of the habendum in a deed is to limit the estate granted; and, therefore, in a lease by deed the habendum should state specifically both the commencement and duration of the term<sup>1</sup>. In the case of a prescribed clauses lease<sup>2</sup>, the wording with which it begins must include a statement of the term for which the property is leased, using one only of the three prescribed forms of wording, duly completed<sup>3</sup>; and that information will be used as part of the particulars to identify the lease in the property register<sup>4</sup>.

Where the term is expressed to commence 'from' a specified day, that day is in strictness not included in the term, and the term, therefore, lasts during the whole anniversary of the day from which it begins<sup>5</sup>. There may, however, be circumstances which lead to the conclusion that the parties wished the day specified to be included in the term, as, for example, the fact that the first payment of rent was to be made on that day<sup>6</sup>. If the term commences 'on' a specified day, that day is included<sup>7</sup>. A deed must be interpreted, however, so as to give effect to the parties' substantial rights and for practical purposes this distinction is often of no significance<sup>8</sup>; but it may be of significance when a notice is given determining the tenancy on a certain date in accordance with a break clause in the lease or in accordance with statute<sup>9</sup>. Where the term is expressed to be from a specified date until another specified date, the term commences on the specified date and not on the following day<sup>10</sup>.

If in a lease by deed the term is expressed to commence 'from henceforth' or 'from the making hereof'<sup>11</sup>, or if no date is specified<sup>12</sup>, the term commences from the time when the deed takes effect, that is to say from delivery<sup>13</sup>. If the lease is expressed to commence from the date of the deed, that date is by reference inserted in the habendum and the term commences on the following day<sup>14</sup>; but, if in such a case the deed is not dated, or if it bears an impossible date, the term commences from delivery<sup>15</sup>. Where the tenant enters under an agreement not by deed which does not specify the commencement of the term, it usually commences from entry<sup>16</sup>; but oral evidence is admissible to show when the instrument was intended to take effect<sup>17</sup>.

237. Commencement.

It is sufficient if the commencement of the term is ascertained with certainty at the time when the lease is to take effect in possession<sup>1</sup>. Hence the term may be made to commence after the failure of specified lives<sup>2</sup>, or upon the occurrence of a future contingent event<sup>3</sup>. Where it is to take effect after the expiration of a previous term, and the previous term is surrendered or forfeited, the lease takes effect on the surrender or forfeiture<sup>4</sup>; and, if the previous lease has already determined, or if it is void or non-existent, the new lease takes effect at once<sup>5</sup>.

A term at a rent or granted in consideration of a fine, limited on or after 1 January 1926 to take effect more than 21 years from the date of the instrument purporting to create it, is void; and any contract made on or after that date to create such a term is likewise void<sup>6</sup>. What is restricted is the period which may elapse between the date of the lease and the later date on which the term is to commence. There is no similar restriction on the period which may elapse between an agreement to grant a lease and the date stipulated in the agreement as the date on which the lease is to be granted, provided that the lease, when granted, is to be for a term which will commence within 21 years of the grant<sup>7</sup>.

238. Duration of term.

The duration of the term must be fixed either by specifying the number of years in the first instance or by referring to some collateral matter in itself certain or capable before the lease takes effect of being rendered certain<sup>1</sup>. A lease granted with a provision that the tenant is to give up possession by a certain date is valid, as it will be construed as a term certain to that date with an option to the tenant to determine the lease at an earlier date<sup>2</sup>. If to a certain term the lease purports to add a term which is uncertain, it is valid only as to the certain term<sup>3</sup>. The term may be for any length of time, however great, and in building leases terms of 99 years or 999 years are often granted; but there must be a definite limit. There cannot be a lease in perpetuity<sup>4</sup>, except by virtue of statute<sup>5</sup>. An instrument purporting to create a perpetual lease at a rent would operate, if at all, as a conveyance in fee simple subject to a perpetual rentcharge, or as an agreement to convey such an estate<sup>6</sup>.

If the maximum duration of the term is fixed, the lease may be subject to determination within the period; and this may be provided either by a provision that the lease may be determined by notice on a given event<sup>7</sup>, for example, upon the termination of a war<sup>8</sup>, or by a provision that the lease is to endure only during the continuation of a specified state of affairs<sup>9</sup>, as, for example, while the tenant remains in the landlord's employment<sup>10</sup>, or continues to occupy the premises<sup>11</sup>, so that, upon that state of affairs ceasing, the lease automatically determines. The duration of a term, once fixed, may be altered with retrospective effect<sup>12</sup>. A subtenancy at a weekly rent, with a provision that the rent is not to be raised during the head term, gives the subtenant a right to hold until the end of that term<sup>13</sup>.

Certain long residential tenancies at low rents<sup>14</sup> and business tenancies<sup>15</sup> have been afforded a measure of security of tenure by the statutory continuation of those tenancies after the end of the contractual term.

1 Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body [1992] 2 AC 386, [1992] 3 All ER 504, HL (tenancy to continue until landlord required land for road widening purposes held void for uncertainty); Lace v Chantler [1944] KB 368, sub nom Lace v Chandler [1994] 1 All ER 305, CA (lease 'for the duration of the war' invalid); cf Eker v Becker [1946] 1 All ER 721. Leases 'for the duration of the war' were converted into terms of ten years determinable by notice at the end of the war by the Validation of War-time Leases Act 1944 s 1 (repealed). See also Birrell v Carey (1989) 58 P & CR 184, CA (lease for so long as company is trading invalid). A lease void for uncertainty is void even though the uncertainty may be made certain by either party eg by service of a notice: Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body supra, overruling on this point Ashburn Anstalt v Arnold [1989] Ch 1, [1988] 2 All ER 147, CA (as explained in Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v London Residuary Body (1992) 63 P & CR 386, [1992] 1 EGLR 47, CA). A lease for a term from a fixed date for so many years as A shall name is, however, valid if A specifies the length of the term before the death of the landlord or the tenant: Bishop of Bath's Case (1605) 6 Co Rep 34b at 35a, 35b; Co Litt 45b; Shep Touch (8th Edn) 274.

6 It would, perhaps, operate as a conveyance subject to a rentcharge if made by deed in favour of the tenant and his heirs (Doe d Robertson v Gardiner (1852) 12 CB 319); otherwise it might operate as an agreement for a conveyance, or, if not, a tenancy from year to year would arise on payment of rent (Doe d Robertson v Gardiner supra; cf Re Coleman's Estate [1907] 1 IR 488).

12 In Baker v Merckel (Anson, third party) [1960] 1 QB 657, [1960] 1 All ER 668, CA, a lease was granted for a period of seven years with a provision that the tenant might during the term give notice that the lease was to have effect as if granted for 11 years, and it was held that the retrospective enlargement of the term was valid.

239. Time of quitting.

A lease for a term generally<sup>1</sup> requires no notice to quit at the end of the term, whether the term expires by effluxion of time<sup>2</sup>, or on the happening of an event on which it is expressed to determine<sup>3</sup>. The tenant is not bound to quit until midnight on the last day of the term<sup>4</sup>.

A tenant is not justified in quitting before the end of the term because the landlord has failed in the performance of a stipulation on his part, such as a covenant to repair<sup>5</sup>. In such a case the tenant remains liable for the rent, although he may be entitled to recover from the landlord damages for breach of the covenant; and those damages may include the cost of substituted lodgings until the premises are repaired<sup>6</sup>. The tenant may be entitled to set off his claim for damages against any rent due from him<sup>7</sup>.

The lease may provide for different parts of the premises to be delivered up at different times<sup>8</sup>; or it may enable the landlord to resume possession of the premises, or part of them, for building or other purposes, on a specified notice<sup>9</sup>. It may also contain a break clause enabling the tenant to give notice to quit on a specified date before the end of the term<sup>10</sup>.

(6) LEASE FOR A TERM DETERMINABLE ON NOTICE AFTER DEATH, MARRIAGE ETC

240. Nature of interest.

A lease or underlease, at a rent or in consideration of a fine, for life or lives, or for any term of years determinable with life or lives, or on the marriage of the lessee, or on the formation of a civil partnership between the lessee and another person, or any contract therefor, made before, on or after 1 January 1926, takes effect<sup>1</sup> as a lease, underlease, or contract therefor, for a term of 90 years determinable after, as the case may be, the death or marriage of, or the formation of a civil partnership by, the original lessee or the survivor of the original lessees, by notice in writing<sup>2</sup>. If the lease, underlease or contract therefor is made determinable on the dropping of the lives of persons other than or besides the lessees, the notice is capable of being given after the death of any person or of the survivor of any persons, whether or not including the lessees, on the cesser of whose life or lives the lease, underlease or contract is made determinable, instead of after the death of the original lessee or of the survivor of the original lessees<sup>3</sup>. The notice must be in writing, and be at least one month's notice to determine the tenancy on one of the quarter days applicable to the tenancy<sup>4</sup>, or, if no quarter days are specially applicable to the tenancy, on one of the usual quarter days<sup>5</sup>. The notice may be given either by the lessor<sup>6</sup> or the persons deriving title under him, to the person entitled to the leasehold interest, or, if no such person is in existence, by affixing it to the premises; or the notice may be given by the lessee or other persons in whom the leasehold interest is vested to the lessor or the persons deriving title under him<sup>7</sup>. These provisions do not, however, have effect where a person is given the right to occupy premises rent-free for life as there is no rent or premium<sup>8</sup>.

Where a lease, underlease or contract:

389 (1) relates to commonhold land<sup>9</sup>; and

the lease, underlease or contract is to be treated as if it purported to be a lease, underlease or contract of the kind referred to in head (2) above<sup>11</sup> so that the limitations on leasing commonhold units<sup>12</sup> apply to those purported leases, underleases or contracts<sup>13</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Before 1 January 1926, a lease for the tenant's life or the life or lives of any other person or persons created a freehold estate, in the latter case an estate pur autre vie: Co Litt 41b. The lease could also be for the lives of the tenant and some other person or persons: Co Litt 41b; Wright d Plowden v Cartwright (1757) 1 Burr 282. A tenant who entered into a written agreement to rent a house, the landlord agreeing not to raise the rent or to give notice to quit so long as the tenant paid it regularly, was entitled to obtain the grant of a lease for his life: Zimble v Abrahams [1903] 1 KB 577, CA; Re Coleman's Estate [1907] 1 IR 488; cf Austin v Newham [1906] 2 KB 167, DC. This was so even though prima facie the tenancy was a weekly one: Adams v Cairns (1901) 85 LT 10, CA. Alternatively, if the landlord had only a leasehold interest then the tenant was entitled to obtain the grant of a lease for the residue of the landlord's term if the tenant lived so long: Kusel v Watson (1879) 11 ChD 129, CA; Re King's Leasehold Estates, ex p East of London Rly Co (1873) LR 16 Eq 521; and see Siew Soon Wah alias Siew Pooi Yong v Yong Tong Hong (sued as a firm) [1973] AC 836, [1973] 2 WLR 713, PC. The agreement could, however, be so worded as to create merely a personal obligation not binding on subsequent purchasers of the reversion even if they had notice of the agreement: Roberts v Tregaskis (1878) 38 LT 176. If the duration of the lease was made dependent on the landlord's power of leasing, the lease was void for uncertainty: Wood v Beard (1876) 2 Ex D 30.

2 Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(6) (amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 81, Sch 8 para 1(1)-(3)). The Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(6) (as so amended) applies only where the tenancy is automatically determinable with life; and it does not apply to a tenancy determinable by notice in the event of the tenant's death: Bass Holdings Ltd v Lewis [1986] 2 EGLR 40, CA. Nor does the Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(6) (as amended) apply to a term taking effect in equity under a settlement, or created out of an equitable interest under a settlement for mortgage, indemnity, or other like purposes: Law of Property Act 1925 s 149(6) proviso (a). Formerly, where no reference to survivors was made in a lease, then, if the lease was to A during the lives of B and C, A continued to hold during the survivor's life; but it was otherwise where the lease was for 100 years if B and C should so long live: Brudnell's Case (1592) 5 Co Rep 9a; Hughes and Crowther's Case (1610) 13 Co Rep 66. DURATION OF TENANCY/(6) LEASE FOR A TERM DETERMINABLE ON NOTICE AFTER DEATH, MARRIAGE ETC/241. Lives should be specified.

241. Lives should be specified.

A lease for life without mentioning the life which was to define its duration was formerly deemed to be for the tenant's life<sup>1</sup>, unless the landlord might lawfully grant a lease for his own life but not for the tenant's life in which case the lease was taken to be for the landlord's life<sup>2</sup>. Similar principles would, it seems, apply in deciding upon the cesser of whose life the term for 90 years, into which leases for lives are now converted<sup>3</sup>, would become determinable by notice. It is always desirable that the life should be clearly specified in the habendum of the lease; and, where the lease is determinable upon the cesser of lives other than that of the lessee, the lives must be so specified. On an assignment of the lease with a covenant that the lease is a valid and subsisting lease determinable upon notice after the dropping of the lives mentioned in it, there is no implied covenant that all the original lives are still in existence<sup>4</sup>.

1 An estate for a person's own life is deemed to be greater than an estate for the life of another; and, as a lease is to be construed most strongly against the grantor, it was the tenant's life which set the measure of the term: Co Litt 41b, 42a; Re Coleman's Estate [1907] 1 IR 488. In a demise by A to B for the term of 'his' life, the word 'his' usually referred to B; but it referred to A if it appeared upon the whole instrument that such was the intention: Doe d Pritchard v Dodd (1833) 5 B & Ad 689 at 693.

2 Co Litt 42a. In Doe d Bromfield v Smith (1805) 6 East 530 such a lease was held to be for the joint lives of the landlord and the tenant.

6. PAYMENT OF RENT

(1) NATURE AND RESERVATION OF RENT

242. Nature of rent.

Rent is the recompense paid by the tenant to the landlord for the exclusive possession of corporeal hereditaments<sup>1</sup>. It need not consist of the payment of money. It may consist in the render of chattels<sup>2</sup>, or the performance of services<sup>3</sup>, but rent of this nature constitutes rent within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977<sup>4</sup> only if the parties to a tenancy otherwise subject to that Act have quantified its value in terms of money<sup>5</sup>. The possibility of distraining is the mark of rent, and so it may not be reserved out of incorporeal hereditaments, since the landlord may not distrain thereon<sup>6</sup>; but it may be reserved out of a remainder or reversion, since the landlord may distrain when the property falls into possession<sup>7</sup>.

The modern conception of rent is a payment which a tenant is bound by contract to make to his landlord for the use of the property let<sup>8</sup>. Rent does not necessarily represent the annual produce of the land; a royalty, notwithstanding that it is reserved in respect of substances which are taken from the land so as to cause its permanent diminution, is a true rent<sup>9</sup>. An annual payment which is described as a premium but is payable substantially throughout the whole of the period of the lease may be rent<sup>10</sup>. A single rent reserved in respect of the whole of the demised land issues or becomes due out of every part of the land, and, therefore, the landlord may distrain for it on any part<sup>11</sup>; but in a single lease separate rents may be reserved in respect of different parts of the demised premises<sup>12</sup> and may be made payable at different times<sup>13</sup>.

The reservation of rent is not necessary for the creation of a tenancy<sup>14</sup>. The court will normally accept that a payment which the parties have described as rent is rent but will not infer that a payment is rent if there is a more likely explanation such as that it is for household expenses<sup>15</sup>.

1 Rent, ie rent service, must be distinguished from a rentcharge, ie an annual sum issuing out of land but not as an incident of tenure: see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 905; REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 83; and RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 753 et seq. Special kinds of rent are sometimes referred to; these include ground rent, which is the sum paid by the owner or builder of houses for the use of the land to build on, and rack rent, which is generally a rent representing the gross annual value of the holding (see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 85; cf the definition in the Highways Act 1980 s 329(1) (as amended) (see PARA 268 note 6 post), and in the Public Health Act 1936 s 343(1) (as amended) (see ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA 116)). The former rent seck was a bare rent for which no distress could be made: see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 905. As to service charges see PARA 319 et seq post.

2 Eg at one time, hens, spurs, horses or wheat: Co Litt 142a; Pitcher v Tovey (1692) 4 Mod Rep 71. In Lanyon v Carne (1669) 2 Saund 161 a reservation in a lease for lives of a heriot payable on each tenant's death was treated as a rent, and the heriots were not payable after the determination of the term in the tenants' lives.

3 See eg Co Litt 96a (sheep shearing); Doe d Tucker v Morse (1830) 1 B & Ad 365 (carrying coals); Doe d Edney v Benham (1845) 7 QB 976 (cleaning a church); Duke of Marlborough v Osborn (1864) 5 B & S 67 (work with horses and cart); Montague v Browning [1954] 2 All ER 601, [1954] 1 WLR 1039, CA (cleaning a synagogue). The landlord may not, however, reserve as rent a right involving the actual use by him of the land, as the vesture or herbage: see Co Litt 142a (where such a right is called 'parcel of the annual profits'). This phrase is, however, misleading, for the landlord may reserve part of the produce if it is delivered by the tenant, as in corn rents: see Master and Brehren of the House of St Cross Hospital v Lord Howard de Walden (1795) 6 Term Rep 338 at 343. Reservation of the actual use of the land is, however, repugnant to the grant: Co Litt 142a.

Cf the Housing Act 1988 s 1(2), Sch 1 para 2(2) (as substituted and amended); and PARA 1026 note 4 post; s 14(4) (as amended); and PARA 1092 note 5 post.

Apparently the Crown may reserve rent out of incorporeal hereditaments, as it may distrain on any tenant's land: Co Litt 47a note 284.

243. Payments which are not rent.

As a rent may be reserved only on a demise<sup>1</sup> of corporeal hereditaments, the following payments, even though recoverable by virtue of the contract, are not rent:

- 391 (1) payments reserved on the grant of a licence for the use of premises<sup>2</sup>;
- 392 (2) payments reserved on a lease of an incorporeal hereditament<sup>3</sup>;
- 393 (3) payments reserved on a lease of chattels<sup>4</sup>;
- 394 (4) payments, not included in the reservation, which are agreed to be made in addition to the rent<sup>5</sup>, such as the payment of a premium by instalments for the granting of a lease<sup>6</sup>;
- 395 (5) payments made under a covenant of guarantee contained in a licence to assign<sup>7</sup>;
- 396 (6) payments on account of a service charge which is not reserved as a rent<sup>8</sup>;
- 397 (7) if the demise was by lease by deed, payments by way of increased rent which the tenant agrees, otherwise than by deed, to make subsequently to the demise<sup>9</sup>; and
- 398 (8) payments for dilapidations<sup>10</sup>.

In contrast, where a rent reserved by a lease by deed is subject to revision, whether by virtue of a rent review clause contained in the lease or by reason of statute<sup>11</sup>, the amount of the revised rent will be true rent and the revision will not create a new demise<sup>12</sup>. Where the tenancy is one which does not require to be by deed, so that it may be varied orally, or where the variation is itself effected by deed, it is in any case possible to reserve an additional rent in the strict technical sense without a surrender of the old tenancy explicitly or by operation of law<sup>13</sup>.

1 Formerly sums reserved as rent on a mere agreement for a lease under which the intending tenant had entered could not be distrained for (Hegan v Johnson (1809) 2 Taunt 148; Dunk v Hunter (1822) 5 B & Ald 322; Regnart v Porter (1831) 7 Bing 451) until a yearly tenancy had arisen by payment of one of those sums; but now such an agreement can usually be specifically enforced, and, if so, it is equivalent to a lease, and the landlord has the remedy of distress (Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 ChD 9, CA: see PARA 76 ante). As to reservation of rent see also Earl Inchiquin v Burnell (1795) 3 Ridg Parl Rep 376 at 418.

See also Errington v Errington and Woods [1952] 1 KB 290, [1952] 1 All ER 149, CA. As to the distinction between a lease and a licence see PARA 7 et seq ante.

3 Eg a fair (Jewel's Case (1588) 5 Co Rep 3a); or tithes (Dean and Chapter of Windsor v Gover (1671) 2 Saund 302; Gardiner v Williamson (1831) 2 B & Ad 336 at 339); or an easement (Buszard v Capel (1828) 8 B & C 141 at 150; affd (1829) 6 Bing 150, Ex Ch). The lease leaves, however, a reversion in the owner to which the payments in the nature of rent are attached, and the right to receive them passes to the assignee of the reversion: Lord Hastings v North Eastern Rly Co [1898] 2 Ch 674 at 678; affd [1899] 1 Ch 656 at 665, CA; sub nom North Eastern Rly Co v Lord Hastings [1900] AC 260, HL. A payment reserved on the grant of an easement by a tenant will cease with his tenancy: Jones v Dorothea Co (1887) 58 LT 80.

244. Single rent in respect of land and chattels.

Where a single rent is reserved on a lease of land and incorporeal hereditaments<sup>1</sup>, or of land and chattels<sup>2</sup>, the rent is treated as issuing out of the land alone<sup>3</sup>. If the titles to the land and chattels are severed, either the rent will be apportioned or a new agreement will be inferred under which the tenant takes the land at a reasonable proportion of the rent from the person entitled to it and agrees to pay the remainder as compensation to the person entitled to the chattels<sup>4</sup>.

1 Smith v Bowles (1617) 2 Roll Abr 451. To be effective as to the incorporeal hereditaments the lease must be by deed (Gardiner v Williamson (1831) 2 B & Ad 336), unless the incorporeal hereditaments are appurtenant to the land (see PARA 103 ante).

245. Rent must be certain.

The rent must be certain, or must be so stated that it can afterwards be ascertained with certainty<sup>1</sup>. For this purpose, it is sufficient if, by calculation and upon the happening of certain events, the rent becomes certain; and, provided that it can be so ascertained from time to time, it is no objection that the rent is of fluctuating amount<sup>2</sup>.

An option to renew at such a rental as may be agreed is void unless means are provided of fixing the rent in default of agreement<sup>3</sup>; but, if the criteria for assessing the rent are stipulated but the machinery for doing so is missing, the court can undertake the task<sup>4</sup>.

Where an agreement provides for a fair and reasonable price and provides machinery to ascertain that price applying objective standards but the machinery breaks down, the court will substitute its own machinery to ascertain that price<sup>5</sup>. Thus, in the case of a lease containing provisions for the rent to be reviewed to such rent as shall be agreed, the courts have held that the tenant must pay a fair rent representing what the premises were worth on the review date<sup>6</sup>.

Rent is sufficiently certain if it can be calculated with certainty at the time it becomes payable even if the increase is dependent upon the whim of the landlord<sup>7</sup> and, even if it has not been ascertained by the due date, will be payable retrospectively if the lease so requires on its true construction, there being no absolute rule that rent must be ascertained by the due date<sup>8</sup>.

1 Co Litt 142a; Parker v Harris (1692) 1 Salk 262 (reservation 'after the rate' of £18 per annum held void for uncertainty, but the phrase subsequently became widely used by conveyancers). If the rent, although at first uncertain, is afterwards fixed, this will operate as a new demise: see Watson v Waud (1853) 8 Exch 335 at 339. The rent may be fixed by arbitration (see Daly v Duggan (1839) 7 I Eq R 311), but an agreement for a lease at a rent to be fixed by arbitration will not be specifically enforced if the arbitration is improperly conducted (Chichester v M'Intire (1830) 4 Bli NS 78). As to rent review clauses see PARA 292 et seq post.

2 Re Knight, ex p Voisey (1882) 21 ChD 442 at 458, CA; and see Co Litt 96a (where the service of shearing 'all the sheep pasturing within the lord's manor' is said to have the requisite certainty). Thus the rent may vary with the price of wheat (Kendall v Baker (1852) 11 CB 842), with the amount of electrical horsepower generated (A-G for Ontario v Canadian Niagara Power Co [1912] AC 852, PC), or with the tenant's income (Smith v Cardiff Corp'n (No 2) [1955] Ch 159 at 173, [1955] 1 All ER 113 at 120) or with the amount of the tenant's turnover (Debenhams Retail plc v Sun Alliance and London Insurance Co Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 868, [2005] STC 1443, [2005] 3 EGLR 34 (rent calculated by reference to a company's annual turnover ('the gross amount of total sales') held to include VAT). See also DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 910; HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARAS 255-256. A tenant for life is authorised to reserve a variable rent to a mining lessee: see the Settled Land Act 1925 s 45(1); and SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 843 (but note that subject to certain exceptions, no settlement created on or after 1 January 1997 is a strict settlement under the Settled Land Act 1925 and no such settlement is deemed to be made on or after that date: see SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 676).

Although a rent may be fluctuating in amount, a clause which purports to reserve a rent at a fixed annual sum of money and to measure its value by reference to the value of gold may well be construed, if its language permits, as reserving a fixed annual rent of the amount stated: Treseder Griffin v Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd [1956] 2 QB 127, [1956] 2 All ER 33, CA (rent varying with value of gold sterling). In this case both Lord Goddard CJ at first instance and Harman J in the Court of Appeal accepted the validity of a clause in a lease causing the rent to fluctuate so as to protect the landlord against the changing value of money. On appeal it was held that the clause in the particular lease failed to have that effect, but this result was the consequence of its wording. ## 246. Agreements to increase or reduce rents.

Unless the lease contains a provision<sup>1</sup> permitting the landlord to increase the amount of the rent or unless special statutory provisions apply<sup>2</sup>, the landlord may increase the rent only with the tenant's agreement, and similarly the tenant, in the absence of any relevant provision in the lease, may not reduce the rent unless the landlord agrees to that reduction<sup>3</sup>; but, subject to any special statutory provisions<sup>4</sup>, if both the landlord and the tenant agree to vary the terms of the tenancy, they may increase or decrease the rent<sup>5</sup>. An agreement to vary the lease may, however, be unenforceable for want of consideration if no equity has arisen<sup>6</sup>. A landlord who, in the absence of consideration, has promised to accept a reduced rent will not be permitted to act inconsistently with his promise, if it was intended to be legally binding and to be acted upon and it was in fact acted upon, unless he has given reasonable notice of his intention to demand the full rent to which he is entitled under the contract of tenancy<sup>7</sup>. The mere payment and acceptance of the reduced rent does not operate as a new demise<sup>8</sup>. An increased rent may be agreed upon orally for good consideration, such as the execution of improvements<sup>9</sup>, but it may be recovered only on the agreement and does not pass with the reversion<sup>10</sup>. As in the case of reduction of rent, the mere fact of an increase of rent does not operate as a new demise<sup>11</sup>.

1 le a rent review clause. Technically the rent is not varied but the amount of the rent reserved is ascertained: see PARA 243 notes 6, 11-13 ante, PARA 292 note 4 post.

2 Eg the Rent Act 1977 ss 86, 93, 97(1) (as amended) (periodic tenancies of housing associations etc: see PARAS 905-907 post); the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 s 12 (as amended) (see AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 338); the Housing Act 1985 s 25 (as amended) (weekly or other periodic tenancies, not being secure tenancies or introductory tenancies, of dwelling houses let by local housing authorities: see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 256); s 103 (secure tenancies: see PARA 1338 post); the Housing Act 1988 s 13 (as amended) (assured periodic tenancies: see PARA 1091 post); and s 85 (dwelling housing let by housing action trusts on periodic tenancies which are not secure tenancies: see HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 356).

3 This does not apply, however, where no lease subsists and where the tenancy is merely a statutory tenancy under the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 831 post). If that statutory tenancy is a regulated tenancy, either the landlord or the tenant may apply to the rent officer for the determination of a fair rent. On a fair rent being registered, the rent is automatically reduced to the amount registered; and, if that amount exceeds the rent currently payable, the landlord may increase the recoverable rent to the amount of the registered rent by the service of appropriate notices of increase: see PARA 909 et seq post. As to the procedure for increasing rents under the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45) (as amended) see PARA 1091 et seq post.

4 In certain circumstances the Rent Act 1977 makes any agreement to pay an increased rent unenforceable (see PARA 899 post); and in respect of a restricted contract it is an offence to demand rent in excess of a registered rent, notwithstanding any agreement by the tenant to pay it (see s 81(1), (4) (as amended); and PARAS 997, 999 post).

5 It was formerly held that, if the lease was in writing, an agreement for reduction of rent, if it was to be enforceable, had to be evidenced by writing: O'Connor v Spaight (1804) 1 Sch & Lef 305 at 306; Hilton v Goodhind (1827) 2 C & P 591; and see Mitas v Hyams [1951] 2 TLR 1215, CA. At common law a deed could be varied only by a deed; but the equitable rule now prevails.

247. Statutory limitations on the amount of rent.

The maximum rent payable under tenancies of some properties is limited by statute. The properties chiefly affected are dwelling houses<sup>1</sup> within the Rent Act 1977<sup>2</sup>, including some dwelling houses let by housing associations, housing trusts, the Housing Corporation or the relevant authority for certain purposes of the Housing Associations Act 1985<sup>3</sup>. Under these provisions the landlord or the tenant may refer the amount of the rent to the rent officer or rent tribunal, as the case may be<sup>4</sup>, for a fair rent<sup>5</sup> to be determined.

If the landlord of a dwelling held on an assured periodic tenancy<sup>6</sup> serves a notice of increase, the tenant may refer the rent to a rent assessment committee for a determination of the rent at which the dwelling might reasonably be expected to be let in the open market under an assured tenancy<sup>7</sup>. Similarly, a tenant holding under an assured shorthold tenancy<sup>8</sup> may in some circumstances apply to a rent assessment committee for a determination of the rent which the landlord might reasonably be expected to obtain under the assured shorthold tenancy<sup>9</sup>.

Local housing authorities<sup>10</sup> and housing action trusts<sup>11</sup> may make such reasonable charges as they may determine for the tenancy or occupation of their houses.

In respect of agricultural holdings to which the Agricultural Holding Act 1986 applies, in certain circumstances either the landlord or the tenant may require that the amount of the rent be revised by arbitration<sup>12</sup>; and in respect of tenancies of business premises<sup>13</sup> where the contractual tenancy is continued by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>14</sup> or where the court orders that a new lease is to be granted<sup>15</sup>, the amount of the rent is determined by the court<sup>16</sup>. In respect of farm business tenancies<sup>17</sup> there is a statutory procedure for rent review under the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995<sup>18</sup>.

Where land is compulsorily hired by a smallholdings authority, the rent to be paid for the land hired must, in default of agreement, be determined by a single valuer appointed by the Secretary of State or, in Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>19</sup>, although a tenant in occupation may by notice require that any claim by him be referred to arbitration under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986, where that Act applies<sup>20</sup>.

248. Reserve power to limit rent.

The Secretary of State<sup>1</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>2</sup> may by order provide for:

- 399 (1) restricting or preventing increases of rent<sup>3</sup> for dwellings<sup>4</sup> which would otherwise take place; or
- 400 (2) restricting the amount of rent which would otherwise be payable on new lettings<sup>5</sup> of dwellings; and may so provide either generally or in relation to any specified description of dwelling<sup>6</sup>.

The mischief to which this provision is directed is not to counter inflation, but to confer a reserve power to be exercised by the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister if he or it reasonably judges it necessary or desirable to protect tenants from hardship caused by increased or excessive rents<sup>7</sup>.

In the exercise of this power, and prior to the transfer of functions in relation to Wales, the Secretary of State has made the Rent Acts (Maximum Fair Rent) Order 1999<sup>8</sup>, which is discussed in a later part of this title<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

2 As to the transfer of functions of the Secretary of State under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'rent' includes a sum payable under a licence, but does not include a sum attributable to rates, council tax or, in the case of dwellings of local authorities, National Park authorities or new town corporations, to the use of furniture, or the provision of services: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 31(3) (amended by the Environment Act 1995 s 78, Sch 10 para 25(3); and by the Local Government Finance (Housing) (Consequential Amendments) Order 1993, SI 1993/651, art 2(1), Sch 2 para 16). 'New town corporation' means (1) a development corporation established by an order made, or treated as made, under the New Towns Act 1981 (see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(3) (Reissue) PARA 1322 et seq); or (2) the Commission for the New Towns (now part of English Partnerships) (see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(3) (Reissue) PARA 1383 et seq); Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38. As to National Park authorities see OPEN SPACES AND COUNTRYSIDE vol 78 (2010) PARA 526.

'Local authority' means a district, county, county borough or London borough council, the Common Council of the City of London or the Council of the Isles of Scilly; and in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 14(4) (as amended) (see PARA 419 post), s 26(1) (as amended) (see PARA 325 post) and 28(6) (as amended) (see PARA 328 post) includes the Broads Authority, a police authority established under the Police Act 1996 s 3 (see POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 139), the Metropolitan Police Authority, a joint authority established by the Local Government Act 1985 Pt IV (ss 23-42) (as amended) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 47 et seq) and the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority (see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 217); Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38 (definition amended by the Education Reform Act 1988 s 237(2), Sch 13 Pt I; the Norfolk and Suffolk Broads Act 1988 s 21, Sch 6 para 26; the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 s 22(2), Sch 8 para 7; the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994 s 43, Sch 4 Pt II para 60; the Police Act 1996 s 103, Sch 7 para 1(2)(x); the Police Act 1997 s 134(1), Sch 9 para 51; the Greater London Authority Act 1999 ss 325, 328, 423, Sch 27 para 53, Sch 29 Pt I para 44, Sch 34 Pt VIII; the Criminal Justice and Police Act 2001 ss 128(1), 137, Sch 6 Pt 3 para 69, Sch 7 Pt 5(1)). 4 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

5 For these purposes, 'new letting' includes any grant of a tenancy, whether or not the premises were previously let, and any grant of a licence: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 31(3).

6 Ibid s 31(1). Any such order must be made by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 31(4). An order may contain supplementary or incidental provisions, including provisions excluding, adapting or modifying any provision made by or under an enactment, whenever passed, relating to rent or the recovery of overpaid rent: s 31(2).

Section 31 (as amended) does not, however, apply to a dwelling forming part of a property subject to a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies, but without prejudice to the application of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 31 (as amended) in relation to a subtenancy of a part of the premises comprised in such a tenancy: s 32(3).

UPDATE

248 Reserve power to limit rent

NOTE 3--Definition of 'new town corporation' in Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38 amended: Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 8 para 36.

Definition of 'local authority' in Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38 further amended: Local Government and Public Involvement in Health Act 2007 Sch 13 para 42; Local Democracy, Economic Development and Construction Act 2009 Sch 6 para 70.

249. Reservation of rent.

The reservation of rent usually commences with the word 'paying' or 'rendering'. In addition to creating a rent for which the remedy of distress will lie, such a word creates, if the tenant executes the lease or a counterpart, a covenant for payment of the rent<sup>1</sup>, although an express covenant is usually inserted in the lease. Conversely, any words which operate as an agreement to pay the rent, such as a covenant<sup>2</sup>, a proviso<sup>3</sup> or a letting at a stated rent<sup>4</sup>, also constitute a good reservation. Whether the lease is oral or by deed, the rent constitutes a debt which is in the same rank as a specialty debt<sup>5</sup>. The obligation of a contractual tenant under a covenant to pay rent, whether express or implied, continues during the currency of the tenancy, so that upon the tenant's death his estate continues to be liable for rent until the tenancy is determined<sup>6</sup>. Where, however, the tenancy was a statutory tenancy only, the tenancy determines or may in some cases be transmitted to another tenant by operation of law upon the tenant's death<sup>7</sup>.

1 Giles v Hooper (1690) Carth 135; Iggulden v May (1804) 9 Ves 325 at 330. On principle, as the covenant arises on construction of the words, it should be regarded as an express covenant, and this view has often been taken (Newton v Osborn (1653) Sty 387; Porter v Swetnam (1654) Sty 406; Hellier v Casbard (1665) 1 Sid 266; Steward v Wolveridge (1832) 9 Bing 60 at 67 (revsd on other grounds sub nom Wolveridge v Steward (1833) 1 Cr & M 644)); but more usually it has been treated as an implied covenant (Paradine v Jane (1647) Aleyn 26; Anon (1670) 1 Sid 447 (pl 9); Harper v Burgh (1677) 2 Lev 206; Webb v Russell (1789) 3 Term Rep 393 at 402; Vyvyan v Arthur (1823) 1 B & C 410; Iggulden v May supra at 330; Church v Brown (1808) 15 Ves 258 at 264). The practical distinction is that the tenant's liability under an implied covenant does not arise before entry and would cease on assignment; but on an express covenant it is not so limited. The balance of authority appears, however, to be in favour of the view that, for this purpose at any rate, the covenant is only an implied covenant, or a covenant in law (see Platt on Covenants (1829) 53; 2 Platt on Leases (1847) 87); and in order that the tenant may be liable before entry or after assignment the lease must be by an instrument executed by him (see 2 Platt on Leases (1847) 87; Platt on Covenants (1829) 55). As to the statutory restriction on the recovery of rent after assignment see PARAS 289-291 post.

Under an express covenant for the payment of rent where there is no place specified for payment, it has been held that the tenant must seek out the landlord and pay the rent to him: Haldane v Johnson (1853) 8 Exch 689 at 695; and see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 940. If the landlord has been in the custom of calling at the demised premises to collect the rent, the place for payment may by implication become those premises: see Browne v White [1947] 2 DLR 309, BC CA. In a proviso for acceptance of a reduced rent if the covenants in the lease are performed, the word 'covenants' does not include the covenant for payment of rent: M'Kay v M'Nally (1879) 4 LR Ir 438, CA. For a provision for postponing payment of rent on giving security see Jones v Winkfield (1833) 10 Bing 308. As to retention of rent in satisfaction of a debt due from the landlord see Ledger v Stanton (1861) 2 John & H 687. Where a surety joins to covenant for payment of rent, any qualification of his liability must be observed in suing on his covenant: Sicklemore v Thistleton (1817) 6 M & S 9.

Where there is no express covenant, it has been held that the tenant must be prepared to pay his rent on the demised premises on the appointed day (Crouche v Fastolfe (1680) T Raym 418; Rowe v Young (1820) 2 Brod & Bing 165 at 234, HL, per Bayley J; and see PARA 259 post), unless some other place has been fixed (Co Litt 201b; Boroughs' Case (1596) 4 Co Rep 72b at 73a). Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(1) NATURE AND RESERVATION OF RENT/250. Rent follows the reversion.

250. Rent follows the reversion.

In the case of tenancies granted before 1 January 1996<sup>1</sup>, rent reserved by a lease is annexed and incident to and goes with the reversionary estate in the land, or in any part thereof, immediately expectant on the term granted by the lease<sup>2</sup>. If it is reserved to a stranger, it is not a true rent and cannot be distrained for, but the stranger may recover it by bringing a claim<sup>3</sup>. Similarly, no rent can be reserved on the assignment of a lease, as no reversion remains in the assignor, but here also the reservation is good as a contract to pay the rent<sup>4</sup>. An assignee of the reversion takes the benefit of a guarantee of rent and covenants (and of a covenant by a guarantor to take a new lease if the existing lease is disclaimed) without there being any express assignment by the assignor<sup>5</sup>.

In the case of a tenancy granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>6</sup>, the benefit and burden of all landlord and tenant covenants of a tenancy are annexed and incident to the whole, and to each and every part, of the premises demised by the tenancy and of the reversion in them and pass on an assignment of the reversion in them<sup>7</sup>. As from the assignment of the reversion the assignee becomes entitled to the benefit of the tenant covenants of the tenancy<sup>8</sup>.

1 The tenancies which are not 'new tenancies' for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995. For the meaning of 'new tenancy' see PARA 578 post.

2 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 141(1); and PARA 567 post. At common law it was also proper to leave the law to make the distribution of the rent, without an express reservation to any person: Whitlock's Case (1609) 8 Co Rep 69b at 71a. Where there was such an express reservation, slight inaccuracies were overlooked 'for the law uses all industry imaginable to conform the reservation to the estate': Sacheverel v Frogat (1671) 1 Vent 161 at 162; and see Drake v Munday (1631) Cro Car 207. However, a reservation to the landlord, without mention of his heirs, confined the rent to his life (Co Litt 47a; Wooton v Edwin (1607) 12 Co Rep 36), unless it was expressly reserved during the term (Sacheverel v Frogat supra as reported in 2 Saund 367). Where the whole rent was reserved to one person and part of the premises belonged to another person who concurred in the lease, the court ordered the rent payable to be apportioned: Harryman v Collins (1854) 18 Beav 11.

3 Jewel's Case (1588) 5 Co Rep 3a; Littleton's Tenures s 346; Co Litt 143b; Oates v Frith (1615) Hob 130; Cole v Sury (1627) Lat 264; Deering v Farrington (1674) 1 Mod Rep 113; Dollen v Batt (1858) 4 CBNS 760 at 768; Gilbertson v Richards (1859) 4 H & N 277 at 295. A landlord without title has a reversion by estoppel to which the rent is properly incident: see PARA 4 ante. It has been suggested that the Crown could reserve rent to a stranger (Co Litt 143b); but such a reservation would rather have been of the nature of a rentcharge, and thus would now in most circumstances be precluded by the Rentcharges Act 1977 s 2 (as amended) (see RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 774).

251. Nature of penal rents.

An increased rent may be reserved in case the tenant commits a breach of the covenants of his lease<sup>1</sup>. Such a rent is commonly known as a penal rent<sup>2</sup>. In general, however, it is not in the nature of a penalty, but is a liquidated sum or succession of sums payable by way of satisfaction<sup>3</sup>. If the increased rent is made payable as rent, and if it has once become payable, it will continue to be payable periodically during the residue of the term<sup>4</sup>, notwithstanding that the breach of covenant has been remedied, as, for example, where land which has been ploughed up has been laid down to grass again<sup>5</sup>, unless the terms of the lease as a whole show that the rent is to be payable only while the breach continues<sup>6</sup>. A receipt of the original rent is not a waiver of the landlord's claim to the additional rent<sup>7</sup>.

Prima facie the tenant is bound to observe his covenants, and the mere circumstance that a penal rent is reserved does not give him the option of breaking the covenant and paying the increased rent<sup>8</sup>. In general he has no such option where a single sum is made payable<sup>9</sup>, or where the landlord has a right of re-entry on breach of the covenant<sup>10</sup>. If, however, the increased rent is payable throughout the remainder of the term, this is an indication that the tenant is to have the right to break the covenant and render himself liable to the additional rent<sup>11</sup>. Where the tenant does not have the option of breaking the covenant, the landlord is entitled to have a breach prevented by injunction<sup>12</sup>, and, if he has a right of re-entry, he is entitled either to exercise this right and forfeit the lease, or to require payment of the increased rent<sup>13</sup>.

1 Eg if he sells hay off the premises (Pollitt v Forrest (1847) 11 QB 949, Ex Ch; Fielden v Tattersall (1863) 7 LT 718; Massey v Goodall (1851) 17 QB 310; Legh v Lillie (1860) 6 H & N 165), or does not follow a specified system of cultivation (Fuller v Fenwick (1846) 3 CB 705) or turns pasture into arable land (Rolfe v Peterson (1772) 2 Bro Parl Cas 436); but the description of land as pasture in the lease, although sufficient if no evidence to the contrary is given (Birch v Stephenson (1811) 3 Taunt 469), is not conclusive (Skipworth v Green (1724) 8 Mod Rep 311; and see Aldridge v Howard (1842) 4 Man & G 921), and does not include land subsequently turned into pasture by the tenant (Rush v Lucas [1910] 1 Ch 437). See, however, note 2 infra.

2 In the case of penal rents reserved in respect of agricultural holdings to which the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 applies (see PARA 806 post) the landlord may not recover any sum in excess of the damage actually suffered (see s 24; and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 331); and in the case of burning heather, rough grass etc with the consent of the Agricultural Land Tribunal the tenant is relieved from all liability for the breach of covenant (see the Hill Farming Act 1946 s 21 (as amended); and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 361).

3 Rolfe v Peterson (1772) 2 Bro Parl Cas 436; Farrant v Olmius (1820) 3 B & Ald 692; Jones v Green (1829) 3 Y & J 298; Smith v Ryan (1844) 9 ILR 235; Wright v Tracey (1873) IR 7 CL 134; Re Earl of Mexborough and Wood (1882) 47 LT 516; Lord Elphinstone v Monkland Iron and Coal Co (1886) 11 App Cas 332, HL; Pollitt v Forrest (1847) 11 QB 949 at 962. As to satisfaction generally see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 1045. If it were a penalty, the landlord could recover only the actual damage suffered. As to the distinction between penalties and liquidated damages see DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 1065. An increased rent may be reserved in case the tenant suffers the land to be occupied by other persons (Greenslade v Tapscott (1834) 1 Cr M & R 55; Ponsonby v Adams (1770) 2 Bro Parl Cas 431, HL), or ceases to reside on the premises (Ponsonby v Adams supra), or carries on specified trades (Weston v Metropolitan Asylum District Managers (1882) 9 QBD 404, CA).

8 French v Macale (1842) 2 Dr & War 269 at 274, 284; Bray v Fogarty (1870) 4 IR Eq 544. Similarly, a provision for a reduction of rent while the tenant observes a 'tied house' covenant does not entitle him to pay the full rent and disregard the tie: Hanbury v Cundy (1887) 58 LT 155; and see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 272; Hardy v Martin (1783) 1 Cox Eq Cas 26; Bringloe v Goodson (1839) 8 Scott 71. PAYMENT OF RENT/(1) NATURE AND RESERVATION OF RENT/252. Treatment of rent for purposes of VAT and stamp duty land tax.

252. Treatment of rent for purposes of VAT and stamp duty land tax.

Where the grant of a lease constitutes a taxable supply liable to VAT at the standard rate, the rent is liable to VAT as constituting the value of the taxable supply made by the landlord to the tenant<sup>1</sup>.

For the purposes of stamp duty land tax, where the chargeable consideration for a transaction consists of rent, particular statutory provision is made for determining the amount of rent payable under a lease where that amount varies in accordance with provision in the lease, or is contingent, uncertain or unascertained<sup>2</sup>. No account is to be taken for the purposes of stamp duty land tax of any provision for rent to be adjusted in line with the retail prices index<sup>3</sup>.

Where:

- 401 (1) A surrenders an existing lease to B ('the old lease') and in consideration of that surrender B grants a lease to A of the same or substantially the same premises ('the new lease');
- 402 (2) the tenant under a lease ('the old lease') of premises to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>4</sup> applies makes a request for a new tenancy ('the new lease') which is duly executed;
- 403 (3) on termination of a lease ('the head lease') a subtenant is granted a lease ('the new lease') of the same or substantially the same premises as those comprised in his original lease ('the old lease');
- 31 39. (a) in pursuance of an order of a court on a claim for relief against re-entry or forfeiture; or
- 40. (b) in pursuance of a contractual entitlement arising in the event of the head lease being terminated; or
- 32 404 (4) a person who has guaranteed the obligations of a lessee under a lease that has been terminated ('the old lease') is granted a lease of the same or substantially the same premises ('the new lease') in pursuance of the guarantee, then for the purposes of stamp duty land tax the rent payable under the new lease in respect of any period falling within the overlap period<sup>5</sup> is treated as reduced by the amount of the rent that would have been payable in respect of that period under the old lease<sup>6</sup>. These provisions do not, however, have effect so as to require the rent payable under the new lease to be treated as a negative amount<sup>7</sup>.

<sup>2</sup> See the Finance Act 2003 120, Sch 17A para 7(1) (s 120, Sch 17A added by the Finance Act 2004 s 296, Sch 39 Pt 2 para 22). As regards rent payable in respect of any period before the end of the fifth year of the term of the lease (1) the provisions of the Finance Act 2003 Pt 4 (ss 42-124) (as amended) apply as in relation to other chargeable consideration; and (2) the provisions of s 51(1), (2) (contingent, uncertain or unascertained consideration) accordingly apply if the amount is contingent, uncertain or unascertained: Sch 17A para 7(2) (as so added). As regards rent payable in respect of any period after the end of the fifth year of the term of the lease, the annual amount is assumed for the purposes of stamp duty land tax to be, in every case, equal to the highest amount of rent payable in respect of any consecutive 12 month period in the first five years of the term; and in determining that amount there must be taken into account (if necessary) any amounts determined as mentioned in head (2) supra but Sch 17A para 9(2) (as added) (deemed reduction of rent for overlap period in case of grant of further lease: see the text to notes 5-6 infra) is to be disregarded: Sch 17A para 7(3) (as so added). These provisions have effect subject to Sch 17A para 8 (as added) (adjustment where rent payable ceases to be uncertain) (see PARA 293 post): Sch 17A para 7(4) (as so added).

3 Ibid Sch 17A para 7(5) (as added: see note 2 supra).

4 Ie the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended): see PARA 701 et seq post.

5 The overlap period is the period between the date of grant of the new lease and what would have been the end of the term of the old lease had it not been terminated: Finance Act 2003 Sch 17A para 9(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

6 Ibid Sch 17A para 9(1), (2) (as added: see note 2 supra). The rent that would have been payable under the old lease is to be taken to be the amount taken into account in determining the stamp duty land tax chargeable in respect of the acquisition of the old lease: Sch 17A para 9(4) (as so added).

7 Ibid Sch 17A para 9(5) (as added: see note 2 supra).

(2) RENT BOOKS

253. Duty to provide rent book etc.

Where a tenant<sup>1</sup> has a right to occupy premises as a residence in consideration of a rent payable weekly, the landlord<sup>2</sup> must provide a rent book or other similar document<sup>3</sup> for use in respect of the premises<sup>4</sup>, unless the rent includes a payment in respect of board and the value of that board to the tenant forms a substantial proportion<sup>5</sup> of the whole rent<sup>6</sup>. If the landlord of such premises fails so to provide a rent book or other similar document, he commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>7</sup>; and, if a default in respect of which a landlord is convicted of such an offence continues for more than 14 days after the conviction, the landlord commits a further offence in respect of that default<sup>8</sup>.

If a person demands or receives rent on behalf of the landlord in respect of such premises while the requirement to provide a rent book or other similar document<sup>9</sup> is not complied with, then, unless he shows that he neither knew nor had reasonable cause to suspect that any such requirement had not been complied with, he commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenant' includes a statutory tenant and a person having a contractual right to occupy the premises: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 4(3)(a). For the meaning of 'statutory tenant' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a person having a contractual right to occupy the premises, means the person who granted the right or any successor in title of his, as the case may require: ibid s 4(3)(b). For the meaning of 'landlord' in relation to statutory tenants see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

3 Eg a rent card.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 4(1). The words 'in consideration of a rent payable weekly' in s 4(1) mean rent that is payable as a matter of obligation under the tenancy agreement, and do not necessarily refer to when the rent is in fact paid: see R (on the application of Dewa) v Marylebone Magistrates' Court [2004] EWHC 1022 (Admin), [2004] All ER (D) 289 (Apr). As to the information to be contained in rent books see PARA 254 post; as to the local housing authority's power to require the production of rent books see the Housing Act 1985 s 336; and HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARA 456; and as to the power of a local authority to publish information, for the assistance of landlords and tenants and others, as to their rights and duties under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 4, 7 see the Rent Act 1977 s 149(1)(a)(i) (as substituted); and PARA 816 post.

254. Information to be contained in rent books.

A rent book or other similar document provided by the landlord<sup>1</sup> must contain notice of the name and address<sup>2</sup> of the landlord of the premises and:

- 405 (1) if the premises are occupied by virtue of a restricted contract<sup>3</sup>, particulars of the rent and of the other terms and conditions of the contract and notice of such other matters as may be prescribed<sup>4</sup>;
- 406 (2) if the premises are let on or subject to a protected<sup>5</sup> or statutory<sup>6</sup> tenancy or let on an assured tenancy<sup>7</sup>, notice of such matters as may be prescribed<sup>8</sup>.

If the premises are occupied by virtue of a restricted contract or let on or subject to a protected or statutory tenancy or let on an assured tenancy, the notice and particulars so required must be in the prescribed form<sup>9</sup>.

If the landlord of such premises fails to provide the information so required, he commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>10</sup>; and, if a default in respect of which a landlord is convicted of such an offence continues for more than 14 days after the conviction, the landlord commits a further offence in respect of that default<sup>11</sup>.

If a person demands or receives rent on behalf of the landlord in respect of such premises while the requirement to provide information in a rent book or other similar document<sup>12</sup> is not complied with, then, unless he shows that he neither knew nor had reasonable cause to suspect that any such requirement had not been complied with, he commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>13</sup>.

2 For the meaning of 'address' see PARA 52 note 4 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'restricted contract' has the same meaning as in the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 986 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38.

4 For these purposes, 'prescribed' means prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister which (1) may make different provision for different cases; and (2) must, if made by the Secretary of State, be made by statutory instrument which is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: ibid s 5(3).

As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante; and as to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

5 For these purposes, 'protected tenancy' has the same meaning as in the Rent Act 1977 (see PARA 818 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 38.

6 For the meaning of 'statutory tenancy' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

7 le within the meaning of the Housing Act 1988 Pt I (ss 1-45) (as amended): see PARA 1011 et seq post.

8 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 5(1) (amended by the Housing Act 1988 s 140(1), Sch 17 para 67(1)). By virtue of the Housing (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 2(2), the Rent Book (Forms of Notice) Regulations 1982, SI 1982/1474 (as amended) have effect as if made in exercise of the power so conferred: see note 9 infra.

As to the power of a local authority to publish information, for the assistance of landlords and tenants and others, as to their rights and duties under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 5 (as amended), s 7 see the Rent Act 1977 s 149(1)(a)(i) (as substituted); and PARA 816 post.

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 5(2) (amended by the Housing Act 1988 Sch 17 para 67(2)). The prescribed form in which, under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 5 (as amended), notice or particulars are required to be contained in a rent book or other similar document provided in pursuance of s 4 if the premises are (1) occupied by virtue of a restricted contract within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977; (2) a dwelling house let on or subject to a protected or statutory tenancy within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977; (3) a dwelling house subject to a statutory tenancy as defined in the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 (see PARAS 1146-1149 post); or (4) a dwelling house let on an assured tenancy or an assured agricultural occupancy within the meaning of the Housing Act 1988 (see PARAS 1018, 1183 post) is as set out in the Rent Book (Forms of Notice) Regulations 1982, SI 1982/1474, reg 3(1), Schedule Pts I-IV (amended by SI 1988/2198; 1990/1067; SI 1993/656) or, in each case, a form substantially to the same effect: Rent Book (Forms of Notice) Regulations 1982, SI 1982/1474, regs 2, 3(1) (amended by SI 1988/2198); Housing (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 2(2). In the cases referred to in heads (1)-(4) supra, such rent book or similar document must contain notice of the matters set out in the appropriate prescribed form, in addition to the name and address of the landlord and the particulars required by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 5 (as amended): Rent Book (Forms of Notice) Regulations 1982, SI 1982/1474, regs 2, 3(2) (amended by SI 1988/2198); Housing (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 2(2).

255. Information to be supplied by companies.

Where the landlord<sup>1</sup> of premises occupied by a tenant<sup>2</sup> as a residence in consideration of a rent payable weekly<sup>3</sup> is a company, and the tenant serves on the landlord a request in writing to that effect, the landlord must give the tenant in writing particulars of the name and address<sup>4</sup> of every director and of the secretary of the company<sup>5</sup>. Such a request is duly served on the landlord if it is served on an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or other similar document or on the person who receives the rent of the premises; and a person on whom a request is so served must forward it to the landlord as soon as may be<sup>6</sup>.

If the landlord of such premises fails to provide such information, he commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>7</sup>; and, if a person fails to comply with his duty to forward such a request to the landlord<sup>8</sup>, he commits a summary offence and is liable on conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>9</sup>.

If a default in respect of which a landlord<sup>10</sup> or, as the case may be, another person<sup>11</sup> is convicted of such an offence continues for more than 14 days after the conviction, the landlord or other person commits a further offence in respect of that default<sup>12</sup>.

256. Rent book as evidence.

A rent book is prima facie merely a book containing acknowledgment of the payment of rent and the information required by law to be set out in it. It is not a contract for granting a tenancy, still less a lease creating an estate<sup>1</sup>. The issue of a rent book in the prescribed form did not estop the landlord from denying that the premises were controlled<sup>2</sup>. A rent book may, however, be evidence of the terms on which the tenant holds<sup>3</sup> or may be evidence, although not conclusive evidence, of the tenant's identity<sup>4</sup>. A variation in a rent book or the issue of a new rent book in altered terms may be evidence of a variation in the terms of the tenancy<sup>5</sup>, or of the termination of a contractual tenancy<sup>6</sup> or the substitution of a contractual tenancy for a statutory tenancy<sup>7</sup> or the exercise of an option to take a new lease<sup>8</sup>.

An entry in a rent book could, however, be a memorandum of an agreement for the purposes of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 40(1) (repealed).

Cf Lister v Bancroft [1950] EGD 121, CA (county court judge held entitled to reach an opposite conclusion, the question being one of fact in each case). A condition in a current rent book by which the landlord reserves the right to enter and do repairs would, it seems, render the landlord liable to a third person injured while on a highway by a collapse of part of the demised premises: Mint v Good as reported in [1951] 1 KB 517 at 520, CA (no such condition incorporated in the rent book until after the accident in question; but landlord held liable on the basis that, apart from the rent book, the reservation of such a right was to be implied). As to liability to third persons for the consequences of disrepair generally see PARAS 474-476 post.

(3) DEMANDS FOR RENT

257. Details to be contained in demands for rent etc.

Where any written demand<sup>1</sup> is given to a tenant<sup>2</sup> of premises which consist of or include a dwelling<sup>3</sup> and are not held under a tenancy to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>4</sup> applies, the demand must contain the following information, namely:

- 407 (1) the name and address of the landlord; and
- 408 (2) if that address is not in England and Wales, an address in England and Wales at which notices, including notices in proceedings<sup>5</sup>, may be served on the landlord by the tenant<sup>6</sup>.

Where a tenant of any such premises is given such a demand but it does not contain any information required to be so contained in it, any part of the amount demanded which consists of a service charge<sup>7</sup> or an administration charge<sup>8</sup> ('the relevant amount') is treated for all purposes as not being due from the tenant to the landlord at any time before that information is furnished by the landlord by notice given to the tenant<sup>9</sup>; but the relevant amount is not so treated in relation to any time when, by virtue of an order of any court or tribunal, there is in force an appointment of a receiver or manager<sup>10</sup> whose functions include the receiving of service charges or, as the case may be, administration charges from the tenant<sup>11</sup>.

A landlord of such premises is in any event obliged to furnish the tenant with an address in England and Wales for service of notice and failure to comply will lead to the rent, as well as any service charge, being treated as not due from the tenant<sup>12</sup>.

A tenant under a long lease of a dwelling is not liable to make a payment of rent under the lease unless the landlord has given him a notice relating to the payment; and the date on which he is liable to make the payment is that specified in the notice<sup>13</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'demand' means a demand for rent or other sums payable to the landlord under the terms of the tenancy: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 47(4); and see note 2 infra. Where the premises are managed by an RTM company, references to the landlord include the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102, Sch 7 para 12(2), (2). For the meaning of 'landlord' generally, and for the meaning of 'tenancy' see PARA 53 note 1 ante; and for the meaning of 'RTM company' see PARA 374 post.

2 Where the premises are managed by an RTM company, references to a tenant include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises; and in relation to such a person the reference in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 47(4) (see note 1 supra) to sums payable to the landlord under the terms of the tenancy are to sums paid by him under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 103 (see PARA 395 post): Sch 7 para 12(1), (3). ## 258. Demand or receipt for rent including rates.

Every document containing a demand for rent or receipt for rent<sup>1</sup> which includes any sum for rates paid or payable under any statutory enactment by the owner instead of the occupier<sup>2</sup> must state either the annual, half-yearly, quarterly, monthly or weekly amount of those rates paid or payable in accordance with the last demands received by the owner from the rating authorities at the time of making his demand or giving his receipt in respect of the hereditament in question<sup>3</sup>. Where, however, such a statement has been furnished in connection with a demand for rent or receipt for rent in respect of a particular period, it is not necessary to furnish the statement upon any subsequent demand for rent or receipt for rent in respect of that period<sup>4</sup>.

If any person makes a demand for rent or gives a receipt for rent in contravention of the above provisions, he is liable, in respect of each offence, on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 1 on the standard scale<sup>5</sup>.

1 The expressions 'demand for rent' and 'receipt for rent' include a rent book, rent card and any document used for the notification or collection of rent due or for the acknowledgment of the receipt of the same: Statement of Rates Act 1919 s 2.

2 See PARA 521 post; and RATING AND COUNCIL TAX. Council tax in respect of residential property is normally payable by the tenant: see RATING AND COUNCIL TAX vol 39(1B) (Reissue) PARA 237.

3 Statement of Rates Act 1919 s 1(1) (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1927). The Statement of Rates Act 1919 does not apply to weekly lettings at inclusive rentals in any market established under or controlled by statute: s 1(2).

(4) TIME AND MODE OF PAYMENT

259. When rent is payable.

The reddendum fixes the periods when the rent is to be paid<sup>1</sup>. If no periods are fixed, a yearly rent is not payable until the end of the year<sup>2</sup>; but it is usually made payable quarterly or half-yearly<sup>3</sup> and it may be made payable in advance, either generally<sup>4</sup>, or for the last quarter or half-year, so as to give the landlord the remedy of distress for the rent in respect of that period before the expiration of the lease<sup>5</sup>. The reddendum should also specify the days on which the payments are to be made<sup>6</sup>, and the day for the first payment<sup>7</sup>. If the first payment reserved is to cover a greater or less time than the usual rent period, this should be expressly stated<sup>8</sup>; and, if the words of limitation defining the duration of the term created by the lease limit the term by reference to a commencement date antecedent to the grant of the lease, it is important that, unless it is intended that rent be paid as from the earlier date, the lease should specify the date from which the rent is to be paid<sup>9</sup>. Slight inaccuracies in the days of payment will not, however, prevent the landlord from recovering the full aggregate rent for the term<sup>10</sup>.

The tenant has the whole of the rent day in which to pay his rent, and the rent is not in arrear until after midnight of that day<sup>11</sup>. Special considerations apply, however, to payments made by post<sup>12</sup>. If the rent is payable in advance, it will only then be payable if the term has continued until the end of the rent day<sup>13</sup>. A payment made before the rent day is a payment not of rent but of a sum in gross<sup>14</sup>. It is an advance to the landlord, with an agreement that, on the day when the rent becomes due, that advance is to be treated as a fulfilment of the obligation to pay the rent<sup>15</sup>. Hence it is no discharge to the tenant unless, when the day arrives, the landlord is still entitled to receive and give a discharge for the rent<sup>16</sup>. In the case of rent incident to a freehold reversion, if the landlord receives prepayment<sup>17</sup> and dies before the rent day, his personal representatives must account to the devisee for an apportioned part from his death to the rent day<sup>18</sup>. Where, however, the rent is payable in advance and the rent day falls before the landlord's death, the whole of the rent, including that which is referable to the period from the landlord's death until the next subsequent rent day, has accrued due before his death, so that no such account or apportionment has to be made<sup>19</sup>.

If rent is expressed to be payable at the usual quarter days, those days are, in England and Wales, Lady Day (25 March), Midsummer Day (24 June), Michaelmas Day (29 September) and Christmas Day (25 December)<sup>20</sup>.

If the lease is in writing, an oral agreement for the variation of the time of payment must be evidenced by writing; and a receipt showing the alteration is sufficient evidence<sup>21</sup>.

1 As to the place of payment see PARA 249 ante.

2 Cole v Sury (1627) Lat 264; Turner v Allday (1836) Tyr & Gr 819; Coomber v Howard (1845) 1 CB 440; Collett v Curling (1847) 10 QB 785. Where, however, the time of payment is left indefinite, evidence may be given of the parties' contemporaneous or subsequent dealings to show that the rent was to be payable earlier than the end of the year: Gore v Lloyd (1844) 12 M & W 463.

3 See Tomkins v Pinsent (1702) 2 Ld Raym 819; Doe d Rudd v Golding (1821) 6 Moore CP 231; Coomber v Howard (1845) 1 CB 440; Bishop v Goodwin (1845) 14 M & W 260. A provision for determination of the term by notice expiring on any quarter day does not, however, make the rent payable quarterly: Collett v Curling (1847) 10 QB 785. A reservation of rent at a fixed sum per quarter, with a provision for continuance of the tenancy from quarter to quarter, creates a quarterly tenancy: R v Norwich Incorporation (1874) 30 LT 704. If the rent is payable 'quarterly, or half-quarterly, if required', the landlord, after receiving it quarterly, may not distrain for a half-quarter's rent without previous demand: Mallam v Arden (1833) 10 Bing 299.

4 Finch v Miller (1848) 5 CB 428; and see Hopkins v Helmore (1838) 8 Ad & El 463. If so intended, it should be expressly stated that the rent is to be payable 'from time to time', or 'throughout the term', in advance; otherwise the provision may be held to relate to the first payment only: Holland v Palser (1817) 2 Stark 161. Cf Allen v Bates (1833) 3 LJ Ex 39. As to rent payable in advance see further DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 911.

5 Witty v Williams (1864) 12 WR 755. As to a clause allowing the tenant to retain a half-year's rent in hand see - v Nicholls (1774) Lofft 393.

6 Where the days are not mentioned, the rent is payable by equal instalments on the half-yearly or quarterly days, as the case may be, reckoned from the commencement of the term: Tomkins v Pinsent (1702) 2 Ld Raym 819; Gilbert on Rents 50; and see Harrington v Wise (1596) Cro Eliz 486. Rent payable at the 'two usual feasts of the year' is due at Lady Day and Michaelmas: Harrington v Wise supra. Evidence of a custom of the country as to the meaning of 'Lady Day', or any similar expression, is, however, admissible to explain an oral demise: Doe d Hall v Benson (1821) 4 B & Ald 588 at 589; cf Den d Peters v Hopkinson (1823) 3 Dow & Ry KB 507. If days of grace are allowed, where, that is, the rent is payable on specified days, or within a certain number of days afterwards, it is not due, so as to entitle the landlord to his remedies for it, until the expiration of the last of the days of grace (Blunden's Case (1598) Cro Eliz 565; Pilkington v Dalton (1598) Cro Eliz 575; Clun's Case (1613) 10 Co Rep 127a at 128a), except that, if the term expires on a rent day, the last instalment of rent then becomes due, and the days of grace are disregarded (Barwick v Foster (1610) Cro Jac 227 at 233; and see Biggin v Bridge (1676) 3 Keb 534).

7 Where the day for first payment is not mentioned, the first payment will be due on such of the specified rent days as first occurs, although it is not the first mentioned: Hill v Grange (1556) 1 Plowd 164 at 171; Co Litt 217b. As to the construction of the words '25 December next' in a lease dated 23 December see Simner v

Watney (1911) 28 TLR 162, CA (the lease having been executed before 23 December, the first payment was held to fall to be made on 25 December of the same year).

8 See Hutchins v Scott (1837) 2 M & W 809 at 810; Simner v Watney (1911) 28 TLR 162, CA. For a subsequent agreement operating retrospectively to make a reservation of rent from an earlier date see M'Leish v Tate (1778) 2 Cowp 781.

9 A lease limited to commence on a date prior to the grant of the lease cannot retrospectively create a term of years, but the parties may agree to regulate their relationship as if the term had existed from the 'commencement date': see Roberts v Church Comrs for England [1972] 1 QB 278 at 285, [1971] 3 All ER 703 at 707, CA, per Stamp LJ; Bradshaw v Pawley [1979] 3 All ER 273 at 279, [1980] 1 WLR 10 at 16-17 per Megarry V-C (where it was held that the lease had validly reserved, or the tenant had effectively covenanted to pay, rent in respect of a period prior to the execution of the lease). A frequently used method for indicating that the rent is not to be payable as from the earlier date expressed as the commencement date for the term is to add to the reddendum a phrase such as 'the first payment of £... [(being a proportionate part of the [quarterly] payment)] to be made on ...' (where the amount to be specified will be the amount of one [quarter]'s rent or an apportioned part of it if rent is to commence during a rent period).

10 Hopkins v Helmore (1838) 8 Ad & El 463. If necessary for the purpose of making up the full payment, one day of payment will be reckoned after the expiration of the term: Hopkins v Helmore supra.

11 Re Aspinall, Aspinall v Aspinall [1961] Ch 526, [1961] 2 All ER 751; Dibble v Bowater (1853) 2 E & B 564; Duppa v Mayo (1669) 1 Wms Saund 275 at 287 (see 1 Wms Saund (1871 Edn) 455); Cutting v Derby (1776) 2 Wm Bl 1075 at 1077. Cf Tinckler v Prentice (1812) 4 Taunt 549. Rent falling due on a Sunday may be lawfully paid on that day, and is therefore in arrear on Monday: Child v Edwards [1909] 2 KB 753; and see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARAS 324, 340.

12 See PARA 264 post.

13 Re Aspinall, Aspinall v Aspinall [1961] Ch 526, [1961] 2 All ER 751. Accordingly, where the testator died on the morning of a rent day, neither the rents due in advance on that day nor the rents then due in arrear had accrued before the testator died, so that they fell to be treated as income of his estate, subject to apportionment: Re Aspinall, Aspinall v Aspinall supra. By that apportionment, as regards rent due in advance one day's rent only, and, as regards the rent payable in arrear, all but one day's rent, fell to be treated as having accrued during the testator's lifetime: Re Aspinall, Aspinall v Aspinall supra.

14 Lord Cromwel v Andrews (1583) Cro Eliz 15. The payment is voluntary unless there is an express obligation: Clun's Case (1613) 10 Co Rep 127a.

15 De Nicholls v Saunders (1870) LR 5 CP 589 at 594. At law the payment did not save a condition for re-entry on non-payment on the day (Lord Cromwel v Andrews (1583) Cro Eliz 15), but in equity it was a defence to any further claim in respect of the rent by the person who had received it (Lord Rockingham v Penrice (1711) 1 P Wms 177; and see 1 Swan 345 note (a); Nash v Gray (1861) 2 F & F 391).

16 Thus, where the landlord has mortgaged his reversion, a prepayment to him of rent does not discharge the tenant if before the rent day he has notice of the mortgage and receives a demand for payment of the rent to the mortgagee (De Nicholls v Saunders (1870) LR 5 CP 589 at 594); but so much of the prepayment of rent as becomes due as rent prior to the giving of notice by the mortgagee is irrecoverable by the mortgagee (Cook v Guerra (1872) LR 7 CP 132). Similarly, a payment of rent to a judgment debtor after registration of a writ of elegit by the judgment creditor with notice to the tenant did not discharge the tenant: Lord Ashburton v Nocton [1915] 1 Ch 274, CA. A mortgagee as a purchaser is affected by constructive notice of the tenant's rights, and is, therefore, bound by any agreement made prior to the mortgage as to the lease between the mortgagor and tenant, such as an agreement to commute the rent by one lump sum payment: Green v Rheinberg (1911) 104 LT 149, CA; and see Grace Rymer Investments Ltd v Waite [1958] Ch 831, [1958] 2 All ER 777, CA. As to the circumstances giving rise to the mortgagee's right to receive rent see MORTGAGE vol 77 (2010) PARAS 417-422.

260. Requirement to notify long leaseholders that rent is due.

A tenant<sup>1</sup> under a long lease of a dwelling<sup>2</sup> is not liable to make a payment of rent<sup>3</sup> under the lease unless the landlord<sup>4</sup> has given him a notice relating to the payment<sup>5</sup>; and the date on which he is liable to make the payment is that specified in the notice<sup>6</sup>. The notice must specify:

- 409 (1) the amount of the payment;
- 410 (2) the date on which the tenant is liable to make it; and
- 411 (3) if different from that date, the date on which he would have been liable to make it in accordance with the lease, and must contain any such further information as may be prescribed<sup>7</sup>. The date on which the tenant is liable to make the payment must not be:

- 412 (a) either less than 30 days or more than 60 days after the day on which the notice is given; or
- 413 (b) before that on which he would have been liable to make it in accordance with the lease<sup>8</sup>.

If the date on which the tenant is liable to make the payment is after that on which he would have been liable to make it in accordance with the lease, any provisions of the lease relating to non-payment or late payment of rent have effect accordingly<sup>9</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 369 note 8 post (definition applied by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 166(9)).

2 For these purposes, 'long lease of a dwelling' does not include (1) a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (business tenancies: see PARA 701 et seq post) applies; (2) a tenancy of an agricultural holding within the meaning of the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986 in relation to which that Act applies (see PARA 806 post); or (3) a farm business tenancy within the meaning of the Agricultural Tenancies Act 1995 (see PARA 807 post): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 166(8). 'Long lease' has the meaning given by ss 76, 77 (see PARA 371 post) and 'dwelling' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 2 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 166(9).

3 For these purposes 'rent' does not include (1) a service charge (within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 post); or (2) an administration charge (within the meaning of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11 Pt 1 (paras 1-6) (see PARAS 355-358 post): s 166(7).

4 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 369 note 8 post (definition applied by ibid s 166(9)).

5 The notice (1) must be in the prescribed form; and (2) may be sent by post: ibid s 166(5). If the notice is sent by post, it must be addressed to a tenant at the dwelling unless he has notified the landlord in writing of a different address in England and Wales at which he wishes to be given notices under s 166 (in which case it must be addressed to him there): s 166(6). For the prescribed form of notice see the Landlord and Tenant (Notice of Rent) (England) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3096, reg 2(2), Schedule; the Landlord and Tenant (Notice of Rent) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1355, reg 3(2), Schedule. In Wales, a form substantially to the like effect may be used: see the Landlord and Tenant (Notice of Rent) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1355, reg 3(2).

6 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 166(1).

7 Ibid s 166(2). A notice under s 166(1) must contain, in addition to the information specified in accordance with heads (1)-(2) in the text and, if applicable, head (3) in the text: (1) the name of the leaseholder to whom the notice is given; (2) the period to which the rent demanded is attributable; (3) the name of the person to whom payment is to be made, and the address for payment; (4) the name of the landlord by whom the notice is given and, if not specified pursuant to head (3) supra, his address; and (5) the information provided in the notes to the prescribed form (as to which see note 5 supra): Landlord and Tenant (Notice of Rent) (England) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3096, reg 2(1); Landlord and Tenant (Notice of Rent) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1355, reg 3(1).

261. By whom rent is payable.

In general the landlord is not bound to receive the rent if it is tendered by a stranger to the contract of tenancy who has no interest in the land<sup>1</sup>; but the payment or tender of rent by the tenant's spouse or civil partner, where that spouse or civil partner has a right of occupation<sup>2</sup>, is as good as if made or done by the spouse or civil partner who is tenant<sup>3</sup>. Payment to the landlord by a third person of the amount of rent due does not discharge the tenant, unless it is made by the payer as agent for the tenant and with his prior authority or subsequent ratification<sup>4</sup>; but payment by an assignee of the term does discharge the tenant<sup>5</sup>. Where the survivor of joint tenants succeeds to the whole beneficial interest in the lease, he becomes liable for the whole rent and may not compel the deceased tenant's executors to contribute<sup>6</sup>.

262. To whom rent is payable.

The rent is payable either to the landlord, or to his agent expressly or impliedly authorised to receive it<sup>1</sup>. An authority is implied where the landlord has held out the person in question as his agent to receive the rent<sup>2</sup>, as, for example, by recognising from time to time the validity of his receipts<sup>3</sup>; and the tenant is entitled to continue payment in pursuance of that authority until he has notice that it is withdrawn<sup>4</sup>. On the landlord's death the rent is payable to his personal representatives until the reversion becomes vested by their consent or by conveyance in the person to whom it devolves<sup>5</sup>.

Where the landlords are joint tenants, any one of them may sue and give a receipt for the entire rent<sup>6</sup>, and, on the death of any, the entire rent is due to the survivors<sup>7</sup>.

On an assignment of the reversion the assignee becomes entitled to receive the rent, but the tenant is not prejudiced if he continues to pay it to the assignor until he has received notice of the assignment<sup>8</sup>. Without assigning the reversion, the landlord may assign the right to receive the rent, and a written direction to the tenant to pay the rent to the assignee, if given for valuable consideration, operates as an equitable assignment<sup>9</sup>, but in the absence of consideration it is a mere authority, revocable on notice to the tenant<sup>10</sup>. An assignee of the rent without the reversion may sue for it<sup>11</sup>, but may not recover it by distress except in the assignor's name<sup>12</sup>. Where rent is due to a judgment debtor, the judgment creditor may obtain the right to receive it by a third party debt order<sup>13</sup>, or by procuring the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution whether or not a charge has been imposed on the judgment debtor's land<sup>14</sup>.

Where rent has been paid to a person not entitled to the reversion, the tenant may recover it from that person<sup>15</sup>, or the reversioner may at his option himself sue the person receiving the rent in a claim for money had and received<sup>16</sup>. Payment of rent may, however, estop the tenant from disputing the title of the person to whom it is paid<sup>17</sup>.

1 See Goodland v Blewith (1808) 1 Camp 477. Even though the principal's name is not disclosed at the time of payment, if the rent is paid over to him, the payment is evidence as against the tenant of his title: Hitchings v Thompson (1850) 5 Exch 50. Where a tenant has paid direct to the landlord for a long period, a request to pay an agent does no more than provide an alternative method of payment: Beevers v Mason (1978) 37 P & CR 452, CA.

UPDATE

262 To whom rent is payable

NOTE 14--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(4) TIME AND MODE OF PAYMENT/263. Payment in cash or by cheque or notes.

263. Payment in cash or by cheque or notes.

Rent reserved in money is payable in cash<sup>1</sup> on the date appointed for payment ('the rent day'); and, where a written lease stipulates for payment of rent in advance, evidence of an antecedent oral agreement by the landlord to accept a bill of exchange is not admissible<sup>2</sup>. A subsequent agreement by the landlord to accept payment by cheque as substituted satisfaction for performance of the tenant's obligation to pay cash will, however, prevent the landlord from relying upon the non-payment of the rent in cash on the rent day if the cheque is subsequently honoured<sup>3</sup>. As rent constitutes a debt of equal degree with a specialty debt<sup>4</sup>, it is not discharged by the landlord's act in accepting a bill of exchange or promissory note; such a bill or note is a conditional payment only, that is to say, it does not operate as satisfaction until it is paid, in the absence of specific agreement to the contrary<sup>5</sup>. An agent who is not authorised to receive payment of rent by cheque is not justified in doing so if the circumstances are such that the landlord will be prejudiced should the cheque be dishonoured, and in such a case the agent is liable to pay to the landlord the amount of the dishonoured cheque<sup>6</sup>.

As the bill or note is no satisfaction, a judgment recovered on it is no satisfaction until it results in payment: Drake v Mitchell (1803) 3 East 251 at 259. As to the effect of the landlord discounting the bill, and as to the presumption raised by his accepting a bill or note of an agreement to suspend his remedy by distress see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 973. A subsequent agreement that no rent is due discharges the note: Howell v Lewis (1836) 7 C & P 566.

6 Papé v Westacott [1894] 1 QB 272, CA. In general the acceptance of the cheque does not prejudice the landlord, as his remedies for the rent remain, but it is otherwise if under the circumstances the remedy by distress has become unavailable. As to payment by cheque generally see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARAS 951-955; and as to agents generally see AGENCY vol 1 (2008) PARA 1 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(4) TIME AND MODE OF PAYMENT/264. Payment of rent by post.

264. Payment of rent by post.

Ordinarily, if rent is remitted by post, it is done at the tenant's risk. If, however, the landlord has expressly or impliedly authorised that method of payment then, as the postal operator transmits the letter as the landlord's agent in such circumstances, the landlord assumes the risk<sup>1</sup> and payment is then deemed to be made at the date of posting<sup>2</sup>; but the tenant must exercise due care in addressing and posting the rent<sup>3</sup>. The agreement of the landlord that he will accept substituted performance of the tenant's obligation to pay the rent in cash on the rent day by the tenant posting a cheque to the landlord for the amount of the rent will be readily inferred from an established usage between the parties<sup>4</sup>, or from a request by the landlord for payment by post, even if that request is not complied with strictly<sup>5</sup>. In such a case the rent is paid, subject to the cheque being honoured on presentation, when the cheque is posted but, if the landlord does not present the cheque, the obligation to pay is not discharged<sup>6</sup>.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(4) TIME AND MODE OF PAYMENT/265. Payment by standing order or electronic transfer.

265. Payment by standing order or electronic transfer.

The landlord and tenant may agree that payment of rent may be made by standing order to the landlord's bank. Further, it is possible for a landlord to waive his right to accept cash<sup>1</sup> by directing the tenant to pay the rent into his bank account<sup>2</sup>. Where this occurs, payment is made when the money is transferred to the landlord's account and not when the landlord's bank notifies the landlord that payment has been made<sup>3</sup>.

Where the tenant transfers money to the landlord's account, it will not be taken as having been accepted if it is returned to the tenant as quickly as possible<sup>4</sup>; thus, a landlord may avoid waiving a breach of covenant by returning the money promptly so that objectively considered the tenant would not suppose that the rent had been accepted<sup>5</sup>. However, if the landlord does not return the money, it will normally be inferred that the payment has been accepted<sup>6</sup>.

The same principles will apply where payment is made by means of electronic transfer.

(5) PERMITTED DEDUCTIONS

266. Authorised deductions.

If the landlord brings a claim for rent, and a claim by the tenant to a sum of money (whether of an ascertained amount or not) is relied upon as a defence to the whole or part of the landlord's claim, the tenant's claim may be included in the defence and set off against the landlord's claim, whether as a counterclaim or an additional claim<sup>1</sup>. The claim may be set off only if it is connected with the same transaction or property, but it is not necessary for the claim to have arisen under the lease itself; thus a claim for unliquidated and unascertained damages for breaches of a building agreement which was antecedent to the lease under which the rent was payable was allowed to be set off against the tenant's admitted liability for rent under the lease<sup>2</sup>. A provision in a lease that the rent should be paid 'without any deductions' is too ambiguous to exclude the tenant's equitable right to set off unliquidated claims for damages for the landlord's breach of covenants against rent due<sup>3</sup>; but a provision expressly excluding the right of set-off is effective<sup>4</sup>.

Where, however, the landlord is exercising his remedy of distress, the right of set-off is not recognised<sup>5</sup>. The tenant is nevertheless entitled to credit for sums which he is expressly authorised to deduct from the rent, either by the terms of the lease<sup>6</sup> or by statute<sup>7</sup>, and for payments made to the landlord, or on his behalf and with his express or implied authority; and the landlord may distrain only for the balance. Where a tenant has expended money upon repairs which it is the landlord's duty to carry out, the tenant may deduct or set off the cost of the repairs from the rent<sup>8</sup>, and possibly also resist any attempt to distrain in respect of the amount so expended<sup>9</sup>.

Where the tenant has paid on the landlord's behalf sums which it was the landlord's duty to pay and which are charged on the land, so that failure to pay them would prevent the tenant's peaceable possession of the property, the tenant is considered as authorised by the landlord to make those payments and to treat them as made in satisfaction or part satisfaction of the rent. Thus, an undertenant is entitled to deduct from his rent arrears of rent due to the superior landlord which have been demanded from him and which he has paid<sup>10</sup>. There need not be a threat of immediate distress, and after actual payment the deduction may be made notwithstanding that the superior landlord has allowed time for payment. It is sufficient that the superior landlord has demanded the rent and is entitled to distrain<sup>11</sup>. The rule is the same in the case of a rentcharge enforceable by distress which the tenant has paid on demand, notwithstanding that there was no personal liability on the landlord to pay it<sup>12</sup>. In such a case it is the landlord's duty to make the payment in order to protect the tenant. If the landlord leaves the tenant to pay, that payment is treated as being a payment of so much of the rent due or growing due to him as the immediate landlord, and he is entitled to distrain only for the balance<sup>13</sup>. The same rule applies in the case of a mortgage where the mortgagor has granted a lease which is not binding on the mortgagee and the tenant pays rent to the mortgagee who is threatening to assert his legal rights<sup>14</sup>; but there must have been an actual payment on demand to the mortgagee and not merely notice to pay<sup>15</sup>.

1 Set-off may also be available against the present landlord in respect of damages due for a former landlord's breach of repairing obligations: see eg Muscat v Smith [2003] EWCA Civ 962, [2003] 1 WLR 2853, [2003] All ER (D) 192 (Jul) (tenant entitled to set off in equity against present landlord's claim for assigned rent any damages due to him for his former landlord's breach of repairing obligations, approving Lotteryking Ltd v AMEC Properties Ltd [1995] 2 EGLR 13, [1995] NPC 55); but cf Edlington Properties Ltd v JH Fenner & Co Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 403, [2006] 3 All ER 1200, [2006] 1 WLR 1583 (tenant's right to claim damages against a predecessor in title of the landlord, whether or not arising under a covenant in the lease, is a personal right; claim by the tenant against the landlord for damages for defective construction of the building could not be set off against the rent due to the assignee of the reversion for periods after assignment). In Reeves v Pope [1914] 2 KB 284, CA the defendant in an action for rent by the assignee of the original landlord was not permitted to set off a claim for damages for breach of covenant by the original landlord, the covenant being held to be a personal one, and the right claimed, therefore, was not an interest in the land. The distinction has, however, been emphatically disapproved: Sapsford v Fletcher (1792) 4 Term Rep 511 at 513 per Lord Kenyon CJ. As there is no set-off in distress, it follows that the tenant cannot obtain an injunction against a distress for the full amount: see Townrow v Benson (1818) 3 Madd 203; Pratt v Keith (1864) 33 LJ Ch 528; and see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 986.

6 Dallman v King (1837) 4 Bing NC 105. There must be an agreement to allow deduction from the rent; it is not sufficient that the landlord has agreed to allow a specified sum for repairs: Graham v Tate (1813) 1 M & S 609; Davies v Stacey (1840) 12 Ad & El 506. The reservation of rent often expresses that it is to be free from specified deductions, such as taxes, charges and impositions (Giles v Hooper (1690) Carth 135), or from deductions generally, and the tenant is then debarred from making deductions which he could make in the absence of an agreement (Bradbury v Wright (1781) 2 Doug KB 624). It is the same where the lease reserves a net rent (Bennett v Womack (1828) 7 B & C 627 at 629), save as regards deductions, such as income tax, which the tenant cannot abandon.

267. Income tax, rates and council tax.

Where payment of rent chargeable under Schedule A<sup>1</sup> or as the profits of a United Kingdom property business<sup>2</sup> is made, in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, directly to a person whose usual place of abode is outside the United Kingdom, the payer is normally required to deduct and account for tax at the basic rate<sup>3</sup>. Where the non-resident makes a successful application for payment of gross income, the tenant will be given notice by the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs specifying the date from which that obligation ceases to apply<sup>4</sup>.

A tenant who has paid sums on account of rates which the landlord is liable to pay may deduct those sums from the rent<sup>5</sup>.

If the tax is not so deducted when an instalment of rent is paid, the tax cannot be set off against or deducted from a later instalment: Tenbry Investments Ltd v Peugeot Talbot Motor Co Ltd [1993] 1 EGLR 71. ## 268. Local authorities' improvement expenses.

A local authority may recover from the owner of premises certain expenses incurred by it in exercise of its powers under the Public Health Act 1936<sup>1</sup>. The local authority may by order declare that those expenses are payable, together with interest, by instalments<sup>2</sup>. Any such instalments and interest are then recoverable from the owner or occupier, but the occupier may deduct sums paid by him in this way from the rent due from him for the premises<sup>3</sup>. The statutory right of deduction may be overridden or modified by covenant between the landlord and the tenant<sup>4</sup>.

Provision is also made for the recovery from occupiers as well as owners of the expenses of paving and lighting private streets<sup>5</sup>. If the occupier holds the premises at a rent not less than the rack rent<sup>6</sup>, he may deduct from the rent an amount equal to three-quarters of any sum paid by him on account of those expenses<sup>7</sup>; and, if he holds the premises at a rent less than the rack rent, he may deduct from the rent such proportion of an amount equal to three-quarters of the sum paid by him as his rent bears to the rack rent<sup>8</sup>. If the landlord himself holds the premises under a lease for a term of which less than 20 years is unexpired, he may make a corresponding deduction from the rent payable by him<sup>9</sup>.

1 See the Public Health Act 1936 s 291(1); and ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA 123. The power of recovery so conferred (1) applies to expenses incurred under any enactment repealed by that Act or under an agreement with the local authority (see s 291(1)); (2) is applied to expenses incurred by local authorities in the destruction of rats and mice (see the Prevention of Damage by Pests Act 1949 s 7(2) (as amended)); and ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 46 (2010) PARA 871; and (3) is applied to expenses incurred by sewerage undertakers (see the Water Industry Act 1991 ss 107(5), 109(3), 160(2); and ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 46 (2010) PARAS 1025, 1042, 1043). The Public Health Act 1936 in general now applies to Greater London: see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 4.

2 See ibid s 291(2); and ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA 123.

3 See ibid s 291(2). An occupier is not to be required to pay at any one time any sum in excess of the amount due from him on account of rent: see s 291(2) proviso.

5 See eg the Highways Act 1980 s 212(1); and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 159.

6 For these purposes, 'rack rent', in relation to any premises, means a rent which is not less than two-thirds of the rent at which the premises might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free from all usual tenant's rates and taxes, and deducting therefrom the probable average annual cost of the repairs, insurance and other expenses (if any) necessary to maintain the same in a state to command such rent: ibid s 291(1) (definition amended by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993).

7 See the Highways Act 1980 s 212(4), Sch 13 para 1(a); and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 159. Schedule 13 also applies in respect of sums recoverable from occupiers under ss 152, 153 (as amended) and ss 237, 305: see HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 943.

8 See ibid Sch 13 para 1(b); and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 943.

9 See ibid Sch 13 paras 2, 3; and HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 943. The right of deduction may be modified by covenants between the landlord and the tenant: see the text and note 4 supra.

Where the amount of compensation due to the tenant of an agricultural holding, whether under the Agricultural Holdings Act 1986<sup>1</sup> or under a former enactment relating to such holdings, or under custom<sup>2</sup> or agreement, has been ascertained before the landlord distrains for rent, the tenant may set off the amount of the compensation against the rent, and the landlord may distrain only for the balance<sup>3</sup>.

A tenant of trade or business premises may deduct from the rent any sum payable to him by the landlord by way of compensation for improvements<sup>4</sup>.

The right of a protected or statutory tenant<sup>5</sup> to recover overpayments of rent is exercisable by means of deduction from rent payable<sup>6</sup>.

(6) SUSPENSION OF RENT

270. Suspension of rent clauses.

Because the tenant, in principle, remains liable for the rent even though the premises have become unusable<sup>1</sup>, a commercial lease will normally contain a provision dealing with the suspension of rent in the event of damage or destruction. Such clauses commonly provide that only the rent is suspended, in which case other payments due to the landlord under the lease, such as service charge payments and contributions to the insurance premiums, will continue to be payable<sup>2</sup>. A suspension of rent clause will be strictly construed<sup>3</sup>.

A proviso for the suspension of rent will not be implied even where the tenant pays the cost of insurance<sup>4</sup>.

It is recommended best practice that if the premises are so damaged by an uninsured risk as to prevent occupation, the tenant should be allowed to terminate the lease unless the landlord agrees to reinstate at his own cost<sup>5</sup>.

271. Eviction.

The tenant is not liable for rent accruing due after<sup>1</sup> he has been evicted from the premises either by the landlord, or by a person lawfully claiming by title paramount<sup>2</sup>, so long as the eviction continues<sup>3</sup>.

To constitute an eviction for this purpose, it is not necessary that there should be an actual physical expulsion from any part of the premises. Any wrongful act of a permanent character done by the landlord or his agent with the intention of depriving the tenant of the enjoyment of the demised premises, or any part of them, will operate as an eviction<sup>4</sup>. Thus, there is an eviction if the landlord enters and uses the premises, the tenant remaining in possession<sup>5</sup>, although a mere trespass by the landlord is not sufficient<sup>6</sup> nor is an entry by the landlord merely to secure the premises<sup>7</sup>. It seems that it will be an eviction if the landlord induces the subtenants to leave by notice to quit, so that the premises are left unoccupied<sup>8</sup>.

1 The tenant remains liable for rent accrued due before the eviction, and so, in resisting a claim for rent, he must show that it accrued due after the eviction: Boodle v Cambell (1844) 7 Man & G 386; Selby v Browne (1845) 7 QB 620; Newport v Hardy (1845) 2 Dow & L 921. If the landlord brings proceedings for a forfeiture, he cannot recover rent accruing after the issue of the writ; his remedy is in damages for the detention of the premises (Birch v Wright (1786) 1 Term Rep 378; Jones v Carter (1846) 15 M & W 718); and see PARA 285 note 4 post. An eviction by the landlord, in addition to stopping the rent, prevents him from forfeiting the lease for non-performance of covenants (Pellatt v Boosey (1862) 31 LJCP 281), but it does not discharge the tenant from his covenants other than for payment of rent, or put an end to the tenancy (Morrison v Chadwick (1849) 7 CB 266; Newton v Allin (1841) 1 QB 518).

4 Crown Lands Comrs v Page [1960] 2 QB 274, [1960] 2 All ER 726, CA (requisitioning of premises held under a Crown lease held not to constitute eviction and it was said that for there to be an eviction there had to be an element of wrongfulness; but as to the extent to which the Protection from Eviction Act 1977 now binds the Crown see s 10; and PARA 653 post); and see Upton v Townend (1855) 17 CB 30; Henderson v Mears (1859) 28 LJQB 305; Baynton v Morgan (1888) 22 QBD 74, CA; Wheeler v Stevenson (1860) 6 H & N 155; notes to Salmon v Smith (1669) 1 Wms Saund 202. The alteration of tolls after a demise of them does not constitute an eviction (Harris v Morrice (1842) 10 M & W 260), nor does interference by the landlord with an easement (Williams v Hayward (1859) 1 E & E 1040).

272. Abandonment and reletting.

The mere abandonment of the premises by the tenant does not affect his liability to pay rent<sup>1</sup>. If, however, the landlord subsequently enters and uses the premises for his own purposes, this is equivalent to an eviction<sup>2</sup>, and he cannot recover rent subsequently accruing due<sup>3</sup>; and thus, if the landlord relets the premises to another tenant who goes into possession, this operates as an eviction of the previous tenant, from whom the landlord may not recover any rent which falls due after the reletting<sup>4</sup>, even in respect of a subsequent period when the premises are unoccupied<sup>5</sup>. The landlord may, however, protect himself by reletting on the tenant's account, and giving notice to him accordingly<sup>6</sup>; and it is no eviction if he merely enters for the purpose of protecting the house<sup>7</sup>, or puts in a caretaker for the same purpose<sup>8</sup>, or puts up a notice for reletting<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the special position of a statutory tenant who vacates without giving notice see PARA 840 post.

2 Alternatively, the landlord's action may be construed as his acceptance of an offer by the tenant to surrender the premises.

273. Eviction under title paramount.

In order to constitute an eviction by a person claiming under title paramount, it is not necessary that the tenant should be put out of possession, or that proceedings should be brought<sup>1</sup>. A threat of eviction is sufficient; and, if the tenant, in consequence of that threat, attorns to the claimant, he may set this up as an eviction by way of defence to a claim for rent<sup>2</sup>, subject to his proving the evictor's title<sup>3</sup>. There is no eviction, however, if the tenant gives up possession voluntarily<sup>4</sup>.

274. Effect of eviction under other titles; frustration.

If the tenant is evicted by some person other than his landlord or a person claiming under title paramount, he remains liable for the rent during the period of his eviction. Thus, he remains liable if he is expelled by a trespasser or enemy occupation<sup>1</sup>, or if the Crown requisitions the premises in pursuance of statutory powers or in the exercise of the prerogative in time of war<sup>2</sup>, or if part of the premises is demolished by a local authority as a dangerous structure<sup>3</sup>; for in none of these cases is there eviction by title paramount. An alien tenant under a lease made before the outbreak of hostilities remains liable for rent accruing after that date, even if he becomes an alien enemy<sup>4</sup> or if, as an alien enemy, he is prohibited by Order in Council from residing personally in the premises<sup>5</sup>.

The contractual doctrine of frustration can apply to any type of lease; but the circumstances in which the doctrine applies are exceedingly rare<sup>6</sup>. For the doctrine to apply there must have occurred an event such that no substantial use of the demised premises as would have been permitted by the lease and as was in the contemplation of the parties when the lease was made remains possible to the tenant after the frustrating event<sup>7</sup>.

It was suggested in Sturcke v SW Edwards Ltd (1971) 23 P & CR 185 that the doctrine of frustration may be applied to particular covenants in leases; and in John Lewis Properties plc v Viscount Chelsea (1993) 67 P & CR 120, [1993] 2 EGLR 77 it was held that an obligation to build in a lease was suspended because of supervening impossibility so as not to give rise to a forfeiture. All earlier decisions must be reconsidered in the light of National Carriers Ltd v Panalpina (Northern) Ltd supra. Cf Total Oil Great Britain Ltd v Thompson Garages (Biggin Hill) Ltd [1972] 1 QB 318, [1971] 3 All ER 1226, CA (covenant held not to be capable of discharge by repudiation so long as the lease itself subsisted). Since a contract will not be frustrated when an event foreseen and provided for by the parties occurs, it may be that an express proviso in a lease for the abatement of the rent will defeat some attempts to apply the doctrine of frustration.

275. Effect on rent of damage by fire.

In the absence of express stipulation, the destruction of the premises by fire does not necessarily suspend the tenant's liability to pay rent<sup>1</sup>. This is so notwithstanding that there is a covenant to repair by the tenant which contains an express exception of damage by fire<sup>2</sup>. Where the landlord has the duty to insure, whether by covenant or as a matter of practice, the lease often contains a proviso for suspending the rent while the premises are uninhabitable by reason of fire<sup>3</sup>. Where, however, the premises are completely destroyed, it would seem that the doctrine of frustration may be applied to the lease so that the tenant is freed from any further liability to pay rent<sup>4</sup>.

It is recommended best practice that if the premises are so damaged by an uninsured risk as to prevent occupation, the tenant should be allowed to terminate the lease unless the landlord agrees to reinstate at his own cost<sup>5</sup>.

1 See Matthey v Curling [1922] 2 AC 180 (tenant liable on covenant to reinstate); Baker v Holtzapffell (1811) 4 Taunt 45; Izon v Gorton (1839) 5 Bing NC 501; Marshall v Schofield & Co (1882) 52 LQB 58, CA; Monk v Cooper (1727) 2 Stra 763. For this reason, commercial leases will usually contain a clause providing for the suspension of rent in such circumstances: see PARA 270 ante.

2 Belfour v Weston (1786) 1 Term Rep 310; Hare v Groves (1796) 3 Anst 687. If there is no demise for a term certain, however, the rent may be treated as accruing from day to day, so that it will cease if the premises are rendered uninhabitable by fire: see Packer v Gibbins (1841) 1 QB 421 (furnished lodgings).

3 Manchester Bonded Warehouse Co Ltd v Carr (1880) 5 CPD 507; but cf Leeds v Cheetham (1827) 1 Sim 146; Holtzapffell v Baker (1811) 18 Ves 115. A covenant to pay rent, damage by fire excepted, entitles the tenant to an abatement of rent only in proportion to the damage suffered (Bennett v Ireland (1858) EB & E 326); and an exception freeing the tenant from liability for rent if the premises are damaged or destroyed by fire, flood, storm, tempest or other inevitable accident is not wide enough to absolve the tenant from liability for rent while the landlord is executing repairs under a covenant to do so (Saner v Bilton (1878) 7 ChD 815).

276. Premises becoming uninhabitable.

Unless the lease contains express provision to the contrary<sup>1</sup> and with certain statutory exceptions<sup>2</sup>, the tenant takes the demised premises subject to any defects existing in them at the time of the letting, and to any events which subsequently affect their value<sup>3</sup>. Hence, it has been the general rule that the rent continues to be payable notwithstanding that, in the case of a dwelling house or flat, it is at the time of letting<sup>4</sup>, or subsequently<sup>5</sup> becomes, unfit for habitation<sup>6</sup>; or, in the case of land near the seashore, that it is of no value<sup>7</sup>; or, in the case of agricultural land, that it is unsuitable for the intended use<sup>8</sup>; or that, by the landlord's neglect of an obligation to repair, the premises have become useless to the tenant<sup>9</sup>, although the tenant may have a claim against the landlord for breach of the landlord's covenant<sup>10</sup>. If, however, the premises are unfit by reason of war damage, the tenant may, subject to certain conditions, disclaim the lease<sup>11</sup>.

Certain types of physical catastrophe<sup>12</sup> or other supervening events which could not have been in the contemplation of the parties may, in exceptional circumstances, frustrate the lease so that rent is no longer payable<sup>13</sup>. It is recommended best practice that if the premises are so damaged by an uninsured risk as to prevent occupation, the tenant should be allowed to terminate the lease unless the landlord agrees to reinstate at his own cost<sup>14</sup>.

6 If, however, the cause of the defect is a failure by the landlord to fulfil repairing obligations, then if those breaches are severe enough to vitiate the central purpose of the letting the tenant can bring the tenancy to an end by accepting the repudiatory conduct of the landlord as putting an end to the contract of letting: Hussein v Mehman [1992] 2 EGLR 87, county court, approved and applied in Nynehead Developments Ltd v RH Fibreboard Containers Ltd [1999] 1 EGLR 7. ## (7) APPORTIONMENT OF RENT

278. Apportionment in respect of time.

Subject to any express agreement to the contrary<sup>1</sup>, rent, whether reserved or made payable under an instrument in writing or otherwise, is considered as accruing from day to day and is apportionable in respect of time accordingly<sup>2</sup>.

The apportionment does not accelerate the time for payment of the apportioned part. In the case of a continuing rent, the apportioned part of any such rent becomes payable when the entire portion of which it forms a part becomes due and payable, and not before<sup>3</sup>; and, in the case of a rent determined by re-entry, death or otherwise, it becomes payable when the next entire portion of the rent would have been payable if the same had not so determined, and not before<sup>3</sup>. Apportionment is, however, allowed only of rent accruing due at the date of the event which necessitates the apportionment. Sums made payable in advance, and already due before that event, are not apportioned<sup>4</sup>. Thus, where a forfeiture is effected in the middle of a quarter, the whole quarter's rent due on the previous quarter day is payable<sup>5</sup>. Variable rents are apportionable on a time basis in the same way as fixed rent<sup>6</sup>.

On an assignment of the term between two quarter days the assignor alone is liable to the landlord for rent in respect of the period down to the date of assignment and the assignee is liable only for the rent referable to the period after the date of the assignment<sup>7</sup>. If the resolution of a rent review is delayed with the result that arrears of rent become payable only after an assignment, the arrears are payable by the person in whom the lease was vested during the period to which they relate<sup>7</sup>. The same is true if a lease is surrendered before an outstanding review is resolved<sup>8</sup>.

Persons entitled to the apportioned parts of the rent have respectively the same remedies for recovering those parts, when payable, as they would have had for recovering the entire portion of rent if entitled to it respectively; but the tenant of the land is not to be resorted to for any such apportioned part forming part of an entire or continuing rent specifically. Where the entire or continuing rent, including the apportioned part, has been recovered by a person other than the personal representative of a deceased person, the apportioned part is recoverable from that other person by the personal representative<sup>9</sup>.

An apportionment may be made, not only as between the persons entitled to the rent, but also as against a tenant whose liability for rent ceases<sup>10</sup>, or changes its character<sup>11</sup>, between two rent days; and after the day when the entire portion of rent has, or would have, fallen due, the proportionate part is recoverable against the tenant as rent due under the lease<sup>12</sup>.

Consequently a tenant who surrenders his lease between two rent days is liable for rent up to the surrender; and a tenant on whose property a landlord lawfully re-enters is liable for rent up to the re-entry<sup>13</sup>, but he is not liable if he is wrongfully evicted<sup>14</sup>.

279. Apportionment in respect of estate.

Rent is apportionable in respect of the demised premises, either because the reversion has been severed so that different portions of the rent are payable to different persons, or because the tenant has ceased to be in possession of the whole of the demised premises.

Rent is apportionable upon a severance of the reversion, whether this takes place by the act of the parties or by an act of law<sup>1</sup>. Thus it is apportionable where the reversion is severed by grant of a part to a stranger or to the tenant<sup>2</sup>, and where it is severed on the landlord's death<sup>3</sup>. If the apportionment is to be binding on the tenant, it must be made with his consent or by judicial process<sup>4</sup>.

The rent is also apportionable where the tenant ceases to have possession of part of the demised premises, provided this is not due to unlawful eviction by the landlord. Thus it is apportionable where the tenant surrenders part of the premises<sup>5</sup>, or where the landlord re-enters upon part for a forfeiture under a special condition for re-entry allowing this to be done<sup>6</sup>, or where the tenant is evicted from part by a person lawfully claiming under title paramount<sup>7</sup>, or where a part of the premises is destroyed by an inundation of the sea<sup>8</sup>, or where on the termination of a long lease of residential premises at a low rent, a part only of the premises qualifies for protection under Part I of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>9</sup>. The tenant claiming apportionment on any of these grounds must prove the apportioned value of the land withdrawn from the demise<sup>10</sup>, ascertained at the date of the withdrawal<sup>11</sup>; and the right to apportionment depends upon the person claiming it being in possession of the land, whether as original tenant or as assignee<sup>12</sup>. Where the tenant has assigned the lease and is sued on his personal contract, he may possibly be liable for the whole rent, notwithstanding that the assignee has surrendered part of the premises<sup>13</sup>.

280. Unlawful eviction; inability to take possession.

There is no apportionment in favour of a landlord who unlawfully evicts the tenant from part of the demised premises, and no part of the rent is recoverable so long as the eviction continues<sup>1</sup>; nor may the landlord recover in a claim for use and occupation in respect of the part of the premises retained by the tenant<sup>2</sup>. Similarly, where the lease includes land and chattels, and the tenant is unlawfully evicted from the land, there is no apportionment<sup>3</sup>.

Where part of the premises is held by a third person rightfully claiming under a title adverse to the landlord so that the tenant cannot obtain possession, the result is the same as in the case of unlawful eviction by the landlord, and no part of the rent is recoverable<sup>4</sup>. This was formerly the case, also, where the lease was oral and part of the premises was held under a prior lease made by the same landlord, as the oral lease carried no interest in the reversion<sup>5</sup>, whereas, if the later lease was by deed, it carried the reversion in the part of the premises already let, as well as the immediate possession of the rest, and the whole rent was recoverable<sup>6</sup>; and similarly where the tenant is merely excluded from enjoyment of an easement granted in connection with the premises<sup>7</sup>. It seems, however, that an oral lease may now carry an interest in the reversion in certain circumstances and that in those circumstances the whole rent may, therefore, be recoverable<sup>8</sup>.

3 In this case there is the further reason that the rent issues wholly out of the land, and is therefore gone (Emott v Cole (1591) Cro Eliz 255; Read v Lawnse (1561) 2 Dyer 212b; and see PARA 244 ante); although this reason is not operative where the title to the land and goods is lawfully severed (Salmon v Matthews (1841) 8 M & W 827).

281. Statutory powers of apportionment of rents.

An order of apportionment of a rent reserved by a lease, or other rent or payment as is mentioned in the Inclosure Act 1854<sup>1</sup>, may be made<sup>2</sup> by the Secretary of State<sup>3</sup> or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>4</sup>, on the application of any person interested in the rent or payment, or any part thereof, or in the land in respect of which the rent or payment is payable, without the concurrence of any other person<sup>5</sup>. The Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister may in any such case, on the application of any person entitled to the rent or payment or any part thereof, require as a condition of making the order that any apportioned part of the rent or payment which does not exceed the yearly sum of £5<sup>6</sup> is to be redeemed<sup>7</sup> forthwith<sup>8</sup>. An order of apportionment may provide for the amount apportioned to any part of the land in respect of which the rent or payment is payable to be nil<sup>9</sup>.

On an application for leave to enforce a judgment or order for recovery of possession in default of payment of rent under the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951<sup>10</sup>, the court has power, where the land is held in distinct parcels under one lease, to apportion the arrears<sup>11</sup>.

There are other statutory powers of apportionment of rent under the Settled Land Act 1925<sup>12</sup>.

1     I.e. the Inclosure Act 1854 s 10 (as amended). The only rents or payments now referred to are annual or periodical fixed rents or other certain payments: see s 10 (as amended); and RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 844. 'Other certain payment' would appear to include covenanted sums, eg service charges of a fixed amount. No application for apportionment under s 10 (as amended) may be made in a case in which an application for apportionment may be entertained under the Rentcharges Act 1977 (see RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 839 et seq): Inclosure Act 1854 s 10 (amended by the Rentcharges Act 1977 s 17(1), Sch 1 para 1).

2     I.e. under the Inclosure Act 1854 ss 10-14 (as amended).

3     By virtue of the combined effect of the Transfer of Functions (Ministry of Food) Order 1955, SI 1955/554, art 3(1); the Minister of Land and Natural Resources Order 1965, SI 1965/143, art 2(1)(b), Schedule; the Ministry of Land and Natural Resources (Dissolution) Order 1967, SI 1967/156, art 2(2)(a), (5); and the Secretary of State for the Environment Order 1970, SI 1970/1681, art 2(1), the reference to the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 20(1) is now to be construed, in relation to England, as a reference to the Secretary of State. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

4     As to the transfer of functions, so far as exercisable in relation to Wales, see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

5     Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 20(1). Where the reason for the application was due to any action taken by a person other than the applicant, the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister has power, notwithstanding anything in the Inclosure Act 1854 s 14, to direct by whom and in what manner the expenses of the application or any part thereof are to be paid: Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 20(2).

6     The Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister may vary the amount by order: Housing Act 1980 s 143(2).

6     I.e. in accordance with the Rentcharges Act 1977 ss 8-10 (as amended) (see RENTCHARGES AND ANNUITIES vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 900 et seq), which, for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 20 (as amended), have effect with necessary modifications.

282. Distress.

As incident to his reversion, a landlord has a right to distrain for arrears of rent upon all goods found upon the premises<sup>1</sup>; and in certain cases the landlord may distrain on goods which are not upon the demised premises<sup>2</sup>.

No distress for the rent of any dwelling house let on a protected tenancy<sup>3</sup> or an assured tenancy<sup>4</sup> or subject to a statutory tenancy<sup>5</sup> may be levied except with the leave of the county court<sup>6</sup>.

1 As to the right to distrain and the exceptions to such right see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 901 et seq; and as to the restrictions on the right of distress after the tenant's bankruptcy or winding up of a company or the appointment of a receiver see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 1020 et seq. Where the court makes an interim order for an individual voluntary arrangement, then during the period for which it is in force no distress may be levied against the debtor or his property except with the leave of the court: see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 252(2)(b) (amended by the Insolvency Act 2000 s 3, Sch 3 paras 1, 2(b)); and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 83. The amendment made by the Insolvency Act 2000 reverses the decision in McMullen & Sons Ltd v Cerrone (1993) 66 P & CR 351, [1994] 1 EGLR 99.

2 See DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 980.

3 For the meaning of 'protected tenancy' see PARA 818 post.

4 For the meaning of 'assured tenancy' see PARA 1018 post.

5 For the meaning of 'statutory tenancy' see PARA 831 post.

6 Rent Act 1977 s 147(1); Housing Act 1988 s 19(1); and see PARAS 908, 1090 post. Nothing in those provisions applies to distress levied under the County Courts Act 1984 s 102 (as amended) (see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1353); see the Rent Act 1977 s 147(2) (amended by the County Courts Act 1984 s 148(1), Sch 2 Pt V para 67); the Housing Act 1988 s 19(2).

With respect to any application for such leave, the court has the same or similar powers with respect to adjournment, stay, suspension, postponement and otherwise as are conferred by the Rent Act 1977 s 100 (as amended) (see PARA 972 post) or the Housing Act 1988 s 9 (as amended) (see PARA 1117 post) in relation to proceedings for possession of such a dwelling house: Rent Act 1977 s 147(1); Housing Act 1988 s 19(1).

Protected occupiers and statutory tenants under the Rent (Agriculture) Act 1976 and assured agricultural occupiers under the Housing Act 1988 are similarly protected from distress without leave of the court: see PARAS 1158, 1186 respectively post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(8) RECOVERY OF RENT AND RELATED SUMS/(i) In general/283. Proceedings to recover rent.

283. Proceedings to recover rent.

Where the lease is by deed, a claim for arrears of rent may be brought<sup>1</sup> on the express covenant for payment of rent contained in the lease, or, if there is no express covenant, on the covenant implied by the reservation of rent<sup>2</sup>. Similarly, where the lease is oral, a claim may be brought on the express or implied agreement for payment of rent<sup>3</sup>. In these claims the rent is recoverable by virtue of the contract, and, except where the tenancy is at will<sup>4</sup>, it is not necessary to show that the tenant has been in occupation<sup>5</sup>. In order that a claim may be brought on a guarantee for rent, the guarantee must be in writing, and must be given to the landlord<sup>6</sup>.

A claim for arrears of rent, with or without a claim for possession, is often brought summarily<sup>7</sup>; but summary judgment may not be given in proceedings for possession of residential premises against a tenant or a person holding over after the end of his tenancy whose occupancy is protected within the meaning of the Rent Act 1977<sup>8</sup> or the Housing Act 1988<sup>9</sup>.

1 As to the effect of distress upon the remedy and the effect of obtaining judgment upon the right to distrain see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 974, 1045; as to proof for rent on bankruptcy see BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 519; and as to proof for rent on the winding up of a tenant company see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 889.

2 See PARA 249 ante. As to the recovery of interest see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 35A (as added); the County Courts Act 1984 s 69 (as amended); Allied London Investments Ltd v Hambro Life Assurance plc (1985) 50 P & CR 207, [1985] 1 EGLR 45, CA; and DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 848; and as the time limit on claims see LIMITATION PERIODS vol 68 (2008) PARA 915 et seq. The Supreme Court Act 1981 is prospectively renamed as the Senior Courts Act 1981 by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1; at the date at which this title states the law, that amendment was not in force.

Claims for recovery of rent are often coupled with a claim for possession. As to possession proceedings see PARA 656 et seq post. There is a pre-action protocol for certain possession claims based on rent arrears: see PARA 657 post.

3 Where land is occupied by the owner's relative, the usual presumption of an agreement to pay rent may be reversed: Alington v Booth (1856) 3 Jur NS 50.

4 See PARA 198 ante.

5 Bellasis v Burbrick (1697) 1 Salk 209. The rent is not payable, however, if the tenant has abstained from entering until performance by the landlord of a condition precedent, such as obtaining a licence from the superior landlord to carry on a particular trade (Brook v Fletcher (1877) 37 LT 100), or where the rent is expressed to become payable only when the landlord has complied with a condition, such as to put the premises in a state of repair (Fox v Slaughter (1919) 35 TLR 668).

6 Nash v Spencer (1896) 13 TLR 78; and see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARAS 1024, 1052 et seq.

7 See under CPR Pt 24: see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 524 et seq. When producing computer-generated rent records, it is not necessary for a deponent for a landlord to identify, in an affidavit in support of a claim for summary judgment, the particular individual who obtained the records from the computer: Commercial Union Life Assurance Co Ltd v Moustafa [1999] 2 EGLR 44, [1999] 24 EG 155.

UPDATE

283 Proceedings to recover rent

NOTE 2--Amendment in force on 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(8) RECOVERY OF RENT AND RELATED SUMS/(i) In general/284. Claim for use and occupation.

284. Claim for use and occupation.

Where there is a valid and subsisting tenancy agreement or an agreement for lease, a claim may be brought in contract for rent; but it is doubtful whether a claim for use and occupation may be brought<sup>1</sup>. A claim for use and occupation is now of practical importance only in situations where there is occupation of land without such an agreement.

Wherever the landlord has permitted the defendant to occupy his land with the intention of creating the relationship of landlord and tenant, the landlord may bring a claim for use and occupation to recover a reasonable satisfaction<sup>2</sup> for the land so occupied<sup>3</sup>. This remedy is available (and ordinarily will only be relevant) where a person has been in occupation of land without an agreement fixing the amount of rent<sup>4</sup>. The compensation is recovered as damages for breach of an implied agreement to pay for the use of the land<sup>5</sup>. The claim lies only if the tenant has actually entered on the premises with the intention of occupying as tenant<sup>6</sup> and, if he has entered without any period for the tenancy being fixed, the landlord may recover in respect of the period of occupation only<sup>7</sup>; but, if he has entered under a contract fixing the period, the compensation is recoverable in respect of the whole period, notwithstanding that the occupation has not lasted so long<sup>8</sup>. To maintain the claim the landlord must show an express or implied contract with himself<sup>9</sup>, and he must have the legal estate<sup>10</sup>. A legal title by estoppel is sufficient, as, for example, where he has let the premises to the defendant<sup>11</sup>, or where the defendant has recognised his title by payment of rent<sup>12</sup>.

1 At common law an action for use and occupation could (at least if brought in assumpsit rather than debt) be defeated by proof of an actual demise: see Beverley v Lincoln Gas Light and Coke Co (1837) 6 Ad & El 829 at 839 note (a) (assumpsit); Churchward and Blight v Ford (1857) 2 H & N 446 at 449 per Bramwell B (debt); Gibson v Kirk (1841) 1 QB 850 (debt). This rule was altered by the Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 14, which provided that proof of a parol demise or an agreement, not being by deed, reserving a certain rent was not to cause the plaintiff to be non-suited in an action on the case. The Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 14 was, however, repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1989 s 1(1), Sch 1 Pt I, presumably because the technical difficulties which it was designed to overcome no longer exist. Once again, therefore, the common law rule will apply where there is a demise by deed and in cases of parol lettings. The action lay at common law and the Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 14 (repealed) established the action but did not introduce it: Beverley v Lincoln Gas Light and Coke Co supra at 839; Gibson v Kirk supra. Thus the repeal of the Distress for Rent Act 1737 s 14 leaves the common law remedy, although the express statutory right to recover 'a reasonable satisfaction' from the occupying defendant under s 14 is now abolished by the repeal of s 14.

2 The sum as the occupation is worth: Thetford Corp'n v Tyler (1845) 8 QB 95 at 100.

3 An actual demise is not a prerequisite (Hellier v Sillcox (1850) 19 LJQB 295; Churchward and Blight v Ford (1857) 26 LJ Ex 354); but there must at least be the intention to create a demise (Morris v Tarrant [1971] 2 QB 143, [1971] 2 All ER 920).

4 The claim may lie where nothing appears except that the claimant is entitled to land which the defendant has occupied (Hellier v Sillcox (1850) 19 LJQB 295), or holds over in circumstances that point to the conclusion that he is doing so with the landlord's consent (Harding v Crethorn (1793) 1 Esp 56; Waring v King (1841) 8 M & W 571) or leaves his subtenant in occupation at the end of the term (Ibbs v Richardson (1839) 9 Ad & El 849) unless the subtenant is entitled to statutory security of tenure and the tenant has done everything possible to evict him (Reynolds v Bannerman [1922] 1 KB 719; Watson v Saunders-Roe Ltd [1947] KB 437, CA); but an accidental holding over for a short time does not make the tenant liable for the whole quarter (Gray v Bompas (1862) 11 CBNS 520); nor is the tenant liable where there is a demise on the express condition that there is to be no liability for rent until the landlord has put the premises in repair (Fox v Slaughter (1919) 35 TLR 668), or where a substituted tenant has been accepted by the landlord (Laurance v Faux (1861) 2 F & F 435), though the substituted tenant is liable (Phipps v Sculthorpe (1817) 1 B & Ald 50; cf Hyde v Moakes (1832) 5 C & P 42; Theatre Royal Drury Lane Co of Proprietors v Chapman (1843) 1 Car & Kir 14). Occupation in anticipation of an intended lease will render the occupier liable (Coggan v Warwicker (1852) 3 Car & Kir 40; Smith v Eldridge (1854) 15 CB 236; Dawes v Dowling (1874) 31 LT 65 (shooting rights)), unless the lease does not proceed through the landlord's fault (Rumball v Wright (1824) 1 C & P 589); and see PARA 200 ante.

5 Accordingly no claim will lie where the circumstances negative the implication of a contract or where the defendant is a trespasser setting up an adverse title: Phillips v Homfray (1883) 24 ChD 439 at 461, CA; A-G v De Keyser's Royal Hotel Ltd [1920] AC 508 at 532, HL; Morris v Tarrant [1971] 2 QB 143, [1971] 2 All ER 920.

6 Edge v Strafford (1831) 1 Cr & J 391; Clarke v Webb (1834) 1 Cr M & R 29; How v Kennett (1835) 3 Ad & El 659 at 666; Woolley v Watling (1837) 7 C & P 610; Lowe v Ross (1850) 5 Exch 553. Putting up a board for letting (Sullivan v Jones (1829) 3 C & P 579), or sending in persons to clean and decorate the premises, is evidence of occupation (Smith v Twoart (1841) 2 Man & G 841; Towne v D'Heinrich (1853) 13 CB 892); and occupation by a subtenant is sufficient (Bull v Sibbs (1799) 8 Term Rep 327; Neal v Swind (1832) 2 Cr & J 377), and so is occupation by a co-tenant (Christy v Tancred (1840) 7 M & W 127; Electric Telegraph Co v Moore (1861) 2 F & F 363); but digging holes to examine the fitness of the land for mining is not (Jones v Reynolds (1836) 7 C & P 335).

285. Mesne profits.

The landlord may recover in a claim for mesne profits the damages which he has suffered through being out of possession of the land or, if he can prove no actual damage caused to him by the defendant's trespass, the landlord may recover as mesne profits the value<sup>1</sup> of the premises to the defendant for the period of the defendant's wrongful occupation<sup>2</sup>. In most cases the rent paid under any expired tenancy is strong evidence as to the open market value<sup>3</sup>. Mesne profits, being a type of damages for trespass, may be recovered in respect of the defendant's continued occupation only after the expiry of his legal right<sup>4</sup> to occupy the premises. The landlord is not limited to a claim for the profits which the defendant has received from the land, or those which he himself has lost<sup>5</sup>.

Mesne profits are treated as income for tax purposes and are thus calculated on a gross basis without deduction of income or corporation tax payable by the recipient<sup>6</sup>.

1 Ie a rack rent, but assuming short-term occupation only, and not eg the rate at which rent would be obtained under a lease for seven years. A rack rent may not exceed the maximum level permitted by statute: Newman v Dorrington Developments Ltd [1975] 3 All ER 928, [1975] 1 WLR 1642.

2 Swordheath Properties Ltd v Tabet [1979] 1 All ER 240, [1979] 1 WLR 285, CA; Whitwham v Westminster Brymbo Coal and Coke Co [1896] 2 Ch 538. This will usually be the open market value but may be less if the defendant remained involuntarily: see Ministry of Defence v Ashman (1993) 66 P & CR 195, [1993] 2 EGLR 102, CA and Ministry of Defence v Thompson (1993) 25 HLR 552, [1993] 2 EGLR 107, CA (where mesne profits were ordered to be assessed on the basis of the former concessionary rent or what the occupier would have had to pay for suitable local authority housing, whichever was the higher). On the forfeiture of a headlease, both the headlease and also any underleases are terminated, and the landlord is entitled to mesne profits assessed on the basis of the letting value of the house for the duration of the period for which he is kept out of possession. That right is not prejudiced even if a vesting order is made in favour of the underlessees under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146(4) (see PARA 627 post): Viscount Chelsea v Hutchinson [1994] 2 EGLR 61, [1994] 43 EG 153, CA. See also Inverugie Investments Ltd v Hackett [1995] 3 All ER 841, [1995] 1 WLR 713, PC.

3 In the vast majority of cases in which mesne profits are claimed, they are awarded, if at all, at the rate of the previous rent; and, as a rule of practice, if not of law, it can be taken as being the case that the burden lies upon a party who argues for a different rate for mesne profits, whether higher or lower, to adduce evidence to rebut the inference arising from any reasonably recent rack rental transaction.

4 Thus, where the landlord seeks to recover possession under a proviso for re-entry for breach of covenant, mesne profits may be claimed only from the date of his election to determine the tenancy, and not from the date of the breach; and, where the landlord re-enters by issuing a writ or summons claiming possession (as opposed to physically re-entering the demised premises), the landlord's election occurs when the writ or the summons is served upon the tenant, so that the landlord is entitled to recover rent up to that date and mesne profits in respect of any subsequent occupation by the tenant: Canas Property Co Ltd v KL Television Services Ltd [1970] 2 QB 433, [1970] 2 All ER 795, CA, overruling in part Elliott v Boynton [1924] 1 Ch 236, CA.

NOTE 2--Mesne profits can only be claimed for the period of the defendant's occupation; a tolerated trespasser has no obligation to notify the landlord when he gives up possession: Jones v Merton LBC [2008] EWCA Civ 660, [2008] 4 All ER 287.

286. Limitation periods.

No claim may be brought or distress made to recover arrears of rent or damages in respect of them after the expiration of six years from the date on which the arrears became due, or on which a written acknowledgment was made<sup>1</sup>. The right to recover six years' arrears subsists so long as the relationship of landlord and tenant continues, notwithstanding the non-payment of rent for any number of years<sup>2</sup>. In a claim for mesne profits, which is a claim for trespass, only arrears for six years before action may be recovered<sup>3</sup>.

Where the tenant is a serviceman or servicewoman to whom the relevant provisions of the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951<sup>1</sup> apply, the court's leave is required before the landlord may levy a distress or proceed to execution on, or otherwise to the enforcement of, any judgment for the payment of rent, or for the recovery of land in default of payment of rent<sup>2</sup>. The 1951 Act does not, however, apply to tenancies created after the tenant began to perform the period of relevant service<sup>3</sup>.

PAYMENT OF RENT/(8) RECOVERY OF RENT AND RELATED SUMS/(ii) Recovery after Assignment by Tenant/288. Liability of original tenant for rent; the position at common law and the statutory limitations.

(ii) Recovery after Assignment by Tenant

288. Liability of original tenant for rent; the position at common law and the statutory limitations.

At common law, an original tenant remains liable on the covenant to pay rent notwithstanding any assignment of the term<sup>1</sup>. The landlord may sue both the original tenant and the assignee for the same arrears and obtain judgment against both<sup>2</sup> but may have satisfaction against one only<sup>3</sup>. The original tenant's covenant is direct and primary<sup>4</sup> and is not treated after assignment of the term as one of suretyship; and accordingly it is not affected by the landlord's accepting a surrender of part of the demised premises<sup>5</sup> or by the release of a guarantor<sup>6</sup>. The original tenant is liable to pay an increased rent resulting from a rent review carried out after the assignment of the term<sup>7</sup> even if the value of the premises has been increased by works carried out by the assignee without the original tenant's knowledge<sup>8</sup>. The original tenant is also liable, notwithstanding assignment of the term, to an assignee of the reversion<sup>9</sup>. He is, however, not liable in respect of any period after the date on which the term was limited to expire when the tenancy continues under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>10</sup> by virtue of the assignee's remaining in occupation<sup>11</sup>; nor, in the absence of clear words to the contrary effect, is a surety so liable<sup>12</sup>.

The operation of these common law rules is now tempered by statute. In the case of a tenancy granted on or after 1 January 1996<sup>13</sup>, the original tenant will not remain liable under any covenants including the covenant to pay rent and the landlord will not be able to sue the original tenant and the assignee for the same arrears<sup>14</sup>. The original tenant may, however, be required by the landlord to enter into an authorised guarantee agreement guaranteeing the performance of the covenant to pay rent (or of any other tenant covenant) by the assignee<sup>15</sup>, in which case he will be liable to make payment provided that the landlord satisfies the statutory notice conditions<sup>16</sup>. In the case of a tenancy granted before 1 January 1996<sup>17</sup>, the former tenant will only be liable to pay rent after an assignment if the landlord satisfies the statutory notice conditions<sup>18</sup>. Where either the guarantor or the former tenant then makes full payment he has the right to be granted an overriding lease<sup>19</sup>.

PAYMENT OF RENT/(8) RECOVERY OF RENT AND RELATED SUMS/(ii) Recovery after Assignment by Tenant/289. Restriction on liability of former tenant or his guarantor for rent or service charge etc.

289. Restriction on liability of former tenant or his guarantor for rent or service charge etc.

The following provisions apply where a person ('the former tenant') is as a result of an assignment<sup>1</sup> no longer a tenant<sup>2</sup> under a tenancy<sup>3</sup> but:

- 414 (1) in the case of a tenancy which is a new tenancy for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>4</sup> he has under an authorised guarantee agreement<sup>5</sup> guaranteed the performance by his assignee of a tenant covenant<sup>6</sup> of the tenancy under which any fixed charge<sup>7</sup> is payable; or
- 415 (2) in the case of any tenancy he remains bound by such a covenant<sup>8</sup>.

The former tenant is not liable under that agreement or, as the case may be, the covenant to pay any amount in respect of any fixed charge payable under the covenant unless, within the period of six months beginning with the date when the charge becomes due<sup>9</sup>, the landlord<sup>10</sup> serves<sup>11</sup> on the former tenant a notice<sup>12</sup> informing him:

- 416 (a) that the charge is now due; and
- 417 (b) that in respect of the charge the landlord intends to recover from the former tenant such amount as is specified in the notice and, where payable, interest calculated on such basis as is so specified<sup>13</sup>.

Where a person ('the guarantor') has agreed to guarantee the performance by the former tenant of such a covenant as is mentioned above<sup>14</sup>, the guarantor is not liable under the agreement to pay any amount in respect of any fixed charge payable under the covenant unless, within the period of six months beginning with the date when the charge becomes due, the landlord serves on the guarantor a notice<sup>15</sup> informing him:

- 418 (i) that the charge is now due; and
- 419 (ii) that in respect of the charge the landlord intends to recover from the guarantor such amount as is specified in the notice and, where payable, interest calculated on such basis as is so specified<sup>16</sup>.

Where the landlord has duly served a notice under the above provisions, the amount, exclusive of interest, which the former tenant or the guarantor is liable to pay in respect of the fixed charge in question is not to exceed the amount specified in the notice unless:

- 420 (A) his liability in respect of the charge is subsequently determined to be for a greater amount;
- 421 (B) the notice informed him of the possibility that that liability would be so determined; and
- 422 (C) within the period of three months beginning with the date of the determination, the landlord serves on him a further notice<sup>17</sup> informing him that the landlord intends to recover that greater amount from him, plus interest, where payable<sup>18</sup>.

1 Unless the context otherwise requires, 'assignment' includes equitable assignment and in addition (subject to the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 11: see PARA 588 post) assignment in breach of a covenant of a tenancy or by operation of law: s 28(1).

2 Unless the context otherwise requires, 'landlord' and 'tenant', in relation to a tenancy, mean the person for the time being entitled to the reversion expectant on the term of the tenancy and the person so entitled to that term respectively: ibid s 28(1). For the meaning of 'tenancy' see note 3 infra.

3 Unless the context otherwise requires, 'tenancy' means any lease or other tenancy and includes a subtenancy and an agreement for a tenancy, but does not include a mortgage term: ibid s 28(1). As to tenancies to which the 1995 Act applies see PARA 578 post; and see note 8 infra.

4 For the meaning of 'new tenancy' see PARA 578 post.

5 For the meaning of 'authorised guarantee agreement' see PARA 593 post.

6 Unless the context otherwise requires, 'tenant covenant', in relation to a tenancy, means a covenant falling to be complied with by the tenant of premises demised by the tenancy; 'covenant' includes term, condition and obligation; and references to a covenant (or any description of covenant) of a tenancy include a covenant (or a covenant of that description) contained in a collateral agreement: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 28(1). 'Collateral agreement', in relation to a tenancy, means any agreement collateral to the tenancy, whether made before or after its creation: s 28(1).

7 For these purposes, 'fixed charge', in relation to a tenancy, means (1) rent; (2) any service charge as defined by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18 (as amended) (see PARA 326 post) (the words 'of a dwelling' being disregarded for this purpose); and (3) any amount payable under a tenant covenant of the tenancy providing for the payment of a liquidated sum in the event of a failure to comply with any such covenant: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 17(6).

8 Ibid s 17(1). Section 17 applies where the tenancy referred to in s 17(1) is an overriding lease (as to which see PARA 290 post) as it applies in other cases falling within s 17(1): s 20(5)(b).

9 For transitional provisions regarding fixed charges which had become due before 1 January 1996 see ibid s 17(5).

10 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a fixed charge, includes any person who has a right to enforce payment of the charge: ibid s 17(6).

11 The Landlord and Tenant Act 1927 s 23 (see PARA 703 post) applies in relation to the service of notices for these purposes: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 27(5). A notice served in accordance with the statutory provisions has been held to have been validly served even if not actually received by the tenant: Commercial Union Life Assurance Co Ltd v Moustafa [1999] 2 EGLR 44, [1999] 24 EG 155, applying Galinski v McHugh (1988) 57 P & CR 359, [1989] 1 EGLR 109, CA.

12 The form of any notice to be served for these purposes must be prescribed by regulations made by the Lord Chancellor by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 27(1), (6). The regulations must require any notice served for the purposes of s 17 to include an explanation of the significance of the notice: s 27(3). For the prescribed form of notice for the purposes of s 17(2) or (3) see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 (Notices) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2964, regs 1(2), 2, Schedule, Form 1. A form substantially to the like effect may be used: reg 2. If any notice purporting to be served for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 17 is not in the prescribed form, or in a form substantially to the same effect, the notice is not effective: s 27(4). A minor error in the notice (eg as to the way interest on rent arrears is calculated under the lease) does not invalidate it: Commercial Union Life Assurance Co Ltd v Moustafa [1999] 2 EGLR 44, [1999] 24 EG 155.

13 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 17(2); and see Scottish and Newcastle plc v Raguz [2006] EWHC 821 (Ch), [2006] All ER (D) 148 (Apr) (notice served by the reversioner specifying rent due under the original lease not effective but the original tenant subsequently paid rent arrears irrespective of its strict liability to the reversioner; original tenant entitled to recover sums paid from its assignees).

The requirement to notify the former tenants of arrears does not apply to an indemnity between tenants: MW Kellogg Ltd v Tobin [1999] L & TR 513, sub nom MW Kellogg Ltd v Tobin [2000] CLY 3889.

14 le such a covenant as is mentioned in the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 17(1).

15 As to the form of notice see note 12 supra.

16 Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 s 17(3). A landlord who wishes to enforce a guarantee against a guarantor must follow the procedure in s 17(3), but there is no precondition that, merely because the liability of the guarantor is secondary to the primary liability of the original tenant, the landlord has first to serve a notice under s 17(2): Cheverell Estates Ltd v Harris [1998] 1 EGLR 27, [1998] 02 EG 127.

17 For the prescribed form of notice for these purposes see the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 (Notices) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2964, regs 1(2), 2, Schedule, Form 2; and see further note 12 supra.

289 Restriction on liability of former tenant or his guarantor for rent or service charge etc

NOTE 13--Raguz, cited, reversed in part: [2008] UKHL 65, [2009] 1 All ER 763.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/6. PAYMENT OF RENT/(8) RECOVERY OF RENT AND RELATED SUMS/(ii) Recovery after Assignment by Tenant/290. Right of former tenant or his guarantor to overriding lease.

290. Right of former tenant or his guarantor to overriding lease.

Where in respect of any tenancy<sup>1</sup> ('the relevant tenancy') any person ('the claimant') makes full payment of an amount which he has been duly required to pay in accordance with the provisions restricting liability for the payment of a fixed charge<sup>2</sup>, together with any interest payable, he is entitled<sup>3</sup> to have the landlord<sup>4</sup> under that tenancy grant him an overriding lease<sup>5</sup> of the premises demised by the tenancy<sup>6</sup>. An overriding lease is not required to reproduce any covenant of the relevant tenancy to the extent that the covenant is, in whatever terms, expressed to be a personal covenant between the landlord and the tenant<sup>7</sup> under that tenancy<sup>8</sup>. If any right, liability or other matter arising under a covenant of the relevant tenancy falls to be determined or otherwise operates, whether expressly or otherwise, by reference to the commencement of that tenancy:

423 (1) the corresponding covenant of the overriding lease must be so framed that that right, liability or matter falls to be determined or otherwise operates by reference to the commencement of that tenancy; but 424 (2) the overriding lease is not required to reproduce any covenant of that tenancy to the extent that it has become spent by the time that that lease is granted<sup>9</sup>.

A claim to exercise the right to an overriding lease is made by the claimant making a request for such a lease to the landlord<sup>10</sup>; and any such request:

425 (a) must be made to the landlord in writing and specify the payment by virtue of which the claimant claims to be entitled to the lease ('the qualifying payment'); and 426 (b) must be so made at the time of making the qualifying payment or within the period of 12 months beginning with the date of that payment<sup>11</sup>.

Where the claimant duly makes such a request:

- 427 (i) the landlord must<sup>12</sup> grant and deliver to the claimant an overriding lease of the demised premises within a reasonable time of the request being received by the landlord; and
- 428 (ii) the claimant must thereupon deliver to the landlord a counterpart of the lease duly executed by the claimant<sup>13</sup>, and is liable for the landlord's reasonable costs of and incidental to the grant of the lease<sup>14</sup>.

A claim that the landlord has failed to comply with head (i) above may be made the subject of civil proceedings in like manner as any other claim in tort for breach of statutory duty<sup>15</sup>. The landlord is not, however, under any obligation to grant an overriding lease of the demised premises at a time when the relevant tenancy has been determined; and a claimant is not entitled to the grant of such a lease if at the time when he makes his request either the landlord has already granted such a lease and that lease remains in force or another person has already duly made<sup>16</sup> a request for such a lease to the landlord and that request has been neither withdrawn nor abandoned by that person<sup>17</sup>.

Where a claimant who has duly made a request for an overriding lease subsequently withdraws or abandons the request before he is granted such a lease by the landlord, the claimant is liable for the landlord's reasonable costs incurred in pursuance of the request down to the time of its withdrawal or abandonment<sup>18</sup>.

The above provisions apply where the landlord is the tenant under an overriding lease granted under them as they apply where no such lease has been granted; and accordingly there may be two or more such leases interposed between the first such lease and the relevant tenancy<sup>19</sup>.

An overriding lease is a new tenancy for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>20</sup> only if the relevant tenancy is such a new tenancy<sup>21</sup>. Every overriding lease must state that it is a lease granted under the above provisions<sup>22</sup> and whether it is or is not a new tenancy for those purposes<sup>23</sup>. An overriding lease is deemed to be authorised as against the persons interested in any mortgage<sup>24</sup> of the landlord's interest, however created or arising, and is binding on any such persons<sup>25</sup>. If any such person is by virtue of such a mortgage entitled to possession of the documents of title relating to the landlord's interest:

- 429 (A) the landlord must within one month of the execution of the lease deliver to that person the counterpart executed in pursuance of head (ii) above; and
- 430 (B) if he fails to do so, the instrument creating or evidencing the mortgage applies as if the obligation to deliver a counterpart were included in the terms of the mortgage as set out in that instrument<sup>26</sup>.

The fact that an overriding lease takes effect subject to the relevant tenancy does not constitute a breach of any covenant of the lease against subletting or parting with possession of the premises demised by the lease or any part of them<sup>27</sup>.

PAYMENT OF RENT/(8) RECOVERY OF RENT AND RELATED SUMS/(ii) Recovery after Assignment by Tenant/291. Restriction of liability of former tenant or his guarantor where tenancy subsequently varied.

291. Restriction of liability of former tenant or his guarantor where tenancy subsequently varied.

The following provisions apply where a person ('the former tenant') is as a result of an assignment<sup>1</sup> no longer a tenant<sup>2</sup> under a tenancy<sup>3</sup> but:

- 431 (1) in the case of a new tenancy for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995<sup>4</sup> he has under an authorised guarantee agreement<sup>5</sup> guaranteed the performance by his assignee of any tenant covenant<sup>6</sup> of the tenancy; or
- 432 (2) in the case of any tenancy he remains bound by such a covenant<sup>7</sup>.

The former tenant is not liable under the agreement or, as the case may be, the covenant to pay any amount in respect of the covenant to the extent that the amount is referable to any relevant variation<sup>8</sup> of the tenant covenants of the tenancy effected after the assignment<sup>9</sup>. Where a person ('the guarantor') has agreed to guarantee the performance by the former tenant of a tenant covenant of the tenancy, the guarantor, where his liability to do so is not wholly discharged by any such variation of the tenant covenants of the tenancy, is not liable under the agreement to pay any amount in respect of the covenant to the extent that the amount is referable to any such variation<sup>10</sup>.

For these purposes, a variation of the tenant covenants of a tenancy is a 'relevant variation' if either:

- 433 (a) the landlord<sup>11</sup> has, at the time of the variation, an absolute right to refuse to allow it; or
- 434 (b) the landlord would have had such a right if the variation had been sought by the former tenant immediately before the assignment by him but, between the time of that assignment and the time of the variation, the tenant covenants of the tenancy have been so varied as to deprive the landlord of such a right<sup>12</sup>; and in determining whether the landlord has or would have had such a right at any particular time regard must be had to all the circumstances, including the effect of any provision made by or under any enactment<sup>13</sup>. Nothing in these provisions applies to any variation of the tenant covenants of a tenancy effected before 1 January 1996<sup>14</sup>.

7. RENT REVIEW

(1) IN GENERAL

292. Types of rent review clause.

Some kind of rent review clause<sup>1</sup> is almost invariably included in leases of commercial premises<sup>2</sup>, so that the rent reserved may continue both to hold its value in real economic terms and to reflect the current market value from time to time of the demised premises. The variety of such clauses is infinite, but all of them belong to one of the following two types (or are combinations of the two):

- 435 (1) rent variation or escalation clauses;
- 436 (2) rent review clauses properly so called.

A rent variation or escalation clause in a lease is a clause by which, with or without the landlord being required to initiate the process<sup>3</sup> of calculation, the amount of the rent is varied<sup>4</sup> by reference to the fluctuations of some other rent, cost, price or index. Examples of this type of variable rent clause are 'indexed rents' (rising or falling by reference to the general index of retail trade prices, the index of building construction costs, or some other index) or turnover rents varying in amount in proportion to the sales or production achieved by the tenant in the demised premises<sup>5</sup>. A difficulty with indexed rents is, however, that changes tend to be made in the basing or composition of published indices. It is a matter of degree whether the changes are so radical as to lead to the conclusion that the index has gone rather than been revised<sup>6</sup>. The periodical rebasing of the index does not invalidate the rent review<sup>6</sup>; nor do changes in the composition of the basket of items to which the index is related designed to reflect changes in social habits and tastes and thus to preserve the accuracy of the index<sup>7</sup>. Other examples of rent variation clauses involve rents linked to capital value<sup>8</sup>, or to the amount of the head rent<sup>9</sup> or to the rents received or receivable from the occupiers of the demised premises<sup>10</sup>.

A rent review clause properly so called is a clause which permits the landlord or, as the case may be, the tenant to call for the reconsideration and reassessment of the amount of the rent. At stated intervals, and in accordance with the procedure laid down by the clause, the new rate of the rent is agreed by the then landlord and tenant<sup>11</sup> or determined by the process laid down in the lease, the new rate applying until the next review date or the expiry of the term. Normally, if the new rate of rent has not been agreed by a stipulated date<sup>12</sup>, the clause provides for reference of the dispute to an independent person, usually a surveyor, who may be appointed to function as an arbitrator or as an independent valuer and who will value the demised premises in accordance with the formula laid down in the clause. This formula usually requires that the valuer make certain assumptions, that is, that he value the premises upon assumed facts which may differ from the actual existing state of affairs in respect of the tenancy. There is, however, no presumption that a rent review clause has to be exercisable by both parties to the lease<sup>13</sup>.

A rent review clause will set out the machinery for resolving disputes<sup>14</sup> and may also set out the machinery for implementing the review<sup>15</sup> and the valuation criteria to be applied<sup>16</sup>.

A rent review clause which purports to allow for dramatic increases in the rent so as to bring the tenancy outside the protection of one of the statutory codes<sup>17</sup> is likely to be viewed as a sham and may be disallowed by a court, even if the tenant has agreed to it<sup>18</sup>.

Many rent review clauses in commercial leases provide for the rent to be reviewed 'upwards only'<sup>19</sup>; but it is recommended best practice that the basis of rent review is to open market rent and that, wherever possible, landlords should offer alternatives which are priced on a risk-adjusted basis, including alternatives to upwards only rent reviews; these might include up/down reviews to open market rent with a minimum of the initial rent, or another basis such as annual indexation<sup>20</sup>. The absence of an upwards only review formula is not sufficient to require or permit a construction of the rent review clause as requiring either a mandatory review or one exercisable by both landlord and tenant<sup>21</sup>.

Once the contractual term of a business tenancy has expired, the landlord is not entitled to operate the rent review clause during the continuation of the tenancy under Part II<sup>22</sup> of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>23</sup>.

1 As to the principles from which the validity and enforceability of rent review clauses derive see PARA 245 ante.

2 Many residential leases also contain rent review clauses, and many leases at ground rents contain provision for review at longer intervals.

3 Usually this will involve the service of a notice.

4 Although the amount is varied, the new amount remains the rent reserved by the lease, and in agreeing or determining the new rate of rent the parties are implementing and not varying the original contract, in contrast to the situation where as a result of a new bargain between them the landlord and tenant vary that contract: see PARA 243 notes 6, 11-13 ante.

5 Modern indexed rents or shopping centre turnover rents are only recent examples of leases employing the principles established in the cases cited in PARA 245 note 2 ante. Variable rent clauses occasion practical difficulties, as the value of the demised premises may alter other than in accordance with the chosen factor by reference to which it is to be adjusted, so that the resulting revised rental figure may turn out to be above or below the true value of the demised premises. For examples of turnover rents see Edwards v Rees (1836) 7 C & P 340 (rent calculated on amount of coal sold); Walsh v Lonsdale (1882) 21 ChD 9, CA (rent variable according to number of machines in use); Tucker (Inspector of Taxes) v Granada Motorway Services Ltd [1979] 2 All ER 801, [1979] 1 WLR 683, HL (percentage of gross takings); SB Property Co Ltd v Chelsea Football and Athletic Co Ltd [1990] EGCS 132 (rent linked to football gate receipts); Burford UK Properties Ltd v Forte Hotels (UK) Ltd (formerly Trust House Forte) [2003] EWCA Civ 1800, 148 Sol Jo LB 145, [2003] All ER (D) 309 (Dec) (rent linked to net bedroom revenue). - 11 Their agreement will be binding upon their predecessors in title so that, if an assignee of a tenant agrees a revised rent, the original tenant will be liable for the amount so agreed; and this will be so notwithstanding that the landlord and the assignee have not strictly complied with the procedure originally laid down in the rent review clauses: Haselmere Estates v British Olivetti (1 June 1977, unreported) (following and applying the principle laid down in Baynton v Morgan (1888) 22 QBD 74, CA, that by assigning the term the tenant confers irrevocable authority upon the assignee to act in respect of the term and of the demised premises); Centrovincial Estates plc v Bulk Storage Ltd (1983) 46 P & CR 393, [1983] 2 EGLR 45; GUS Property Management Ltd v Texas Homecare Ltd [1993] 2 EGLR 63, [1993] 27 EG 130. - 14 See PARA 314 et seq post.
- 15 See PARA 294 et seq post. A majority of modern clauses avoid detailed rent review machinery of the notice (and sometimes counter-notice) type and merely provide an obligation on both parties to negotiate and agree a rent; in default of agreement the clause will set out machinery for resolving the dispute. Such an approach avoids any possible (and essentially sterile) dispute over the validity of notices or time limits.

A rent review clause will not necessarily reflect the value of money; a clause which refers repeatedly to an increase in rent and which contains a formula for calculation of the new rent which does not lend itself easily to a downwards variation will not be construed as permitting such a variation: Standard Life Assurance v Unipath Ltd (1997) 75 P & CR 473, [1997] 2 EGLR 121, CA.
- 19 See eg Theodore Goddard v Fletcher King Services Ltd [1997] 2 EGLR 131, [1997] 32 EG 90 (negligent solicitor failed to include 'upwards only' rent review clause as instructed; negligent managing surveyor failed to notice mistake; professionals 80% and 20% liable respectively); Melanesian Mission Trust Board v Australian Mutual Provident Society (1996) 74 P & CR 297, [1997] 2 EGLR 128, PC (a clause which provides that 'the lessee must pay to the lessor during the term of the lease rent at the rate specified or where increased in accordance with the express provisions of this lease at the increased rent' is an 'upwards only' clause, and its failure to mention whether the rent might or might not be decreased does not mean that it allows for that possibility); applied in Hart Investments Ltd v Burton Hotel Ltd [2001] All ER (D) 307 (Oct). Some words may have to be implied into the rent review clause to show that the provision is to operate in an upwards only direction: Great Bear Investments Ltd v Solon Co-operative Housing Services Ltd [1997] EGCS 177. A reference to the rent being increased at each review may be decisive in favour of the review being construed as upwards only: see

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/7. RENT REVIEW/(1) IN GENERAL/293. Effect of rent review for the purposes of the charge to stamp duty land tax.

293. Effect of rent review for the purposes of the charge to stamp duty land tax.

Where:

- 437 (1) a lease contains provision under which the rent may be adjusted;
- 438 (2) under that provision the first or only such adjustment is to an amount that, before the adjustment, is uncertain, and that has effect from a date (the 'review date') that is expressed as falling five years after a specified date; and
- 439 (3) the specified date falls within the three months before the beginning of the term of the lease, the particular provisions of the Finance Act 2003 relating to leases and the charge to stamp duty land tax<sup>1</sup> have effect as if references to the first five years of the term of the lease were to the period beginning with the start of the term of the lease and ending with the review date, and references in those provisions to the fifth year of the term of the lease are to be read accordingly<sup>2</sup>.

Where the statutory provisions relating to contingent, uncertain or unascertained consideration<sup>3</sup> apply in relation to a transaction by virtue of the above provisions, and either:

- 440 (a) the end of the fifth year of the term of the lease is reached; or
- 441 (b) the amount of rent payable in respect of the first five years of the term of the lease ceases to be uncertain<sup>4</sup> at an earlier date, the following provisions have effect to require or permit reconsideration of how the charge to stamp duty land tax applies to the transaction, and to any transaction in relation to which it is a linked transaction<sup>5</sup>. If the result as regards the rent paid or payable in respect of the first five years of the term of the lease is that a transaction becomes notifiable, or that additional tax is payable in respect of a transaction or that tax is payable where none was payable before:

- 442 (i) the purchaser must make a return to the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs within 30 days of the date referred to in head (a) or head (b) above<sup>6</sup>;
- 443 (ii) the return must contain a self-assessment of the tax chargeable in respect of the transaction on the basis of the information contained in the return;

- 444 (iii) the tax so chargeable is to be calculated by reference to the rates in force at the effective date of the transaction; and
- 445 (iv) the return must be accompanied by payment of any tax or additional tax payable<sup>7</sup>.

If the result as regards the rent paid or payable in respect of the first five years of the term of the lease is that less tax is payable in respect of the transaction than has already been paid, the purchaser may, within the period allowed for amendment of the land transaction return, amend the return accordingly, and after the end of that period he may (if the land transaction return is not so amended) make a claim to the Commissioners for Revenue and Customs for repayment of the amount overpaid<sup>8</sup>.

If, after the end of the fifth year of the term of a lease, the amount of rent payable increases, or is increased, in accordance with the provisions of the lease and the rent payable as a result ('the new rent') is such that the increase falls to be regarded as abnormal<sup>9</sup>, the increase in rent is treated as if it were the grant of a lease in consideration of the excess rent<sup>10</sup>.

(2) IMPLEMENTING THE REVIEW

294. Review date, valuation date and payment date.

The review date, that is to say the date with effect from which the new rent is to run, may be specified by reference to the expiry of a specified year of the term which will normally be computed by reference to the date from which the term is expressed to run rather than the date of grant<sup>1</sup>. The valuation date, that is to say the date by reference to which the reviewed rent is to be determined, is normally the same as the review date and the court will lean in favour of such a construction<sup>2</sup>; but the court will give effect to a specific direction that the valuation date is to be a different date<sup>3</sup>.

Where the revised rent has not been determined by the date from which it has been stipulated that it is to be paid, the lease often provides expressly for payment of rent at the previous rate until the new rent has been agreed or determined, and then for payment of the shortfall in relation to the period from the review date until the date of determination of the new rate of rent. Even if the lease does not expressly so provide, in the absence of a clear stipulation to the contrary, the new rent, when determined, will be payable retrospectively as from the rent review date<sup>4</sup>. Nevertheless, until the amount of the new rent has been determined, the landlord is unable to distrain for it<sup>5</sup> or to obtain judgment for it<sup>6</sup>.

Subject to express provisions to the contrary, rent which becomes payable from a past date need not be paid until the next rent day under the lease after the date on which the new rent is determined<sup>7</sup>. Thus, rent is not in arrear until then and interest is not payable on the sum in question under a provision which requires the tenant to pay interest on arrears of rent<sup>8</sup>, although many leases provide separately for the payment of interest on late resolution of the review; but an obligation to pay interest on late review will not be implied<sup>9</sup>.

It is recommended best practice that landlords and tenants ensure that they understand the basis upon which rent may be reviewed and the procedure to be followed, including the existence of any strict time limits<sup>10</sup> which could create pitfalls. They should obtain professional advice on these matters well before the review date and also immediately upon receiving, and before responding to, any notice or correspondence on the matter from the other party or his or her agent<sup>11</sup>.

295. Whether time of the essence.

It is now settled that rent review clauses are not to be regarded as landlord's options, and that ordinarily any time limits imposed by the procedure laid down in those clauses are not of the essence of the contract<sup>1</sup>. A rent review, therefore, is not frustrated if the landlord or the tenant misses such a time limit<sup>2</sup>, but the parties may expressly make a time limit of the essence<sup>3</sup>, or may make a time limit of the essence by clear implication<sup>4</sup>. Where a time limit has been missed by one party, the other party may make time of the essence by giving reasonable notice to the first party<sup>5</sup>. The lease may provide that a notice to initiate a rent review has to be served within specified time limits but may then make express provision for the service of a late notice; it will be a matter of construction of the relevant provisions whether in the case of a late notice the reviewed rent is payable from the specified rent review date or from some later date<sup>6</sup>.

1 United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council, Cheapside Land Development Co Ltd v Messels Service Co [1978] AC 904, [1977] 2 All ER 62, HL. Formerly, it had been supposed that rent review clauses had to be construed literally, so that time limits were ordinarily binding and 'late' reviews were lost, and this was the view of the Court of Appeal in the same case (see United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council [1976] Ch 128, [1976] 2 All ER 220, CA); and before that it had been supposed that rent review clauses had to be divided into 'mandatory' or 'option-type' clauses (under which time limits were invariable) and 'machinery' or 'obligation' or 'directory' clauses (under which time limits mattered less, as they were merely part of the procedure for determining the new rent). These distinctions are now wholly discredited, and all cases decided before the decision of the House of Lords in United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council, Cheapside Land Development Co Ltd v Messels Service Co supra require to be reconsidered in the light of that decision. ## 296. Time made expressly of the essence.

Although it is a simple matter for a draftsman to provide in terms that time shall be of the essence of some or all of the steps involved in a rent review, it may be obscure to which steps that stipulation is meant to apply<sup>1</sup>. Where time is expressly made of the essence in relation to certain steps but not others, that tends to indicate that the time limits for those other steps were not intended to be strict<sup>2</sup>. Any form of expression which clearly evinces the concept of finality attached to the time limit will suffice to make time of the essence<sup>3</sup> but it is best for the draftsman to state whether time is to be of the essence in terms in view of the nice distinctions which have been drawn by the courts<sup>4</sup>. Further, the parties may make time of the essence by agreeing what is to happen if a time limit is not complied with, as, for example, by providing that, if application is not made for the appointment of a surveyor within a specified period, the rent review notice shall be 'void and of no effect'<sup>5</sup>, or the rent set out in a tenant's counter-notice shall be the market rent<sup>6</sup>, or that the rent shall be a sum equal to the old rent<sup>7</sup>. A provision to the effect that, if no counter-notice is served, the tenant is deemed to agree the landlord's figure does not, however, of itself make time of the essence for the service of the tenant's counter-notice<sup>8</sup>.

1 It may apply to the time for giving notice or counter-notice or applying for the appointment of a third party or even to the date by which the third party must make the decision: see eg C Bradley & Sons Ltd v Telefusion Ltd (1981) 259 Estates Gazette 337; applied in Art & Sound Ltd v West End Litho Ltd, Art & Sound Ltd v Tampo Supplies Ltd (1991) 64 P & CR 28, [1992] 1 EGLR 138 (stipulation held to apply to the making of the arbitrator's award); distinguished and doubted in Kings (Estate Agents) Ltd v Anderson [1992] 1 EGLR 121; distinguished in Shuwa Ashdown House Corpn v Grayrigg Properties Ltd [1992] 2 EGLR 127, CA.

4 The following expressions have been held to make time of the essence: notice to be given by a certain date 'but not otherwise' (Drebbond Ltd v Horsham District Council (1978) 37 P & CR 237, [1978] 1 EGLR 96); rent to be 'conclusively fixed' at the amount stated in a landlord's notice unless the tenant served a counter-notice within a certain period (Mammoth Greeting Cards Ltd v Agra Ltd [1990] 2 EGLR 124; Barrett Estate Services Ltd v David Greig (Retail) Ltd [1991] 2 EGLR 123). In the following cases, however, time has been held not to be of the essence: rent to be referred to a surveyor 'as soon as practicable and in any event not later than' a given date (Touche Ross & Co v Secretary of State for the Environment (1982) 46 P & CR 187, [1983] 1 EGLR 123, CA; Thorn EMI Pension Trust Ltd v Quinton Hazell plc [1984] 1 EGLR 113, (1983) 269 Estates Gazette 414); service of 12 months' notice should be a condition precedent (North Hertfordshire District Council v Hitchin Industrial Estate Ltd [1992] 2 EGLR 121). In Starmark Enterprises Ltd v CPL Distribution Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1252, [2002] Ch 306, [2002] 4 All ER 264 the Court of Appeal applied the ruling in the former case and were of the view that the decision in Mecca Leisure Ltd v Renown (Investments) Holdings Ltd supra was decided per incuriam. Where, however, the relevant provision clearly establishes the contracting parties' intention where a specified time limit is not complied with, it will rebut the presumption that time is not of the essence: Starmark Enterprises Ltd v CPL Distribution Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1252, [2002] Ch 306, [2002] 4 All ER 264; and see Monella v Pizza Express (Restaurants) Ltd [2003] EWHC 2966 (Ch), [2004] 1 EGLR 43, [2004] 12 EG 172 (change in the law rendering time limit of the essence was within reasonable contemplation of parties to a lease). ## 297. Time made of the essence by implication.

The general presumption that time is not of the essence applies in the absence of any contra-indications in the express words of the lease or in the inter-relation of the rent review clause itself and other clauses or in the surrounding circumstances<sup>1</sup>. Where the review clause is associated with a tenant's option to determine the lease (in respect of which time is of the essence), that is a strong indication that time was intended to be of the essence of the rent review timetable<sup>2</sup>. Time will be held to be of the essence even where the last day for the tenant to exercise the break and for the landlord to serve the rent review notice are the same, whether the rent review and the right to break are in the same<sup>3</sup> or different<sup>4</sup> clauses, whether or not it is open to either party to initiate the review or whether or not the review is upwards only<sup>5</sup>. The same is true where the tenant may give notice exercising his option to break after the last day for service of the landlord's notice<sup>6</sup>. Where rent was to be agreed prior to the quarter day before the rent review date, and, in default of agreement, the rent was 'to be assessed by a surveyor to be appointed on the application of the landlord by the President of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors', the Court of Appeal held that a term should be implied into the rent review provisions that the landlord should make the application for the appointment of the independent expert within a reasonable time of the relevant quarter day. Business efficacy required the implication of such a term and it was therefore open to the tenant to make time of the essence<sup>7</sup>.

Time is not of the essence, however, if there is no requirement for the landlord to serve a trigger notice<sup>8</sup> or where the step to be taken within the specified time is not within the landlord's control, for example the making of an arbitrator's award, even where the time stipulated for that step demonstrates an obvious association with the tenant's right to break<sup>9</sup>. If the lease extends the tenant's right to break if the rent has not been determined by the relevant date, time will probably not be held to be of the essence<sup>10</sup>. The inclusion of a timetable in the definition of 'yearly rack rental value' does not dispense with the presumption that time is not of the essence<sup>11</sup>.

The presumption is capable of rebuttal where the rent review provisions create an 'ultimatum procedure' whereby the parties specify the consequences of a failure to complete a particular step in the rent review procedure on time: Banks v Kokkinos [1999] 3 EGLR 133, (1999) Times, 19 January, following Visionhire Ltd v Britel Fund Trustees Ltd [1992] 1 EGLR 128, 1991 SLT 883, Ct of Sess. As to express words see PARA 296 ante. There is no reported case in which time has been held to be of the essence because of surrounding circumstances alone.

Where a lease provides for four rent reviews and one break clause which coincides with one of them, an interrelation can exist between the break clause and the coincident rent review period, so as to make time of the essence in relation to the service of a rent review notice under the coincident rent review but not under the others: Central Estates Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment (1996) 72 P & CR 482, [1997] 1 EGLR 239, CA.

298. Notice making time of the essence.

If a rent review clause lays down a time limit for the taking of a particular step but time is not of the essence for the taking of that step, it may be made of the essence, once the date in question has passed, by the party not in default serving on the other party a notice fixing a reasonable time within which the party in default must take that step or lose the right to take it<sup>1</sup>. A party may not, however, make time of the essence where the step in question may be taken by either party; his remedy then is to take that step himself<sup>2</sup>.

1 United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council, Cheapside Land Development Co Ltd v Messels Service Co [1978] AC 904, [1977] 2 All ER 62, HL; London & Manchester Assurance Co Ltd v GA Dunn & Co (1982) 265 Estates Gazette 39, 131, CA; Amherst v James Walker Goldsmith & Silversmith Ltd [1983] Ch 305, [1983] 2 All ER 1067, CA; Trustees of Henry Smith's Charity v AWADA Trading & Promotion Services Ltd (1983) 47 P & CR 607, [1984] 1 EGLR 116, CA; Mecca Leisure Ltd v Renown Investments (Holdings) Ltd (1984) 49 P & CR 12, [1984] 2 EGLR 137, CA. It appears that the notice may be served immediately after the expiry of the time limit without the party in default being allowed a further reasonable time for compliance: Behzadi v Shaftesbury Hotels Ltd [1992] Ch 1, [1991] 2 All ER 477, CA. This doctrine was applied to rent reviews in United Scientific Holdings Ltd v Burnley Borough Council, Cheapside Land Development Co Ltd v Messels Service Co supra by analogy with the concept of notices to complete in connection with contracts for the sale of land. Although the analogy is imprecise (in that a landlord's failure to implement a rent review involves no breach of contract), the principle is universally accepted and may be treated as established. For an example of a notice successfully making time of the essence see Barclays Bank plc v Savile Estates Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 589, [2003] 2 P & CR 374, [2002] 2 EGLR 16.

299. Effect of delay.

Where time is or has been made of the essence in relation to a time limit, then, once the time fixed has passed, the step in question cannot validly be taken. If the result is that the machinery for implementing the review can go no further, as, for example, because the landlord cannot serve a trigger notice or apply for the appointment of an arbitrator, the landlord cannot proceed with the review and is entitled only to the rent previously payable<sup>1</sup>. Likewise, if the tenant fails to serve a counter-notice in time, he will be unable to take the review further and will have to pay the rent proposed in the landlord's notice<sup>2</sup>.

The court has no general equitable jurisdiction to extend time for complying with a rent review timetable<sup>3</sup>. The court has power to extend time for the appointment of an arbitrator or for the taking of some other step to commence the arbitration<sup>4</sup>; but this discretion does not normally apply to rent review<sup>5</sup>. Where it does, any party to the arbitration agreement may apply for such an order upon notice to the other parties, but only after a claim has arisen and after exhausting any available arbitral process for obtaining an extension of time<sup>6</sup>. The court may make an order only if satisfied:

- 446 (1) that the circumstances are such as were outside the reasonable contemplation of the parties when they agreed the provision in question, and that it would be just to extend the time<sup>7</sup>; or
- 447 (2) that the conduct of one party makes it unjust to hold the other party to the strict terms of the provision in question<sup>8</sup>.

The court may extend the time for such period and on such terms as it thinks fit<sup>9</sup>, and may do so whether or not the time previously fixed, by agreement or by a previous order, has expired<sup>10</sup>. The court also has power to enlarge the time for the making of an arbitrator's award, whether or not time has expired<sup>11</sup>, but may only do so if satisfied that a substantial injustice would otherwise be done<sup>12</sup>.

If time is not of the essence, it is now settled that even long delay will not of itself cause the landlord to lose the right to have a review in the absence of circumstances giving rise to an estoppel<sup>13</sup>. Neither a remark apparently accepting that the right to review has been lost<sup>14</sup> nor the acceptance of the rent payable under the lease in any event<sup>15</sup> will give rise to an estoppel.

4 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 12(1)(a); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1221. Under the Arbitration Act 1950 s 27 (repealed), the taking of such a step was held to include the service of a tenant's counter-notice calling for an arbitration (Pittalis v Sherefettin [1986] QB 868, [1986] 2 All ER 227, CA, overruling Tote Bookmakers Ltd v Development & Property Holding Co Ltd [1985] Ch 261, [1985] 2 All ER 555) but not the service of a landlord's notice initiating the review (Richurst Ltd v Pimenta [1993] 2 All ER 559, [1993] 1 WLR 159). The power to extend time was exercisable where undue hardship would otherwise be caused, that is to say hardship out of proportion to the degree of fault involved (Pittalis v Sherefettin supra), which might include procedural default (or delay) in pursuing the application once it had been made (Prudential Property Services Ltd v Capital Land Holdings Ltd [1993] 1 EGLR 128). However, the Arbitration Act 1996 s 12 is in different terms; its purpose is to restrict the circumstances in which the court has power to extend the time: see Fox & Widley v Guram [1998] 1 EGLR 91, [1998] 03 EG 142.

7 See ibid s 12(3)(a); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1221. It is appropriate to take account of the underlying commercial purpose of rent review provisions; but it is also important to have regard to the particular provision in question: Fox & Widley v Guram [1998] 1 EGLR 91, [1998] 03 EG 142.

8 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 12(3)(b); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1221. The fact that the landlords simply overstated the case (by stating a sum in the trigger notice later alleged to be in excess of the market rent), as happens many times, does not bring their conduct within head (2) in the text: Fox & Widley v Guram [1998] 1 EGLR 91, [1998] 03 EG 142.

300. Trigger notices.

Many rent review clauses contain no requirement for any notice to be served by the landlord to set the review in motion<sup>1</sup>. In such a case no obligation to give a notice by a particular time will be implied<sup>2</sup> nor will it be implied that steps to implement the review must be taken with all due expedition within a reasonable time of the review date<sup>3</sup>.

In other cases (particularly in older leases) rent review clauses require the initiation of the rent review process by the service of a notice (a 'trigger notice') by the landlord<sup>4</sup>. A trigger notice may be served, unless there is a strict time limit for doing so<sup>5</sup>, even after the expiry of the relevant rent review period<sup>6</sup> or after the surrender of the lease<sup>7</sup>. The time for service of the notice may be prescribed by the lease by reference to a date before which or after which the notice is to be served and sometimes difficulties have arisen in the interpretation of such stipulations<sup>8</sup>.

Leases do not usually prescribe any particular form of trigger notice but, if a particular format or content is stipulated, that stipulation, like those as to time, will not be regarded as of the essence unless it is clear by necessary implication from the terms of the clause as a whole that it is intended to be so regarded<sup>9</sup>. Where time is of the essence and the parties have to reach agreement in a short period, the stipulation that the landlord shall specify a rental figure may be held to be essential<sup>10</sup>. Probably such a stipulation is also of the essence in the common form of clause which requires the tenant to pay the rent stated in the landlord's notice unless the tenant serves a counter-notice<sup>11</sup>. The test of validity is whether the notice is in sufficiently clear terms to show to the recipient that the person serving the notice is intending to set the rent review procedure in motion<sup>12</sup>. An obvious typographical error will not matter<sup>13</sup>. It would appear to be implicit in a requirement that notice be served that the notice be in writing<sup>14</sup>. If a figure is inserted in the notice, it need not be the landlord's genuine pre-estimate of the rental value; and the notice is not invalid if the figure is excessive<sup>15</sup>.

A notice stated to be 'subject to contract' is likely to be held invalid<sup>16</sup>; and it has also been held that a notice headed 'without prejudice' is similarly invalid<sup>17</sup> but this is not always so<sup>18</sup>. A letter from a landlord purporting to initiate rent review proceedings and proposing a new annual rent, followed by ongoing correspondence with the tenant but no agreement, is not sufficient to fix the new rent<sup>19</sup>.

5 The time being of the essence: see PARAS 295-298 ante. ### 301. Counter-notices.

Some rent review clauses require the landlord to serve a notice stipulating a rent and the tenant, if he objects to that rent, to serve a counter-notice. If the clause requires the tenant only to indicate that he objects to the rent proposed, it is enough for him to say that he considers the rent proposed 'to be excessive'<sup>1</sup> and even a letter headed 'subject to contract' may suffice<sup>2</sup>. If, however, as is usually the case, he is required within a given time to elect to have the rent determined by a third party, the counter-notice must make clear that he intends to make that election<sup>3</sup> and expressions of mere disagreement, coupled with requests for the evidence relied upon by the landlord or with proposals for negotiation, are not enough<sup>4</sup>. The test is whether the terms of the notice are sufficiently clear to show to the ordinary landlord that the tenant is purporting to exercise his right to have the rent determined by a third party<sup>5</sup>. A letter expressed to be a formal notice or counter-notice under the terms of the lease probably suffices<sup>6</sup>. A requirement that a counter-notice be served implies that it must be in writing<sup>7</sup>; and if it is required to be served at the landlord's 'last known place of business' and that has changed but the lease has not been amended to reflect that change, it is not validly served if served at the address given in the lease, provided that the change was known to the tenant or his solicitor<sup>8</sup>. Requirements that the counter-notice shall state the rent that the tenant is willing to pay and call on the landlord to negotiate are not mandatory<sup>9</sup>.

302. Agreement between the parties.

Many rent review clauses stipulate that the parties are to have a period within which to agree the new rent before the matter is referred to a third party. It is always possible for the parties to agree even after this period has expired<sup>1</sup>. The fact that time is allowed for agreement or that provision is made for determination by a third party 'in default of agreement' or 'failing agreement' does not, however, imply any obligation to negotiate or make an attempt to agree a condition precedent to the right to apply to have the review determined by the third party<sup>2</sup>, even if time is made of the essence of the period for reaching agreement<sup>3</sup>.

To be effective for the purposes of a rent review clause an agreement on the new rent must be a contractually binding agreement; an agreement 'subject to contract' or 'subject to board approval' does not suffice<sup>4</sup> and such expressions used in earlier letters may infect later correspondence and prevent a contract from arising unless their effect is expressly or implicitly expunged<sup>5</sup>. An agreement by surveyors to recommend a figure to their respective clients is not binding<sup>6</sup>.

303. Defective machinery.

Where the machinery by which the value of a property is to be ascertained is subsidiary and non-essential to the main agreement and the machinery breaks down, the court can substitute other machinery to perform the valuation in order to ensure that the agreement is carried out<sup>1</sup>. This principle is directly applicable to rent review clauses where either no machinery for fixing the new rent has been stipulated<sup>2</sup> or where the machinery provided has been frustrated by somebody's failure to co-operate in taking an agreed step<sup>3</sup>. Where it is obvious that words have been omitted from the review machinery, it may be possible for the court to supply them as a matter of construction<sup>4</sup>.

Where, however, the agreed machinery is an essential part of the review and either cannot be operated or cannot be taken further because, for example, the landlord has failed to serve a notice<sup>5</sup> or the tenant a counter-notice<sup>6</sup> in time, the court will not interfere to supply substitute machinery and the rent will remain payable at the previous rate<sup>7</sup> or become payable at the rate specified in the landlord's notice<sup>8</sup>, as the case may be.

Defects or errors in the machinery of a rent review clause may also be cured by rectification on the grounds of mutual or unilateral mistake<sup>9</sup> in accordance with the established principles of equity<sup>10</sup>. The right to rectify passes to an assignee of the reversion<sup>11</sup>.

Cf Harben Style Ltd v Rhodes Trust [1995] 1 EGLR 118, [1995] 17 EG 125 (no need to imply an obligation, as in Sudbrook Trading Estate Ltd v Eggleton supra, that the landlord was under a duty to seek the appointment of a surveyor, because there was a rent provided for if the landlord elected not to seek such an appointment).

(3) VALUATION CRITERIA

304. In general.

Rent review clauses have become increasingly sophisticated and now tend to contain a number of directions as to matters which are to be assumed, whether or not those assumptions correspond with reality<sup>1</sup>, and other matters which are to be disregarded<sup>2</sup> for the purpose of the valuation. The drafting of these directions is continually evolving and this tends to give rise to novel problems of interpretation and valuation either because the draftsman has not fully appreciated the valuation consequences or difficulties produced by his direction or because a new direction does not fit comfortably with an already conventional one. A different kind of difficulty arises where a direction that has come to be expected is omitted<sup>3</sup>.

Certain general principles are now well established as the basis for resolving difficulties in the interpretation of rent review clauses<sup>4</sup>;

- 448 (1) although the particular language used by the draftsman will always be of paramount importance, it is proper and only sensible, when construing a rent review clause, to have in mind what normally is the commercial purpose of such a clause, namely to keep the rent in line with current property values having regard to the current value of money and not to provide either party with a windfall arising from an artificial basis of valuation<sup>5</sup>;
- 449 (2) while effect must be given to agreed assumptions and disregards, subject thereto it is the real circumstances affecting the property which should be the basis of valuation<sup>6</sup> and further hypotheses should not be inferred from those expressed<sup>7</sup>;
- 450 (3) while the construction of the clause is a question of law for the decision of the court so that the valuer can know what is to be valued and upon the basis of which assumptions the valuation is to be made, it is not the function of the court to give directions as to how the valuer is to go about his task as by telling him which factors to take into account or the weight to attach to them<sup>8</sup>;
- 451 (4) to give commercial efficacy to a rent review provision and, in particular, the direction to ascertain an open market rent, it may be necessary to imply a counter-factual assumption<sup>9</sup> or disregard or to treat the terms of the lease as subject to some modification<sup>10</sup>.

There is nevertheless no presumption that parties to a commercial lease invariably intend that the rent should not in real terms fall below the market rent initially agreed upon<sup>11</sup> or that a rent review clause will always produce an increase in the rent<sup>12</sup>.

Where the lease fails to provide any valuation criteria, the court will not deny the landlord the benefit of the review<sup>13</sup> which the parties intended but will imply appropriate criteria such as that the rent is to be a 'fair' rent<sup>14</sup> or a rent such as would have been reasonable for the particular parties to have agreed<sup>15</sup> or that the review is to be to a 'fair and reasonable' rent<sup>16</sup>.

A determination of an expert may also be challenged after it was made if the court considers the wrong meaning of the lease provisions has been applied<sup>17</sup>. It is only in the case of some ambiguity, however, that the court can apply the principle of interpreting the lease in accordance with the commercial purpose of rent review<sup>18</sup>.

- 1 A fundamental assumption that does not correspond with reality, but which is almost always stipulated, is that the premises are vacant and available for letting: see PARA 309 post.
- 2 The concept of a rental valuation on a basis which disregards the effect on rent of tenant's improvements, the tenant's own occupation and goodwill is familiar from the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34 (as amended): see PARA 755 post.
- 3 As to what happens when such a direction is missing see PARAS 306-312 post.
- 4 The text set out in this paragraph draws heavily upon the judgment of Mummery J in British Airways plc v Heathrow Airport Ltd [1992] 1 EGLR 141 at 144.
- 5 Basingstoke and Deane Borough Council v Host Group Ltd [1988] 1 All ER 824, [1988] 1 WLR 348, CA; British Gas Corp v Universities Superannuation Scheme Ltd [1986] 1 All ER 978, [1986] 1 WLR 398; Equity and Law Life Assurance Society plc v Bodfield Ltd (1987) 54 P & CR 290, [1987] 1 EGLR 124, CA.

This is often referred to as 'the presumption of reality'. The presumption may operate in regard to the terms of the letting to be assumed (as in the cases cited in note 5 supra) or in regard to the state of the property to be assumed (see PARA 307 post) or in regard to other matters.
- 7 Cornwall Coast Country Club v Cardgrange Ltd [1987] 1 EGLR 146. Where a rent review clause specifies that rent will be determined by reference to 'notional premises', but fails to specify the exact location of such premises, so that it could give rise to various rental levels, the court will infer that the notional premises could only have been intended to be situated in a location comparable to the premises in question: Dukeminster (Ebbgate House One) Ltd v Somerfield Property Co Ltd (1997) 75 P & CR 154, [1997] 2 EGLR 125, CA.

If a rent review merely refers the issue of what rent increase is to be payable to a valuer, the court has no jurisdiction; but most leases contain a detailed set of directions as to the assumptions and disregards within which the valuer must act and the limit of that power is a matter of construction and a question of law. Unless the lease either expressly or by implication gives the valuer the sole and exclusive power to construe the lease as well as determine the rent, then the court can intervene if the valuer has gone outside his decision-making authority: National Grid Co plc v M25 Group Ltd [1999] 1 EGLR 65, CA, distinguishing Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v P & O Property Holdings Ltd [1993] 1 EGLR 164, CA. Most rent review clauses providing for expert determination will not give power to resolve issues of construction to the expert valuer; the court thus has power to resolve the issue of construction in advance of the expert's determination: see National Grid Co plc v M25 Group Ltd supra at 67-68, CA, per Mummery LJ.

305. Defining the rental value.

Rent review clauses necessarily require the valuer to ascertain rental value but may qualify this expression with words such as 'market', 'open market', 'rack', 'fair', 'reasonable', 'best' or 'highest'; but none of these qualifications seems to make any difference. It has been said that there is no difference between a market rent and an open market rent<sup>1</sup>; that in the expression 'market rack rental value' the word 'market' adds nothing to 'rack'<sup>2</sup> or vice versa<sup>3</sup>; and that in the commonly used formula 'the highest rent at which the premises might reasonably be expected to be let' the word 'highest' adds only emphasis because the rent at which premises might reasonably be expected to be let in the open market by a willing landlord is the highest rent available<sup>4</sup>. The open market<sup>5</sup> is a market which includes all possible tenants each of whom has had an equal opportunity of bidding to become the tenant on the letting<sup>6</sup>. There can be an open market even if the landlord is in a monopoly position and there is only one possible tenant<sup>7</sup>. A fair and/or reasonable rent is the same as a market rent in that it requires an objective assessment of the rent which could be obtained without taking into account considerations personal to the actual parties<sup>8</sup>. The concept of a reasonable rent differs from that of a rent which it would be reasonable for the tenant to pay, which will let in considerations personal to the actual parties such as whether the tenant should or would agree to pay rent for his own improvements<sup>9</sup>.

1 Sterling Land Office Developments Ltd v Lloyds Bank plc [1984] 2 EGLR 135, (1984) 271 Estates Gazette 894.

2 'Rack rent' usually means the full rent which the law permits to be recovered but in the context of rent review this will not limit the new rent to the amount permitted under a temporary counter-inflation provision: Compton Group Ltd v Estates Gazette Ltd (1977) 36 P & CR 148, [1977] 2 EGLR 73, CA; cf Newman v Dorrington Developments Ltd [1975] 3 All ER 928, [1975] 1 WLR 1642.

3 Royal Exchange Assurance v Bryant Samuel Properties (Coventry) Ltd [1985] 1 EGLR 84.

4 Daejan Investments Ltd v Cornwall Coast Country Club (1984) 50 P & CR 157, [1985] 1 EGLR 77. The terms of a rent review clause must be assessed on the basis of the terms subsisting at the rent review date; thus where the rent review clause provided that 'the lessee shall pay to the lessor a supplementary rent during the first 15 years of the term hereby demised' and that supplementary rent was no longer payable by the review date, the rent was to be assessed without any deduction for supplementary rent: Watergate Properties (Ellesmere) Ltd v Securicor Cash Services Ltd [2005] EWHC 3438 (Ch), sub nom Watergate Properties (Ellesmere) Ltd v Securicor Cash Services Ltd [2005] All ER (D) 109 (Nov).

5 'Open market' is a concept which is used in a number of ways. For the purposes of assets valuations different considerations apply; and the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors' Guidance Notes in relation to assets valuations should not be applied, and are not directed to apply, to the context of rent review.

It was suggested in Ponsford v HMS Aerosols Ltd supra that 'reasonable' would enable the valuer to disregard an exceptionally high or freak rent. It is also sometimes argued that 'best' or 'highest' entitles the valuer to take into account the bid of a special purchaser, but he is probably required to do that anyway: see IRC v Clay [1914] 3 KB 466, CA; Webber v Halifax Building Society [1985] 1 EGLR 58; First Leisure Trading Ltd v Dorita Properties Ltd [1991] 1 EGLR 133; British Airways plc v Heathrow Airport Ltd [1992] 1 EGLR 141.

306. The hypothetical parties.

Rent review clauses normally require the valuer to assess the rent on the basis of a letting in the open market by a willing landlord to a willing tenant. It is, however, implicit in the notion of a letting in the market that there is a landlord and a tenant willing to be party to it and so the omission of a stipulation that either or both parties are willing will not make any difference<sup>1</sup>. Both the willing landlord and the willing tenant are abstractions who do not have the personal characteristics of the actual parties. The willing landlord is not a person to whom it is a matter of indifference whether he lets on the valuation date or waits for the market to improve; and the willing tenant is a person actively seeking premises to fulfil needs which the premises in question could fulfil<sup>2</sup>. The actual tenant cannot be treated as a potential bidder in the market in his capacity as a hypothetically displaced occupant of the demised premises<sup>3</sup> but, if he would in any event in fact have been in the market for the demised premises on the valuation date, there is no rule of law which would exclude the effect of his bid<sup>4</sup>.

307. The hypothetical property.

A rent review clause generally requires the demised premises<sup>1</sup> to be valued but sometimes, particularly where it is anticipated that it will be difficult to find comparable properties because the premises are very large or unusual in some other respect, the rent is required to be fixed by reference to a specified hypothetical building<sup>2</sup> or by aggregating the value of its parts<sup>3</sup>.

Subject to the following exceptions and qualifications, the general rule is that the premises are to be valued as found on the valuation date<sup>4</sup> and so improvements carried out after the demise will fall to be valued<sup>5</sup>. The exceptions are:

- 452 (1) where there is some express provision to the contrary in the lease, such as a direction that tenant's improvements are to be disregarded<sup>6</sup>;
- 453 (2) where the property is in a defective condition because of the tenant's breach of covenant<sup>7</sup>;
- 454 (3) where the tenant's fixtures will be assumed to have been removed<sup>8</sup>;
- 455 (4) where the wording of the lease shows that what is to be valued is the site alone<sup>9</sup>.

A direction that premises are to be assumed to be available for letting for a specified purpose<sup>10</sup> or are fit for use for a specified purpose<sup>11</sup> does not justify valuing a building notionally adapted for that purpose. The common assumption that premises are 'fit for immediate occupation and use' has been held to mean merely that the building is free from defects and ready for the tenant to go in and fit out for his business<sup>12</sup>; and the purpose of an assumption that all fitting out works required by the hypothetical tenant have already been completed is to preclude the actual tenant from arguing for a discount on the ground that the hypothetical tenant would have required further or different works from those carried out by the actual tenant<sup>13</sup>.

If a tenant occupies adjacent land or buildings not demised to him in connection with the demised premises, he may become liable to pay rent for the adjacent land on review as if it were part of the demise<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to appurtenant rights and structures deemed to be included in the demise see PARAS 161, 165 ante. It is open to the parties to a lease to agree that the valuer is to assess the rent on the basis that, notwithstanding the reality, the land is still undeveloped (Braid v Walsall Metropolitan Borough Council (1998) 78 P & CR 94, [1998] EGCS 41, CA); but prima facie, the rental value of the premises for the purposes of a rent review clause in a lease is the value of the whole of the demised premises including any buildings on the land; whilst the parties to a lease are able to depart from that starting assumption, whether they have done so depends on the language used and a clear intention to displace the general rule has to be shown: Coors Holdings Ltd v Dow Properties Ltd [2006] EWHC 1862 (Ch), [2006] All ER (D) 58 (May) (where it was held that the terms of the lease set in the relevant factual context disclosed, with sufficient clarity, that for rent review purposes only that part of the demised premises which consisted of the site, excluding buildings, should be valued for the purposes of determining the open market rental value of the demised premises).

3 Eg as in Leigh v Certibilt Investments Ltd [1988] 1 EGLR 116. Aggregating the value of the parts will not, however, be appropriate where the valuer is directed to value the property as a whole: Royal Exchange Assurance v Bryant Samuel Properties (Coventry) Ltd [1985] 1 EGLR 84.

308. Tenant's improvements.

In the absence of a special direction improvements carried out or paid for by the tenant fall to be valued<sup>1</sup>. It is usual, however, for there to be an express direction that such improvements or their effect on rent are to be disregarded<sup>2</sup>. By an improvement is meant an addition or alteration to the premises as demised; and thus work carried out before the date of grant of the lease (which may include work done during the currency of a previous tenancy) will generally not count for this purpose<sup>3</sup>. In some cases<sup>4</sup>, however, the direction has been construed so as to apply to works carried out by the tenant prior to, but in anticipation of, the grant<sup>5</sup> or under a specifically enforceable agreement for lease<sup>6</sup>. Work carried out by the landlord's contractors to the tenant's order at his cost is a tenant's improvement<sup>7</sup>.

The disregard of tenant's improvements is often limited to improvements carried out:

- 456 (1) otherwise than in pursuance of an obligation to the landlord; and 457 (2) with his written consent.

Such an obligation does not have to be contained in the lease but may be imposed by another contractual document<sup>8</sup> or by a covenant to carry out works required by statute<sup>9</sup>. The usual form of covenant in a licence for alterations to do the works in a specified time or to a certain standard will not be construed as imposing an obligation to carry out the improvements<sup>10</sup>. Where the improvement is to be disregarded, an obligation to reinstate in the licence will also be disregarded<sup>11</sup>; and a provision in the licence that the lease is to apply as if the premises as altered had originally been comprised in the lease will not negative the disregard<sup>12</sup>. If the tenant has failed to obtain the landlord's consent for the improvement, the improvement will fall to be valued despite a provision that the tenant is to be assumed to have complied with his covenants<sup>13</sup>. Where improvements 'carried out by the tenant' are to be disregarded, then the tenant need not have physically carried out the work but must establish some involvement in identifying, supervising and/or financing the works, resulting in the specific improvements concerned<sup>14</sup>.

It is not always easy for the valuer to determine how to give effect to the direction to disregard improvements. He must choose a method which will distinguish fairly between any increase in the value of the property as let attributable to movements in the market and any increase attributable to the tenant's improvements; and the most direct way of doing this will usually be by reference to unimproved comparables. If he has to adopt an alternative method, the valuer must be careful not to measure value by direct reference to the cost of the improvements save to the extent that the bid of a potential tenant in the market would be influenced by that factor<sup>15</sup>; thus it will probably be wrong to measure the effect on rent of the improvements simply by devaluing their original cost adjusted for inflation<sup>16</sup>.

309. Vacant possession.

Rent review clauses normally provide that premises are to be valued on the basis that they are being let with vacant possession. The effect of this provision is that the tenant is to be deemed to have moved out or never to have occupied the premises<sup>1</sup>, that any sublettings which exist at the review date are to be ignored and that the tenant is to be assumed to have removed his tenant's fixtures<sup>2</sup>. Where the lease does not expressly provide that vacant possession is to be assumed, the normal assumption is that it is<sup>3</sup>; but whether this assumption is to be made requires the lease to be construed in the light of the circumstances surrounding the grant<sup>4</sup>. Directions that the valuer is to 'have regard to rental values of properties let with vacant possession'<sup>5</sup> and is to value the property 'as a whole'<sup>6</sup> and subject to the usual disregards<sup>7</sup> have been held to indicate that vacant possession is to be assumed. The opposite conclusion has been reached, however, where:

- 458 (1) a lease was granted subject to an existing tenancy<sup>8</sup>;
- 459 (2) a lease was granted in contemplation of the creation of subleases by reference to the rent of which the head rent was to be fixed and which would have coincident rent reviews<sup>9</sup>; and
- 460 (3) underlettings were mandated by the terms of the lease, the landlord could control the terms of the underlease and the rent review clause required the rent to be assessed on the assumption that the demised premises included the buildings which the undertenants were going to erect<sup>10</sup>.

PARAS 1386-2000)/7. RENT REVIEW/(3) VALUATION CRITERIA/310. Duration of the hypothetical tenancy.

310. Duration of the hypothetical tenancy.

There appears to be a strong presumption that the hypothetical tenancy will correspond to the actual term unexpired at the review date; thus, if the lease is silent as to the duration of the hypothetical tenancy or provides that it is to be on the same terms and conditions as the actual lease<sup>1</sup> or for a term equivalent to that of the actual lease<sup>2</sup>, the hypothetical term will normally be taken to run from the original term date, as opposed to the review date, so that on a grant at the review date the tenant would enjoy only the unexpired residue. It follows from this that the dates of rent reviews and of any options to break<sup>3</sup> in the hypothetical lease will be the same as in the actual lease. This presumption ought not, however, to be applied in a mechanistic manner, so that where the natural meaning of the clause in question is that the hypothetical term runs from the date of the relevant rent review date, and not from some earlier date (and, in particular, not from the date from which the term of the actual lease runs) then that natural meaning should be adopted<sup>4</sup>.

The valuer should take into account the tenant's prospects of renewing his tenancy at the end of the term<sup>5</sup> (unless he is directed to disregard statutory security of tenure<sup>6</sup>) and presumably also any entitlement to compensation he might have if renewal were successfully opposed.

The valuation significance of the length of the hypothetical term depends upon market conditions but a short term is likely to have a depressing effect upon the rent if it is insufficiently long to allow an incoming tenant to write down his fitting out costs<sup>7</sup>. For this reason review clauses often stipulate a minimum length of term to be assumed.

7 See Pivot Properties Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment (1980) 41 P & CR 248, [1980] 2 EGLR 126, CA. Presumably this factor would have had devastating consequences for the landlord in Toyota (GB) Ltd v Legal and General Assurance (Pensions Management) Ltd (1989) 59 P & CR 435, [1989] 2 EGLR 123, CA, had the hypothetical term been held to be for one year only in circumstances where statutory security of tenure was to be disregarded. See also Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Salisburys Handbags Ltd (1992) 65 P & CR 129, [1992] 1 EGLR 153 (where the combination of the length of the residue (85 years) and the fact that rent reviews were excluded from the hypothetical term caused the court to hold that the hypothetical term was to be such as the parties at each review date could reasonably expect to be granted at a fixed rack rent without provision for review).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/7. RENT REVIEW/(3) VALUATION CRITERIA/311. Terms of the hypothetical tenancy.

311. Terms of the hypothetical tenancy.

Save where the rent review clause requires expressly or by necessary implication that the valuation be made on a basis which departs in some respect from the subsisting terms of the actual lease, the parties are to be taken to have intended that the notional letting postulated by the clause is to be on the same terms, other than as to quantum of rent, as those still subsisting between the parties in the actual subsisting lease<sup>1</sup>. The clause will be construed, if possible, so as not to make the tenant pay for something which he has not got<sup>2</sup>. These presumptions require any actual variations in the terms of the lease to be taken into account<sup>3</sup>, though not variations personal to a particular tenant or terms in a licence which do not amount to variations of the lease<sup>4</sup>. The possibility that the landlord might agree to a future variation or waive his contractual rights may not, however, be taken into account<sup>5</sup>, nor may a unilateral waiver by the landlord not requested by the tenant<sup>6</sup>; but the fact that a covenant is qualified by words providing that the giving of the landlord's consent is not to be unreasonably withheld should be taken into account<sup>7</sup>.

A particular application of the above general presumption arises in connection with 'rent exclusion provisions'<sup>8</sup>, that is to say directions that the valuer is to assume a letting on the terms of the lease 'other than as to rent' or 'other than those relating to rent'<sup>9</sup> or some similar expression. The question has arisen whether expressions of this kind are supposed to postulate a letting without provision for further rent review, thus enhancing the rental value<sup>10</sup>. The correct approach to the construction of these provisions is that effect must be given to clear words which require the rent review provision, as opposed to all provisions as to rent, to be disregarded, however wayward the result; but, subject thereto, it is proper to give effect to the underlying commercial purpose of rent review clauses and construe the words so as to enable further rent reviews to be taken into account<sup>11</sup>.

Sometimes, however, the terms of the actual lease require modification in their application to the hypothetical lease. One such case is where the use of the property is restricted to use by a named individual. In such a case it is to be assumed that the use will be restricted to the hypothetical tenant but not to the actual tenant because that would be inconsistent with the assumption of a letting in the open market<sup>12</sup>. Such a modification will not be made where the use is restricted merely to a particular class of business or permits a variety of uses<sup>13</sup>.

Another such modification to the terms of the actual lease will be made where the lease contains a covenant by the tenant to pay a rent in addition to the open market rent; in such a case the hypothetical lease will be assumed not to contain the obligation to pay the additional rent<sup>14</sup>. Similarly, where the rent payable on review is a percentage of the open market value, the open market value will be assessed on the basis of a letting which provides for review to full market value<sup>15</sup>.

- 8 'Rent exclusion provision' is an expression coined by Sir Nicholas Browne-Wilkinson V-C in British Gas Corpn v Universities Superannuation Scheme Ltd [1986] 1 All ER 978, [1986] 1 WLR 398.
- 9 This expression is also to be found in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34(1) (as amended): see PARA 753 post.
- 10 This phenomenon is commonly called 'uplift' or 'overage' and at least for a time an uplift of 1% per annum for each year in excess of five between reviews became conventional. For an example see National Westminster Bank plc v Arthur Young McClelland Moores & Co [1985] 1 EGLR 61, a decision said to have been plainly wrong in Arnold v National Westminster Bank plc [1991] 2 AC 93, [1991] 3 All ER 41, HL.
- 11 These guidelines were laid down in British Gas Corpn v Universities Superannuation Scheme Ltd [1986] 1 All ER 978, [1986] 1 WLR 398 and approved in Equity and Law Life Assurance Society plc v Bodfield Ltd (1987) 54 P & CR 290, [1987] 1 EGLR 124, CA. ### 312. Other assumptions and disregards.

It is commonly provided<sup>1</sup> in rent review clauses that the premises are to be assumed to be let without a fine or premium<sup>2</sup>, that no work has been done which would diminish the rental value<sup>3</sup>, that, if the premises have been damaged or destroyed, they have been fully restored by the review date<sup>4</sup> and that no reduction is to be made on account of any rental concession or rent-free period which might have been granted to an incoming tenant for fitting out<sup>5</sup>.

The valuer must give effect to all the assumptions which he is expressly directed to make; otherwise he should value what the tenant has got<sup>6</sup>. He should not infer further assumptions from those he has been given<sup>7</sup>; nor should he make positive assumptions about matters which he has been told to disregard<sup>8</sup>.

In addition to the direction to disregard tenant's improvements, there is also usually a direction to disregard the effect on rent of the tenant's occupation and of any goodwill attached to the premises by reason of the carrying on of the tenant's business<sup>9</sup>. It follows from a direction to disregard the tenant's occupation that goodwill generated by that occupation must also be disregarded<sup>10</sup>.

In a rare case it may be necessary to imply a disregard, for example of the fact that the premises have no independent access, in order to give effect to the hypothesis of a letting in the open market<sup>11</sup>.

1    In addition to the other assumptions commonly found in rent review clauses: see PARAS 305-311 ante.

2    This probably includes a reverse premium.

3    This is to catch works which might not be classified as 'improvements' and so be disregarded: see PARA 308 ante.

4    This is in case the damage is so recent or extensive that the assumption that the tenant has complied with all his covenants, including his repairing covenant, would not cover the situation.

5    A clause which excludes the assumption that a hypothetical tenant would have the expense of moving in and fitting out is more in accordance with the presumption of reality (as to which see PARA 304 the text and note 6 ante) than one which does not: Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd v National Westminster Bank plc, Scottish Amicable Life Assurance Society v Middleton Potts & Co, Broadgate Square plc v Lehman Brothers Ltd, Prudential Nominees Ltd v Greenham Trading Ltd [1995] 1 EGLR 97, [1995] 01 EG 111, CA. On the other hand, a clause which deems the market rent to be the headline rent obtainable after a rent-free period granted simply to disguise the fall in the rental value of the property is not in accordance with the basic purpose of a rent review clause. It enables the landlord to obtain an increase in rent without any rise in property values or fall in the value of the money by reason of changes in the way the market is choosing to structure the financial packaging of the deal. Therefore, in the absence of unambiguous language, a court should not be ready to construe a rent review clause as having this effect: Co-operative Wholesale Society Ltd v National Westminster Bank plc, Scottish Amicable Life Assurance Society v Middleton Potts & Co, Broadgate Square plc v Lehman Brothers Ltd, Prudential Nominees Ltd v Greenham Trading Ltd supra (where a clause providing that the open market rent was to be that which would become payable after the expiry of a rent-free period of such length as would be negotiated in the open market was construed in favour of the landlord as there was no possible ambiguity; but a clause providing that the rent was to be at the rate payable following the expiry of any rent-free periods or periods at concessionary rents which might be granted on a new letting was construed in favour of the tenant; those words were to be confined to rent-free periods for fitting out and did not include inducement rent-free periods so that the reviewed rent was not to be based on headline figures).

6    See PARA 304 note 6 ante.

7    Eg the direction to assume vacant possession means that the tenant is not occupying the demised premises but this does not justify an inquiry into what he would be doing in those circumstances and whether he would be accommodated in those circumstances adequately, inadequately or not at all.

8    Cornwall Coast Country Club v Cardgrange Ltd [1987] 1 EGLR 146.

9    See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 34 (as amended) which is sometimes incorporated by reference, which does not apply to the occupation or goodwill of subtenants: see PARAS 753, 755 post. The purpose of these disregards is to negative the effect of the 'sitting tenant's overbid' but not, it seems, to make inadmissible the tenant's trading accounts: Harewood Hotels Ltd v Harris [1958] 1 All ER 104, [1958] 1 WLR 108, CA; considered in Cornwall Coast Country Club v Cardgrange Ltd [1987] 1 EGLR 146. The disregard of goodwill does not prevent the rent of a 'destination restaurant', ie one visited for its food or atmosphere rather than its location, from being valued by reference to rents paid for other destination restaurants: My Kinda Town Ltd v Castlebrook Properties Ltd [1986] 1 EGLR 121.

10   Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Grand Metropolitan Estate Ltd [1993] 2 EGLR 153, [1993] 32 EG 74.

In fixing the reviewed rent of a public sector tenancy, the court ought not to take account of the fact that the tenant has exercised, or might exercise, his right to buy the freehold at a discount to the market value under the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (ss 118-188) (as amended) (see PARA 1795 et seq post): Dickinson v Enfield London Borough Council 29 HLR 465, [1996] 2 EGLR 88, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/7. RENT REVIEW/(3) VALUATION CRITERIA/313. Planning.

313. Planning.

The valuer is not entitled to reflect the possibility that the hypothetical tenant will use the property in breach of planning control<sup>1</sup> but should not exclude any potential tenant who might wish to take a lease of the building for any purpose for which it could physically and legally be used<sup>2</sup>. He may, therefore, take account of an actual planning permission obtained by the landlord for a use other than that contemplated by the tenant when he took the building, as long as that use is permitted by the terms of the lease, and may also take into account any hope value attaching to the possibility of obtaining a planning permission or other necessary licence in the future<sup>3</sup>.

Where the rent review clause provides that the property is to be assumed to be available for letting<sup>4</sup> or to be let<sup>5</sup> for a specified purpose, it is to be assumed that that purpose is lawful for the purposes of planning control even if it is not; but the fact that the property is to be assumed to be let on terms which permit a particular use does not justify an assumption that that use is lawful<sup>6</sup>. The replacement of the use classes order by reference to which the permitted use is defined does not affect the meaning of the covenant or extend the permitted use<sup>7</sup>.

(4) RESOLUTION OF DISPUTES

314. Experts and arbitrators.

An expert appointed to decide a rent review is not limited by the evidence and submissions made to him by the parties<sup>1</sup>. The scope of a valuer appointed as an expert to resolve all questions relating to the determination of the rent, thereby excluding the jurisdiction of the court, will depend on the terms of the lease itself. Most leases contain a detailed set of directions as to the assumptions and disregards within which the expert valuer must act and the limit of that power is a matter of construction and a question of law. Unless the lease either expressly or by implication gives the valuer the sole and exclusive power to construe the lease as well as determine the rent, then the court can intervene if the valuer has gone outside his decision-making authority and it also has power to resolve the issue of construction in advance of the expert's determination. A determination of an expert can also be challenged after it was made if the court considers the wrong meaning of the lease provisions has been applied<sup>2</sup>. If as a matter of law the court has jurisdiction to interpret the words at issue, then the contractual obligation to be undertaken will be that which the court decides; for the parties to be bound by that interpretation is not to rewrite the contract embodied in the terms of the lease<sup>3</sup>. The expert owes the parties a duty of care in making his valuation<sup>4</sup> but, if he reasonably considers that they have provided him with enough evidence, he is not obliged to make further investigations<sup>5</sup>. An expert's determination given without reasons is generally binding upon the parties unless tainted by fraud or collusion<sup>6</sup>.

An arbitrator must determine the rent on the evidence before him; he is, however, entitled and intended to use his own expertise in evaluating the evidence<sup>7</sup> and he may arrive at his award by deploying the evidence in a way that is materially different from the way in which the parties' valuers deployed it, providing that the award addresses a matter that has been put into the arena by those valuers and with which they have had an opportunity to deal<sup>8</sup>. The attribution of weight to different comparables is a matter of judgment for the arbitrator<sup>9</sup>. The conduct of the reference is governed by the Arbitration Act 1996<sup>10</sup>. An arbitrator is not liable for negligence<sup>11</sup>.

Rent review clauses generally provide for the appointment of a valuer by the President of the Royal Institution of Chartered Surveyors if the parties cannot agree upon a choice. An application by letter, as opposed to on the official form, and unaccompanied by the prescribed fee is valid for the purposes of the lease<sup>12</sup>. An injunction does not lie to restrain the President from making an appointment, even if the application to him to do so is premature<sup>13</sup>. An appointment will be valid if it accords with the terms of the lease. The President's contract is with the party applying for the appointment, and he cannot be liable for breach of contract if the appointment is invalid; at most, he will owe a duty of care to the other party but he will not be in breach of that duty if the other party does not raise an issue prior to the appointment. It is not the function of the President to determine any legal questions and he can decline to make an appointment where the parties are in issue as to the correct categorisation of the premises until common ground has been reached<sup>14</sup>.

315. Points of law.

If a point of law arises in a rent review dispute, it may be dealt with in several ways:

- 461 (1) an application may be made to the court for a declaration as to the construction of the clause so that the valuer can know what it is that he has to value<sup>1</sup>; in a case governed by an arbitration clause, it would be open to the other party to apply for a stay of such proceedings<sup>2</sup>, but in practice this is rarely done in rent review disputes;
- 462 (2) if there is a reference to arbitration, the court may be asked to determine a preliminary point of law if all the parties to the reference consent or the arbitrator gives permission and the court is satisfied that determination of the question is likely to produce substantial savings in costs and that the application was made without delay<sup>3</sup>; the court is precluded from entertaining an application unless satisfied that the point of law in question substantially affects the rights of one or more of the parties<sup>4</sup>; even if these conditions are satisfied, the court has a discretion whether to entertain the application<sup>5</sup>;
- 463 (3) the arbitrator may make a separate award deciding the preliminary point<sup>6</sup>, which award could then be made the subject of an appeal<sup>7</sup>;
- 464 (4) the parties can invite the arbitrator to make his final award in a form which states how he has decided the point of law and what figure he would have awarded had he decided it the other way<sup>8</sup>.

1 The court's jurisdiction to decide the point is not ousted by the parties having agreed to have the rent review decided by an expert: Postel Properties Ltd v Greenwell (1992) 65 P & CR 239, [1992] 2 EGLR 130. It was held in Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v P & O Property Holdings Ltd [1993] 1 EGLR 164 at 167, CA (not a rent review case), that if the parties did not agree to make such an application to the court, an injunction would not be granted to prevent the expert proceeding to make his decision and that it was his duty to do so; but in that case the agreement specifically provided that the particular matters in question were for the determination of the expert and his power to do so was not limited. The decision in Norwich Union Life Insurance Society v P & O Property Holdings Ltd supra has been distinguished for the purposes of rent review: see National Grid Co plc v M25 Group Ltd [1999] 1 EGLR 65, [1999] 08 EG 169, CA.

PARAS 1386-2000)/7. RENT REVIEW/(4) RESOLUTION OF DISPUTES/316. Procedural matters in rent review arbitrations.

316. Procedural matters in rent review arbitrations.

It is for the arbitral tribunal to decide all procedural and evidential matters<sup>1</sup>, subject to the right of the parties to agree any matter<sup>2</sup>, including:

- 465 (1) whether any and if so which documents or classes of documents should be disclosed between and produced by the parties and at what stage<sup>3</sup>;
- 466 (2) whether to apply strict rules of evidence<sup>4</sup> or any other rules<sup>5</sup> as to the admissibility, relevance or weight of any material (oral, written or other) sought to be tendered on any matters of fact or opinion, and the time, manner and form in which such material should be exchanged and presented<sup>6</sup>; and
- 467 (3) whether and to what extent there should be oral or written evidence or submissions<sup>7</sup>.

The Court of Appeal has given guidance on the meaning and use of comparables in arbitration proceedings<sup>8</sup>.

The parties are free to agree on the form of an award<sup>9</sup> but if or to the extent that there is no such agreement, the award must be in writing signed by all the arbitrators or all those assenting to the award, and must contain the reasons for the award unless it is an agreed award or the parties have agreed to dispense with reasons<sup>10</sup>. Without reasons, the award may not be appealed against<sup>11</sup>. It is common practice to ask the arbitrator to make an award final save as to costs so that the parties may have an opportunity to address representations to him on costs in the light of his award and any offers made 'without prejudice save as to costs'<sup>12</sup> which may have been made prior to or in the course of the arbitration.

317. Appeals against arbitration awards.

A party to arbitral proceedings may, upon notice to the other parties and to the arbitral tribunal, appeal to the court on a question of law arising out of an award made in the proceedings<sup>1</sup>. An agreement to dispense with reasons for the arbitrator's award<sup>2</sup> is to be considered an agreement to exclude the court's jurisdiction under this provision<sup>3</sup>.

No such appeal may be brought except:

- 468 (1) with the agreement of all the other parties to the proceedings; or
- 469 (2) with the leave of the court<sup>4</sup>.

Nor may an appeal be brought if the applicant or appellant has not first exhausted:

- 470 (a) any available arbitral process of appeal or review; and
- 471 (b) any available recourse under the statutory provision<sup>5</sup> for correction of the award or the making of an additional award<sup>6</sup>.

Any appeal must be brought within 28 days of the date of the award or, if there has been any arbitral process of appeal or review, of the date when the applicant or appellant was notified of the result of that process<sup>7</sup>.

The court may order the arbitrator to state the reasons for his award in more detail in order that it may consider the appeal<sup>8</sup>, and may order the appellant to provide security for the costs of the appeal and direct that the appeal be dismissed if the order is not complied with<sup>9</sup>.

On an appeal the court may by order:

- 472 (i) confirm the award;
- 473 (ii) vary the award;
- 474 (iii) remit the award to the arbitrator, in whole or in part, for reconsideration in the light of the court's determination; or
- 475 (iv) set aside the award in whole or in part, if satisfied that it would be inappropriate to remit the matters in question to the arbitrator for reconsideration<sup>10</sup>.

The decision of the court on such an appeal is to be treated as a judgment of the court for the purposes of a further appeal; but no such appeal lies without the leave of the court which may not be given unless the court considers that the question is one of general importance or is one which for some other special reason should be considered by the Court of Appeal<sup>11</sup>.

Where the award is:

- 476 (A) varied on appeal, the variation has effect as part of the arbitrator's award;
- 477 (B) remitted to the arbitrator, in whole or in part, for reconsideration, the arbitrator must make a fresh award in respect of the matters remitted within three months of the date of the order for remission or such longer or shorter period as the court may direct;

478 (c) set aside or declared to be of no effect, in whole or in part, the court may also order that any provision that an award is a condition precedent to the bringing of legal proceedings in respect of a matter to which the arbitration agreement applies is of no effect as regards the subject matter of the award or, as the case may be, the relevant part of the award<sup>12</sup>.

1 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 69(1); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1278.

3 See ibid s 69(1).

4 See ibid s 69(2). Leave to appeal may be given only if the court is satisfied: (1) that the determination of the question will substantially affect the rights of one or more of the parties; (2) that the question is one which the arbitrator was asked to determine; (3) that, on the basis of the findings of fact in the award (a) the decision of the arbitrator on the question is obviously wrong; or (b) the question is one of general public importance and the decision of the arbitrator is at least open to serious doubt; and (4) that, despite the agreement of the parties to resolve the matter by arbitration, it is just and proper in all the circumstances for the court to determine the question: see s 69(3). An application for leave to appeal must identify the question of law to be determined and state the grounds on which it is alleged that leave to appeal should be granted: s 69(4). The court must determine an application for leave to appeal without a hearing unless it appears to the court that a hearing is required: s 69(5). The leave of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court to grant or refuse leave to appeal: s 69(6). Leave to appeal may be granted subject to conditions: see s 70(8). It is not to be given for the purpose of 'fine tuning': Manders Property (Estates) Ltd v Magnet House Properties Ltd [1989] 2 EGLR 126. As to leave to appeal in rent review cases see Ipswich Borough Council v Fisons plc [1990] Ch 709, [1990] 1 All ER 730, CA, disapproving Lucas Industries plc v Welsh Development Agency [1986] Ch 500, [1986] 2 All ER 858 (where it had been held that leave should be given if the judge was in real doubt whether the arbitrator was right). The test laid down in Ipswich Borough Council v Fisons plc supra makes it clear that the test is flexible but is significantly stricter in a 'one off' case. For examples of the application of this test see Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Trafalgar House Group Estates Ltd [1991] 1 EGLR 127, CA; Lex Services plc v Oriel House BV [1991] 2 EGLR 126. ### 318. Other challenges to arbitration awards.

A party to arbitral proceedings may, upon notice to the other parties and to the arbitrator:

- 479 (1) apply to the court challenging any award of the arbitrator as to his substantive jurisdiction, or for an order declaring an award made by the arbitrator on the merits to be of no effect, in whole or in part, because he did not have substantive jurisdiction<sup>1</sup>;
- 480 (2) apply to the court challenging an award in the proceedings on the ground of serious irregularity affecting the arbitrator, the proceedings or the award<sup>2</sup>.

'Serious irregularity' means an irregularity of one or more of the following kinds which the court considers has caused or will cause substantial injustice<sup>3</sup> to the applicant:

- 481 (a) failure by the arbitrator to comply with his general statutory duty<sup>4</sup>;
- 482 (b) the arbitrator exceeding his powers, otherwise than by exceeding his substantive jurisdiction under head (1) above;
- 483 (c) failure by the arbitrator to conduct the proceedings in accordance with the procedure agreed by the parties<sup>5</sup>;
- 484 (d) failure by the arbitrator to deal with all the issues that were put to him<sup>6</sup>;
- 485 (e) any arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with powers in relation to the proceedings or the award exceeding its powers;
- 486 (f) uncertainty or ambiguity as to the effect of the award;
- 487 (g) the award being obtained by fraud, or the award or the way in which it was procured being contrary to public policy;
- 488 (h) failure to comply with the requirements as to the form of the award; or
- 489 (i) any irregularity in the conduct of the proceedings or in the award which is admitted by the arbitrator or by any arbitral or other institution or person vested by the parties with powers in relation to the proceedings or the award<sup>7</sup>.

The issue is not whether the arbitrator came to the right conclusion; the sole issue is whether he committed a serious irregularity in coming to the conclusion that he did<sup>8</sup>. Pursuit of the overall objective of arbitral proceedings, and the fair resolution of disputes by an impartial tribunal without unnecessary delay or expense, requires that the courts accord a reasonably generous margin of appreciation to arbitrators in the discharge of their functions<sup>9</sup>.

Any application under head (1) or head (2) above must be brought within 28 days of the date of the award or, if there has been any arbitral process of appeal or review, of the date when the applicant or appellant was notified of the result of that process<sup>10</sup>. No such application may be brought if the applicant has not first exhausted:

- 490 (i) any available arbitral process of appeal or review; and
- 491 (ii) any available recourse under the statutory provision<sup>11</sup> for correction of the award or the making of an additional award<sup>12</sup>.

A party who continues to take part in the proceedings without raising an objection that the arbitrator lacks substantive jurisdiction, that the proceedings have been improperly conducted, that there has been a failure to comply with the arbitration agreement or with any relevant statutory provision<sup>13</sup> or that there has been any other irregularity affecting the tribunal or the proceedings, may not raise that objection later, before the tribunal or the court, unless he shows that, at the time he took part or continued to take part in the proceedings, he did not know and could not with reasonable diligence have discovered the grounds for the objection<sup>14</sup>.

On an application under head (1) above, the court may confirm the award, vary the award, or set aside the award in whole or in part<sup>15</sup>. On an application under head (2) above, if there is shown to be serious irregularity affecting the tribunal, the proceedings or the award, the court may:

- 492 (A) remit the award to the arbitrator, in whole or in part, for reconsideration;
- 493 (B) set the award aside in whole or in part; or
- 494 (C) declare the award to be of no effect, in whole or in part, but may not exercise its power to set aside or to declare an award to be of no effect, in whole or in part, unless it is satisfied that it would be inappropriate to remit the matters in question to the tribunal for reconsideration<sup>16</sup>. Where the award is remitted to the arbitrator, in whole or in part, for reconsideration, the arbitrator must make a fresh award in respect of the matters remitted within three months of the date of the order for remission or such longer or shorter period as the court may direct; and where it is set aside or declared to be of no effect, in whole or in part, the court may also order that any provision that an award is a condition precedent to the bringing of legal proceedings in respect of a matter to which the arbitration agreement applies is of no effect as regards the subject matter of the award or, as the case may be, the relevant part of the award<sup>17</sup>.

The leave of the court is required for any appeal from a decision of the court under these provisions<sup>18</sup>.

1 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 67(1); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1276. For an unsuccessful challenge under this provision see eg Macepark (Whittlebury) Ltd v Sargeant [2002] All ER (D) 279 (Jul), cited in PARA 158 ante (not a rent review case).

2 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 68(1); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1277. An arbitration claim form relating to a landlord and tenant dispute must be issued in the Chancery Division of the High Court: Practice Direction--Arbitration PD 62 para 2.3(2).

3 In deciding whether a serious irregularity has caused substantial injustice, the court should not decide what rent the arbitrator might have fixed if he had dealt with the case differently, but should try to assess how the aggrieved party would have conducted his case but for the irregularity. Only if the aggrieved party has suffered a substantial injustice because he was unable to present his case and so obtain a fair hearing will the irregularity be treated as falling within the Arbitration Act 1996 s 68: see Checkpoint Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund [2003] EWCA Civ 84 at [57]-[58], [2003] 1 EGLR 1, [2003] All ER (D) 56 (Feb) per Ward LJ; Warborough Investments Ltd v S Robinson & Sons (Holdings) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 751 at [56]-[60], [2004] 2 P & CR 68, [2003] 2 EGLR 149 per Jonathan Parker LJ. The test of 'substantial injustice' is intended to be applied by way of a support of the arbitral process and not by way of interference with that process. It is only in those cases where it can be said that what has happened was so far removed from what could reasonably be expected of the arbitral process that the court will interfere. The Arbitration Act 1996 s 68 is a longstop, which is available only in extreme cases where the arbitrator has gone so wrong in his conduct of the arbitration that justice calls out for it to be corrected; it is not a soft alternative to an application for leave to appeal: see Checkpoint Ltd v Strathclyde Pension Fund supra at [59] per Ward LJ.

4 In the context of rent review the following behaviour has been held to justify the remission or setting aside of an award under the previous legislation: (1) failure to copy one party's communications to the arbitrator to the other side (Shield Properties & Investment Ltd v Anglo-Overseas Transport Co Ltd [1985] 1 EGLR 7); (2) failure to enforce a direction that comparables should be within the direct knowledge of the witness or verified by documentary evidence (Control Securities plc v Spencer [1989] 1 EGLR 136); (3) the omission of the arbitrator to forward a letter to the other side (Control Securities plc v Spencer supra); (4) taking into account material obtained from the arbitrator's own knowledge or research without giving the parties an opportunity to deal with le under the Arbitration Act 1996 s 33 (general duty of tribunal act fairly and impartially as between the parties, giving each party a reasonable opportunity of putting his case and dealing with that of his opponent, and to adopt procedures suitable to the circumstances of the particular case, avoiding unnecessary delay or expense, so as to provide a fair means for the resolution of the matters falling to be determined): see ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1243. See eg St George's Investment Co v Gemini Consulting Ltd [2004] EWHC 2353 (Ch), [2005] 1 EGLR 5, [2004] All ER (D) 105 (Oct) (arbitrator applied further discounts for certain onerous features in the lease, which neither party had suggested should be made; the award thus produced a result that was not the subject of submission and which the landlord had had no opportunity to answer); Guardcliffe Properties Ltd v City & St James Property Holdings [2003] EWHC 215 (Ch), [2003] 2 EGLR 16, [2003] All ER (D) 53 (Feb) (decision to allow an annual equivalent of £10,000 pa in respect of a rent-free period without allowing the parties an opportunity to comment upon the principle of a rent-free period and its duration; also allowance of £8,500 pa in respect of the upper floors of the property when not only was the possibility of such an allowance not raised in the arbitral proceedings, but it went beyond the contention of the defendant's own surveyor, who was simply asking that no rental value be attributed to the upper parts).

it (Top Shop Estates Ltd v Danino, Top Shop Estates Ltd v Tandy Corp [1985] 1 EGLR 9); (5) making reductions in the rates derived from comparables without giving the parties an opportunity to comment on them (Handley v Nationwide Anglia Building Society [1992] 2 EGLR 114); (6) departing from the agreed statement of facts without giving the parties an opportunity to be heard on the question (Techno Ltd v Allied Dunbar Assurance plc [1993] 1 EGLR 29); (7) failing to send a copy of each party's cross-representations to the other (Banner Industrial and Commercial Properties Ltd v Clark Paterson Ltd [1990] 2 EGLR 139).

5 In the context of rent review the following behaviour has been held to justify the remission or setting aside of an award under the previous legislation: (1) the failure of the arbitrator, contrary to a prior direction, to raise with the parties whether they wanted an oral hearing (Control Securities plc v Spencer [1989] 1 EGLR 136); (2) failing to have an oral hearing after directing that there should be one if either party called for it and one party had done so (Henry Sotheran Ltd v Norwich Union Life Insurance Society [1992] 2 EGLR 9, [1992] 31 EG 70); (3) failure to inspect comparable properties in accordance with directions given to the parties (Oakstead Garages Ltd v Leach Pension Scheme (Trustees) Ltd [1996] 1 EGLR 26, [1996] 24 EG 147).

6 Eg, in the context of rent review, rejecting a zoning analysis applied by both parties' surveyors without giving either an opportunity to express a view on the arbitrator's rejection of such an approach: Zermalt Holdings SA v Nu-Life Upholstery Repairs Ltd [1985] 2 EGLR 14. Failure to consider whether the landlord had alternatives, such as subdivision, outside the transactional framework laid down by the lease does not fall within this head: Marklands Ltd v Virgin Retail Ltd [2003] EWHC 3428 (Ch), [2004] 2 EGLR 43, [2003] All ER (D) 438 (Nov).

8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE

(1) SERVICE CHARGES

(i) General Principles

319. Nature of service charge.

In contrast to rent strictly so called<sup>1</sup>, other sums of money are often payable by the tenant to the landlord<sup>2</sup> by reason of the tenant's covenants in the lease. For example, the tenant may covenant to reimburse the landlord the cost of insuring the premises, or, in a lease of a flat, to reimburse the landlord a proportionate part of the landlord's expenditure in carrying out repairs to the building of which the flat forms a part. These covenanted sums are not rents unless they are expressly reserved as rents<sup>3</sup>, and, if they are not reserved as a rent and are unpaid, the landlord will not be able to distrain<sup>4</sup> or to re-enter under any proviso for re-entry upon non-payment of rent, but must rely on the tenant's non-payment as a breach of his covenant to pay the relevant sum, so that the landlord will be able to re-enter only pursuant to the proviso for re-entry for breach of covenant and must comply with the statutory provisions relating to it<sup>5</sup>. There is now statutory protection for tenants of dwellings under long leases against forfeiture or re-entry by the landlord where the tenant has failed to pay an amount consisting of rent, service charges or administration charges, or a combination of them, if the outstanding sum is a small one and has not been payable for more than a prescribed period<sup>6</sup>. There is also a statutory restriction on the termination of a tenancy of a dwelling for failure to pay a service charge or administration charge<sup>7</sup>.

In modern conveyancing practice, by far the most usual and most important covenanted sum (or additional rent) is that which refers to the cost or value of repairs, maintenance and services provided to the tenant ('service charges'<sup>8</sup>), whether reserved as a rent or not. It is possible to have a service charge review clause, on the lines of a rent review clause<sup>9</sup>, but the almost invariable practice is to stipulate that the service charge is to be paid by reference to a formula<sup>10</sup>, which usually imposes upon the tenant liability for a fixed percentage, or a fair proportion to be determined pursuant to a specified procedure, of the cost<sup>11</sup> to the landlord of providing the relevant services and repairs. Leases often make performance of the landlord's obligation to provide services subject to payment of the service charge; but this does not make payment a condition precedent to the provision of the services<sup>12</sup>.

A clause in a lease permitting the recovery of the landlord's legal costs by way of service charge will be construed strictly against the landlord<sup>13</sup>. Where the lease is a long lease of a dwelling, the tenant may make an application for an order that all or any of such costs are not to be taken into account in determining the amount of any service charge payable<sup>14</sup>.

1 As to the nature of a rent as a payment (or thing) reserved from and notionally issuing out of the demised premises see PARA 242 et seq ante.

2 The sums may be payable to a third person, eg under the frequent practice by which the tenant covenants to pay a service charge to a maintenance company or trustee.

3 It is the modern and prudent practice to reserve such payments as rents.

4 As to distress for rent see PARA 282 ante.

5 He will, therefore, have to serve notice under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 146 (as amended), in respect of the breach as a preliminary to the forfeiture claim: see PARAS 619-620 post. The distinction between a service charge which is reserved as a rent and one which is a mere covenanted sum is also important where the lease contains a contractual provision for the payment of interest upon late rents, if that provision does not in terms refer also to other payments due under the lease.

The relationship between a tenant's claim for damages for breach of covenant and a landlord's claim for unpaid service charges is such that the doctrine of equitable set-off may be applied: Filross Securities Ltd v Midgeley (1998) 31 HLR 465, [1998] 3 EGLR 43, CA. There can, however, be no such set-off where a manager appointed by a leasehold valuation tribunal under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt II (ss 21-24) (as amended) (see PARA 399 et seq post) claims payment of service charges from a tenant and the tenant claims damages for breach of covenant from the landlord, as there is no mutuality between the two claims: see Taylor v Blaquiére [2002] EWCA Civ 1633, [2003] 1 WLR 379, [2002] All ER (D) 190 (Nov).

Where a consent order settled forfeiture proceedings between a tenant and a landlord, in relation to a dispute concerning service charges, on the terms that a specified sum could not be recovered from the tenant, it did not, on its true construction, preclude the landlord from recovering that sum as a management company from its tenant as a shareholder, pursuant to the articles of association: see Morshead Mansions Ltd v Mactra Properties Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 492, [2006] All ER (D) 17 (Apr).

6 See the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 167; and PARA 612 post.

7 See the Housing Act 1996 s 81 (as amended); and PARA 610 post.

8 For the meaning of 'service charge' and 'relevant costs' for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 18-40 (as amended), which sets out a statutory code applying to tenancies of dwellings, see PARA 326 post. There is, however, no statutory definition of 'services'.

9 See PARA 292 ante. For an example of a service charge indexed to the general index of retail trade prices see Cumshaw Ltd v Bowen [1987] 1 EGLR 30.

10 Ie as with rent variation or escalation clauses: see PARA 292 ante.

11 For these purposes, 'cost' can sometimes include a detriment suffered by the landlord, such as the loss of the rent which the landlord otherwise would have been able to recover for a flat provided for a porter or caretaker: Agavil Investments Ltd v Corner (3 October 1975, unreported), CA. A similar result is achieved in cases in which fair rents are being determined under the Rent Act 1977: see PARA 921 post. The lease may also provide that the service charge is to include the cost of borrowing to finance services: Boldmark Ltd v Cohen (1985) 19 HLR 136, [1986] 1 EGLR 47, CA (lease held not to do so); Skilleter v Charles (1991) 24 HLR 421, [1992] 1 EGLR 73, CA (lease held to do so).

The costs which are recoverable by way of service charge will depend upon the wording of the lease and the facts of the individual case: see eg Embassy Court Residents Association v Lipman [1984] 2 EGLR 60, (1984) 271 Estates Gazette 545, CA (term implied entitling a residents' association to recover the cost of employing managing agents); Jollybird Ltd v Fairzone Ltd [1990] 2 EGLR 55, CA (provisions of a lease construed as not entitling the landlord to recover a profit element in addition to the actual cost of supplying fuel oil for heating); Frobisher (Second Investments) Ltd v Kiloran Trust Co Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 488, [1980] 1 WLR 425; Boldmark Ltd v Cohen (1985) 19 HLR 136, [1986] 1 EGLR 47, CA (interest on money borrowed to finance provision of services not recoverable in absence of express term); Capital and Counties Freehold Equity Trust Ltd v BL plc [1987] 2 EGLR 49 (only services provided during the term held to be chargeable); Rapid Results College v Angell [1986] 1 EGLR 53, CA; Jacob Isbicki & Co Ltd v Goulding & Bird Ltd [1989] 1 EGLR 236 (service charge held not to include works to certain parts of the exterior of the buildings; cf Reston Ltd v Hudson [1990] 2 EGLR 51 (service charge held to include the cost of replacement of windows and window-frames)); Sella House Ltd v Mears (1998) 21 HLR 147, [1989] 1 EGLR 65, CA (fees of solicitors and counsel incurred in bringing proceedings to recover the service charge held not to be recoverable); Iperion Investments Corp v Broadwalk House Residents Ltd [1992] 2 EGLR 235 at 251 (legal costs of prosecuting a claim for forfeiture not 'costs of management' but costs associated with a claim for an injunction are; affd (1994) 71 P & CR 34, [1995] 2 EGLR 47, CA); Morgan v Stainer (1992) 25 HLR 467, [1993] 2 EGLR 73 (legal costs of defending tenant's action for appointment of independent agents, setting up an independent account, declaration that service charge moneys held on trust and accounts and inquiries not costs incurred by the landlord in obtaining the payment of maintenance contributions); cf Reston Ltd v Hudson supra (costs of applying to the court for a declaration as to what was recoverable under the service charge held to be recoverable); Sun Alliance and London Assurance Co Ltd v British Railways Board [1989] 2 EGLR 237 (capital cost of installing a new fully automatic window cleaning system with cradle and fixed roof tracks was recoverable as a 'cost of providing such other services as the lessor shall consider ought properly and reasonably to be provided for the benefit of the building or for the proper maintenance and servicing of any part thereof'); Skilleter v Charles supra (landlord held entitled to employ a company to manage flats and recover the cost of doing so, even if he owned the company, provided that it was not a complete sham); Embassy Court Residents' Association v Lipman [1984] 2 EGLR 60, (1984) 271 Estates Gazette 545, CA (term implied entitling residents' association to recover costs of employing managing agents); Lloyds Bank plc v Bowker Orford [1992] 2 EGLR 44 (the cost of replacing plant, the costs of employing managing agents and the notional cost of housing the caretaker held to be recoverable as comprised in the 'total cost' of providing specified services).

12 Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten (1985) 32 P & CR 51, [1985] 2 EGLR 100, CA. A provision such as that in Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten supra might deprive the non-payer of a right to complain of the landlord's breach when there is a direct connection between the non-payment and the breach: see Bluestorm Ltd v Portvale Holdings Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 289 at [37], [2004] HLR 939, [2004] 2 EGLR 38, obiter, per Buxton LJ. Where a tenant evinces a fixed intention not to be bound by its obligation to pay service charges, Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten supra is distinguishable, and the landlord will not then be liable to perform the repairing obligations: Bluestorm Ltd v Portvale Holdings Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 289 at [47]-[49], [2004] HLR 939, [2004] 2 EGLR 38 per Sir Martin Nourse.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(i) General Principles/320. Information about service charges at common law.

320. Information about service charges at common law.

At common law a tenant has no right to demand information about the calculation or apportionment of a service charge; and, if the tenant cannot persuade the landlord to disclose the relevant information, the tenant's only remedy is to refuse to pay the service charge and force the landlord to sue to recover it, and put the landlord to strict proof of all matters relating to the service charge in those proceedings. As this is an unsatisfactory position for the tenant, a lease should, and often does, contain express provisions requiring the landlord to supply the relevant information. For example, the lease often confers upon the tenant the right to be provided with a statement of the costs and expenditure relevant to the computation of the service charge, and details of the apportionment of it, sometimes certified by the landlord's surveyor, managing agent or accountant<sup>1</sup>. Alternatively, the tenant may be given an express opportunity to check the relevant amounts and vouchers.

As to the tenant's statutory right to information relating to service charges see PARA 325 et seq post.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(i) General Principles/321. Limitation of service charges at common law.

321. Limitation of service charges at common law.

At common law, where the landlord is entitled to expend money on services and then to recoup the expenditure from the tenants, there is implied in the contract a term that the service charge is to be fair and reasonable<sup>1</sup>. Whenever the giving of a certificate as to the amount of the service charge, or the doing of any other act or happening of any other event, is stipulated by the lease to be a condition precedent to the payment of the service charge, nothing is recoverable until that condition precedent has been complied with, and this necessitates that any such certificate is to be given by an agent who is not in fact the same person as the landlord<sup>2</sup>. Any attempt to oust the court's jurisdiction by making the determination of a third person, such as the landlord's agent, final and conclusive as to the amount of the service charge is void in so far as it seeks to make that person's decision final as to questions of law and construction (such as whether specific services can be charged for under the provisions of the lease), as opposed to referring to him the calculation or arithmetic involved in assessing the service charge<sup>3</sup>.

1 Finchbourne Ltd v Rodrigues [1976] 3 All ER 581, CA; Pole Properties Ltd v Feinberg (1981) 43 P & CR 121, [1981] 2 EGLR 38, CA. Cf Bandar Property Holdings Ltd v JS Darwen (Successors) Ltd [1968] 2 All ER 305, 19 P & CR 785 (insurance premiums; landlords held to be under no duty to obtain cheapest cover so as to minimise sums payable by tenant). It is not clear whether this decision has to be treated as overruled by Finchbourne Ltd v Rodrigues supra. It would seem that the implied term as to the reasonableness applies rather in respect of choice of services than amount of cost, so that, if services of reasonable quality and appropriate character have been provided, it may be difficult for a tenant to show that a landlord who has genuinely paid the actual cost of those service is claiming an 'unreasonable' amount. The statutory right of some tenants to challenge service charges (see PARA 341 et seq post) therefore gives them a wider protection.

2 Finchbourne Ltd v Rodrigues [1976] 3 All ER 581, CA; Concorde Graphics Ltd v Andromeda Investments SA [1983] 1 EGLR 53, (1983) 265 Estates Gazette 386; cf New Pinehurst Residents Association (Cambridge) v Silow [1988] 1 EGLR 227, CA; Skilleter v Charles (1991) 24 HLR 421, [1992] 1 EGLR 73, CA.

It has been suggested that, even where the mere process of calculation is referred to a third person, who is to act otherwise than as arbitrator, the court is able to correct any obvious error made by him, eg if he added up figures wrongly (see Dean v Prince [1954] Ch 409, [1954] 1 All ER 749, CA), but this is now doubtful. See Sutcliffe v Thackrah [1974] AC 727, [1974] 1 All ER 859, HL; Arenson v Casson Beckman Rutley & Co [1977] AC 405, [1979] 3 All ER 901, HL; Campbell v Edwards [1976] 1 All ER 785, [1976] 1 WLR 403, CA; Nikko Hotels (UK) Ltd v MEPC plc [1991] 2 EGLR 103. See also Universities Superannuation Scheme Ltd v Marks & Spencer plc [1999] 1 EGLR 13, [1998] All ER (D) 604, CA (where the lease is silent on the point, a landlord may claim a shortfall in the service charge following a miscalculation of the amount owing in the tenant's favour).

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(i) General Principles/322. Service charges and the Rent Act 1977 and Housing Act 1988.

322. Service charges and the Rent Act 1977 and Housing Act 1988.

Whether a service charge<sup>1</sup> is contractually a rent or not, for the purposes of the Rent Act 1977 it is to be regarded as rent<sup>2</sup>. Special statutory provisions<sup>3</sup>, therefore, were needed to prevent escalations in service charges from bringing tenancies which would otherwise be tenancies at low rents into the protection of the 1977 Act, and thus inhibiting the charging of premiums, whenever the total of the ground rent plus the service charge exceeded the low rent formula of that Act.

In respect of long tenancies<sup>4</sup> only, for the purpose of determining whether the tenancy is protected by reason of the amount of the rent<sup>5</sup>, there must be disregarded such part, if any, of the sums payable by the tenant as is expressed, in whatever terms, to be payable in respect of rates, council tax, services, repairs, maintenance or insurance, unless it could not have been regarded by the parties as a part so payable<sup>6</sup>. Similar provisions apply for the purpose of determining whether a tenancy is an assured tenancy under the Housing Act 1988<sup>7</sup>.

Where a tenancy, whether a long tenancy or not, is a protected tenancy under the Rent Act 1977<sup>8</sup> and an application is made to register a rent, then, if the terms as to the payment of the service charge are reasonable, a variable rent may be registered, thereby enabling the provisions of the tenancy as to the computation of service charges to be enforced despite the registration of a fair rent<sup>9</sup>.

323. VAT and stamp duty land tax.

With effect from 1 April 1994, all mandatory service charges or similar charges paid by the occupants of residential property towards the upkeep of the dwellings or block of flats in which they reside and towards the provision of a warden, caretakers, and people performing a similar function for those occupants are, by an extra-statutory concession, exempted from charge to VAT<sup>1</sup>. That concession does not, however, exempt service charges paid in respect of holiday accommodation<sup>2</sup>.

When a new lease is granted, any undertaking by the tenant to repair, maintain or insure the premises or to pay any amount for services, repairs, maintenance or insurance or the landlord's costs of management does not count as chargeable consideration for the purposes of stamp duty land tax<sup>3</sup>.

1 See HMRC Notice 48 (March 2002), extra-statutory concession 3.18.

2 See note 1 supra. For these purposes, 'holiday accommodation' means holiday accommodation as defined in the Value Added Tax Act 1994 Sch 9, Group 1 para 1(e), notes (11)-(13) (as amended): see VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 156 note 18.

The Landlord and Tenant (Covenants) Act 1995 restricts the liability of a former tenant who has assigned his tenancy but who:

496 (2) in the case of any tenancy, remains bound by such a covenant<sup>4</sup>; and also restricts the liability of his guarantor<sup>5</sup>. That Act also restricts the liability of a former tenant or his guarantor where the tenancy is subsequently varied<sup>6</sup>. These restrictions have already been discussed in the context of liability for the payment of rent after assignment or subsequent variation of a tenancy<sup>7</sup>.

(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings

A. INTRODUCTION

325. Application of the relevant provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985.

The Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 imposes statutory limitations on the amount of service charges<sup>1</sup> in certain circumstances<sup>2</sup> and confers on a tenant<sup>3</sup> statutory rights to certain financial information from the landlord<sup>4</sup>. The relevant provisions of that Act<sup>5</sup> do not, however, apply to a service charge payable by a tenant of:

- 497 (1) a local authority<sup>6</sup>;
- 498 (2) a National Park authority<sup>7</sup>; or
- 499 (3) a new town corporation<sup>8</sup>, unless the tenancy is a long tenancy<sup>9</sup>. For these purposes, the following tenancies are long tenancies:

- 500 (a) a tenancy granted for a term certain exceeding 21 years, whether or not it is, or may become, terminable before the end of that term by notice given by the tenant or by re-entry or forfeiture<sup>10</sup>;
- 501 (b) a tenancy for a term fixed by law under a grant with a covenant<sup>11</sup> or obligation for perpetual renewal<sup>12</sup>, other than a tenancy by sub-demise from one which is not a long tenancy;
- 502 (c) any tenancy granted in pursuance of the right to buy under Part V of the Housing Act 1985<sup>13</sup>, including any tenancy granted in pursuance of that right as it has effect by virtue of the right to acquire<sup>14</sup> conferred by the Housing Act 1996<sup>15</sup>.

A tenancy granted so as to become terminable by notice after a death is not a long tenancy for these purposes unless:

- 503 (i) it is granted by a housing association<sup>16</sup> which at the time of the grant is a registered social landlord<sup>17</sup>;
- 504 (ii) it is granted at a premium calculated by reference to a percentage of the value of the dwelling house or the cost of providing it; and
- 505 (iii) at the time it is granted it complies with the specified statutory requirements<sup>18</sup>.

Nor do those provisions<sup>19</sup> apply to a service charge payable by the tenant of a dwelling the rent of which is registered under Part IV of the Rent Act 1977<sup>20</sup>, unless the amount registered is entered<sup>21</sup> as a variable amount<sup>22</sup>. They do, however, apply in relation to Crown land<sup>23</sup> as in relation to other land; but no failure by the Crown to perform a duty imposed by or by virtue of any of those provisions makes the Crown criminally liable<sup>24</sup>.

The relevant provisions of the 1985 Act have been extensively amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002<sup>25</sup> and are also modified by that Act where the premises in question are managed by an RTM company<sup>26</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 post.

2 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 19-20C (as amended); and PARA 341 et seq post.

3 For these purposes, 'tenant', in relation to service charges, includes a statutory tenant and, where the dwelling or part of it is sublet, the subtenant: ibid s 30 (definition amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 41(1), Sch 2 para 11(b)). Where, however, the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), references to a tenant of a dwelling include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises, so that sums paid by him in pursuance of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 103 (see PARA 395 post) are service charges: s 102(1), Sch 7 para 4(1), (3). For the meanings of 'tenant' generally, and of 'statutory tenant', for these purposes see PARA 52 note 1 ante; and for the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante. See also Ruddy v Oakfern Properties Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1389, [2006] All ER (D) 290 (Oct).

4 See the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 21-25 (as amended); and PARA 329 et seq post. For these purposes, 'landlord' includes any person who has a right to enforce payment of a service charge: s 30. Where, however, the premises are managed by an RTM company, references to the landlord are to that company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 4(1), (2).

5 In the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 18-25 (as amended): see PARA 329 et seq post.

Where the tenancy is a long tenancy the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 18-24 (as amended) (see PARA 329 et seq post) apply but s 25 (as amended) (see PARA 336 post) does not: s 26(1). Section 26 (as amended) does not apply where the premises are managed by an RTM company: see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 4(1), (5).

TEXT AND NOTES 9, 22--Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 26(1), 27 further amended: Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 12 paras 7, 8 (partly in force: SI 2008/3068).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/A. INTRODUCTION/326. Meanings of 'service charge' and 'relevant costs'.

326. Meanings of 'service charge' and 'relevant costs'.

'Service charge' means<sup>1</sup> an amount payable by a tenant<sup>2</sup> of a dwelling<sup>3</sup> as part of, or in addition to, the rent:

- 506 (1) which is payable, directly or indirectly, for services, repairs, maintenance, improvements or insurance or the landlord's<sup>4</sup> costs<sup>5</sup> of management; and
- 507 (2) the whole or part of which varies or may vary according to the relevant costs<sup>6</sup>.

The relevant costs are the costs or estimated costs incurred or to be incurred by or on behalf of the landlord, or a superior landlord, in connection with the matters for which the service charge is payable<sup>7</sup>.

1 le for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 19-40 (as amended): see PARA 327 et seq post.

2 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 325 note 3 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 325 note 4 ante.

5 For these purposes, 'costs' includes overheads: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(3)(a).

6 Ibid s 18(1) (amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 41(1), Sch 2 para 1; the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002, s 150, Sch 9 para 7). For these purposes, costs are relevant costs in relation to a service charge whether they are incurred, or to be incurred, in the period for which the service charge is payable or in an earlier or later period: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(3)(b). This clearly includes estimated and as yet not incurred expenditure: see Frobisher (Second Investments) Ltd v Kiloran Trust Co Ltd [1980] 1 All ER 488, [1980] 1 WLR 425. A landlord must account to its tenants for discounts and commissions received by it in respect of insurance policies it takes out to comply with insurance obligations under a standard form lease, but not for sums which are not in law or fact a rebate or deduction from the premium payable for the insurance but which are payments for services rendered by it in the administration of handling claims: Williams v Southwark London Borough Council [2000] LGR 646, [2000] All ER (D) 377. Insurance charges were held not to be relevant costs for these purposes where the new landlord of a block of flats directed the management company to insure with a new insurer at higher cost: see Berrycroft Management Co Ltd v Sinclair Gardens Investments (Kensington) Ltd (1996) 75 P & CR 210, [1997] 1 EGLR 47, CA.

As to the tenancies to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18 (as amended) does not apply see PARA 325 ante; as to the power of a local authority to publish information, for the assistance of landlords and tenants and others, as to their rights and duties under s 18 (as amended) see the Rent Act 1977 s 149(1)(a)(i) (as substituted); and PARA 816 post; and as to the restrictions on service charges payable after the disposal of a house in relation to which the Housing Act 1985 ss 47-51 (as amended) apply see s 45 (as amended); and HOUSING vol 22 (2006 Reissue) PARAS 315-316.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(2). A management company is a landlord in relation to the charges it seeks to recover for costs incurred in the provision of services to a tenant: Cinnamon Ltd v Morgan [2001] EWCA Civ 1616, [2002] 2 P & CR 139 (service charges which were capable of being enforced by a management company and which varied according to the costs actually incurred by that company were intended to be within the scope of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/A. INTRODUCTION/327. Meaning of 'recognised tenants' association'.

327. Meaning of 'recognised tenants' association'.

A recognised tenants' association is an association of qualifying tenants<sup>1</sup>, whether with or without other tenants, which is recognised for the statutory provisions relating to service charges<sup>2</sup> either:

- 508 (1) by notice in writing given by the landlord<sup>3</sup> to the secretary of the association;
- 509 (2) by a certificate of a member of the local rent assessment committee panel<sup>4</sup>.

A notice given under head (1) above may be withdrawn by the landlord by notice in writing given to the secretary of the association not less than six months before the date on which it is to be withdrawn<sup>5</sup>; and a certificate given under head (2) above may be cancelled by any member of the local rent assessment committee panel<sup>6</sup>.

The Secretary of State<sup>7</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>8</sup> may by regulations<sup>9</sup> specify:

- 510 (a) the procedure which is to be followed in connection with an application for, or for the cancellation of, a certificate under head (2) above;
- 511 (b) the matters to which regard is to be had in giving or cancelling such a certificate;
- 512 (c) the duration of such a certificate; and 513 (d) any circumstances in which a certificate is not to be given under head (2) above<sup>10</sup>.

1 For these purposes, a number of tenants are qualifying tenants if each of them may be required under the terms of his lease to contribute to the same costs by the payment of a service charge: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 29(4) (amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 41(1), Sch 2 para 10(1), (3)). For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 325 note 3 ante; and for the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 ante.

2 le for the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 ss 18-31 (as amended): see PARA 325 et seq ante, PARA 328 et seq post.

3 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 325 note 4 ante.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 29(1) (amended by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Sch 2 para 10(1), (2)). For these purposes, 'local rent assessment committee panel' means the persons appointed by the Lord Chancellor under the Rent Act 1977 to the panel of persons to act as members of a rent assessment committee for the registration area in which the dwellings let to the qualifying tenants are situated: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 29(4) (as amended: see note 1 supra). For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

As to the power of a local authority to publish information, for the assistance of landlords and tenants and others, as to their rights and duties under s 29 (as amended) see the Rent Act 1977 s 149(1)(a)(i) (as substituted); and PARA 816 post; and as to rent assessment committees see PARA 910 post.

7 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

8 As to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

9 Such regulations (1) may make different provisions with respect to different cases or descriptions of case, including different provision for different areas; and (2) must be made by statutory instrument which is subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 29(6). At the date at which this title states the law, no such regulations had been made.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/A. INTRODUCTION/328. Meaning of 'qualified accountant'.

328. Meaning of 'qualified accountant'.

'Qualified accountant' means<sup>1</sup> a person who has<sup>2</sup> the necessary qualification and is not disqualified from acting<sup>3</sup>. A person has the necessary qualification if he eligible<sup>4</sup> for appointment as a company auditor under the Companies Act 1989<sup>5</sup>. The following are, however, disqualified from acting:

514 (1) an officer, employee or partner of the landlord<sup>6</sup> or, where the landlord is a company, of an associated company<sup>7</sup>;

515 (2) a person who is a partner or employee of any such officer or employee<sup>8</sup>;

516 (3) an agent of the landlord who is a managing agent for any premises to which any of the costs covered by the summary in question relate or, as from a day to be appointed<sup>9</sup>, to which the statement of account in question relates<sup>10</sup>;

517 (4) an employee or partner of any such agent<sup>11</sup>.

Where the landlord is an emanation of the Crown<sup>12</sup>, a local authority<sup>13</sup>, a National Park authority<sup>14</sup> or a new town corporation<sup>15</sup>, the persons having the necessary qualification include members of the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy<sup>16</sup> and head (1) above does not apply<sup>17</sup>.

328 Meaning of 'qualified accountant'

TEXT AND NOTES--Repealed: Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 12 para 9, Sch 16 (partly in force: SI 2008/3068).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/B. RIGHT TO INFORMATION/329. Landlord's duty to supply certain relevant information.

B. RIGHT TO INFORMATION

329. Landlord's duty to supply certain relevant information.

As from a day which, except for the purposes of making relevant regulations, is to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the landlord<sup>2</sup> must supply to each tenant<sup>3</sup> by whom service charges<sup>4</sup> are payable, in relation to each accounting period<sup>5</sup>, a written statement of account dealing with:

- 518 (1) service charges of the tenant and the tenants of dwellings<sup>6</sup> associated with his dwelling<sup>7</sup>;
- 519 (2) relevant costs relating to those service charges;
- 520 (3) the aggregate amount standing to the credit of the tenant and the tenants of those dwellings at the beginning of the accounting period and at the end of the accounting period; and
- 521 (4) related matters<sup>8</sup>.

The statement of account in relation to an accounting period must be supplied to each such tenant not later than six months after the end of the accounting period<sup>9</sup>. Where the landlord supplies a statement of account to a tenant he must also supply to him:

- 522 (a) a certificate of a qualified accountant<sup>10</sup> that, in the accountant's opinion, the statement of account deals fairly with the matters with which it is required to deal and is sufficiently supported by accounts, receipts and other documents which have been produced to him; and
- 523 (b) a summary of the rights and obligations of tenants of dwellings in relation to service charges<sup>11</sup>.

The Secretary of State<sup>12</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>13</sup> may make regulations prescribing:

- 524 (i) requirements as to the form and content of statements of account, accountants' certificates, and summaries of rights and obligations so required to be supplied<sup>14</sup>;
- 525 (ii) exceptions from the requirement to supply an accountant's certificate<sup>15</sup>.

If the landlord has been notified by a tenant<sup>16</sup> of an address in England and Wales at which he wishes to have supplied to him documents required to be so supplied, the landlord must supply them to him at that address<sup>17</sup>.

Until the above provisions are brought into force, however, the following provisions have effect. A tenant may require the landlord in writing to supply him with a written summary of the costs incurred:

- 526 (A) if the relevant accounts are made up for periods of 12 months, in the last such period ending not later than the date of the request; or
- 527 (B) if the accounts are not so made up, in the period of 12 months ending with the date of the request, and which are relevant costs in relation to the service charges payable or demanded as payable in that or any other period<sup>18</sup>. If the tenant is represented by a recognised tenants' association<sup>19</sup> and he consents, the request may be made by the secretary of the association instead of by the tenant and may then be for the supply of the summary to the secretary<sup>20</sup>. A request is duly served on the landlord if it is served on an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or similar document, or on the person who receives the rent on behalf of the landlord; and a person on whom a request is so served must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord<sup>21</sup>. The landlord must comply with the request within one month of the request or within six months of the end of the period referred to in head (A) or head (B) above, whichever is the later<sup>22</sup>. The summary must state whether any of the costs relate to works in respect of which a grant has been or is to be paid under the specified statutory provisions<sup>23</sup> and must set out the costs in a way showing how they have been or will be reflected in demands for service charges and, in addition, must summarise each of the specified items<sup>24</sup> and specify the aggregate of any amounts received by the landlord down to the end of that period on account of service charges in respect of relevant dwellings<sup>25</sup> and still standing to the credit of the tenants of those dwellings at the end of that period<sup>26</sup>. The summary must also state whether any of the costs relate to works which are included in the external works specified in a group repair scheme<sup>27</sup> in which the landlord participated or is participating<sup>28</sup>. If the service charges in relation to which the costs are relevant costs<sup>29</sup> are payable by the tenants of more than four dwellings, the summary must be certified by a qualified accountant as in his opinion a fair summary complying with the statutory requirements and as being sufficiently supported by accounts, receipts and other documents which have been produced to him<sup>30</sup>.

1    le as from a day to be appointed under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 181(1). At the date at which this title states the law, 26 July 2002 had been appointed in relation to England, and 1 January 2003 had been appointed in relation to Wales, only for the purposes of making relevant regulations (see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 (Commencement No 1, Savings and Transitional Provisions) (England) Order 2002, SI 2002/1912, arts 1(2), 2(c); the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 (Commencement No 1, Savings and Transitional Provisions) (Wales) Order 2002, SI 2002/3012, arts 1(2), 2(c)); and no other day had been appointed for these purposes.

5    For these purposes, 'accounting period' means such period (1) beginning with the relevant date; and (2) ending with such date, not later than 12 months after the relevant date, as the landlord determines; and in the case of the first accounting period in relation to any dwellings, the relevant date is the later of (a) the date on which service charges are first payable under a lease of any of them; and (b) the date on which the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 152 comes into force (see note 1 supra); and, in the case of subsequent accounting periods, it is the date immediately following the end of the previous accounting period:

Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 21(9), (10) (s 21 prospectively substituted by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 152, partly as from a day to be appointed (see note 1 supra)).

6 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

7 For these purposes, a dwelling is associated with another dwelling if the obligations of the tenants of the dwellings under the terms of their leases as regards contributing to relevant costs relate to the same costs: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 21(8) (as substituted: see note 5 supra). 14 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 21(4) (as substituted: see note 5 supra). Regulations under s 21 (as so substituted) must be made by statutory instrument subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament (see s 21(12) (as so substituted)); and regulations under s 21(4) (as so substituted) (see head (i) in the text) may make different provision for different purposes (s 21(11) (as so substituted)). At the date at which this title states the law, no such regulations had been made.

16 The landlord is to be taken to have been so notified if notification has been given to (1) an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or similar document; or (2) the person who receives the rent on behalf of the landlord; and where notification is given to such an agent or person he must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord: ibid s 21(7) (as substituted: see note 5 supra).

17 Ibid s 21(6) (as substituted: see note 5 supra).

18 See ibid s 21(1) (as originally enacted). Section 21 (as originally enacted and amended) and s 22 (as originally enacted and amended: see PARA 332 post) are not concerned with the adequacy of the landlord's accounts; if the landlord satisfies the requirement to produce all the documents, the fact that they are inadequate does not amount to an offence: Taber v MacDonald and Clockscreen Holdings Ltd (1998) 31 HLR 73, DC; and see PARA 336 post. 24 Ie: (1) any of the costs in respect of which no demand for payment was received by the landlord within the period referred to in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 21(1)(a) or (b) (as originally enacted); (2) any of the costs in respect of which a demand for payment was so received, but no payment was made by the landlord within that period; and (3) any of the costs in respect of which a demand for payment was so received and payment was made by the landlord within that period: see s 21(5)(a)-(c) (as originally enacted).

25 For these purposes, 'relevant dwelling' means a dwelling whose tenant is either (1) the person by or with the consent of whom the request was made; or (2) a person whose obligations under the terms of his lease as regards contribution to relevant costs relate to the same costs as the corresponding obligations of the person mentioned in head (1) supra relate to: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 21(5A) (as substituted by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Sch 2 para 5(1), (3)). ### 329 Landlord's duty to supply certain relevant information

TEXT AND NOTES--Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 21 substituted by Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 152; and further substituted by Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 12 para 2 (in force for regulation-making purposes: SI 2008/3068).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/B. RIGHT TO INFORMATION/330. Withholding of service charges if documents not supplied.

330. Withholding of service charges if documents not supplied.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the following provisions have effect. A tenant<sup>2</sup> may withhold payment of a service charge<sup>3</sup> if:

528 (1) the landlord<sup>4</sup> has not supplied a document to him by the time by which he is required<sup>5</sup> to supply it; or

529 (2) the form or content of a document which the landlord has supplied to him<sup>6</sup> at any time does not conform exactly or substantially with the prescribed<sup>7</sup> requirements<sup>8</sup>.

The maximum amount which the tenant may withhold is an amount equal to the aggregate of:

- 530 (a) the service charges paid by him in the accounting period to which the document concerned would or does relate; and 531 (b) so much of the aggregate amount required to be dealt with in the statement of account for that accounting period<sup>9</sup> as stood to his credit<sup>10</sup>.

Where a tenant so withholds a service charge, any provisions of the tenancy relating to non-payment or late payment of service charges do not have effect in relation to the period for which he so withholds it<sup>11</sup>.

An amount may not, however, be so withheld:

- 532 (i) in a case within head (1) above, after the document concerned has been supplied to the tenant by the landlord; or 533 (ii) in a case within head (2) above, after a document conforming exactly or substantially with the prescribed requirements<sup>12</sup> has been supplied to the tenant by the landlord by way of replacement of the one previously supplied<sup>13</sup>.

If, on an application made by the landlord to a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>14</sup>, the tribunal determines that the landlord has a reasonable excuse for a failure giving rise to the right of a tenant to withhold an amount under these provisions, the tenant may not withhold the amount after the determination is made<sup>15</sup>.

331. Notice to accompany demands for service charges.

As from a day which, except for the purposes of making relevant regulations, is to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the following provisions have effect. A demand for the payment of a service charge<sup>2</sup> must be accompanied by a summary of the rights and obligations of tenants<sup>3</sup> of dwellings<sup>4</sup> in relation to service charges<sup>5</sup>; and a tenant may withhold payment of a service charge which has been demanded from him if this requirement is not complied with in relation to the demand<sup>6</sup>.

The Secretary of State<sup>7</sup> or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>8</sup> may make regulations prescribing requirements as to the form and content of such summaries of rights and obligations<sup>9</sup>.

Where a tenant withholds a service charge under these provisions, any provisions of the lease relating to non-payment or late payment of service charges do not have effect in relation to the period for which he so withholds it<sup>10</sup>.

331 Notice to accompany demands for service charges

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Day now appointed: SI 2007/1256 (England), SI 2007/3161 (Wales).

NOTE 9--See the Service Charges (Summary of Rights and Obligations, and Transitional Provision) (England) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/1257 (amended by SI 2009/1307); and the Service Charges (Summary of Rights and Obligations, and Transitional Provisions) (Wales) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3160.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/B. RIGHT TO INFORMATION/332. Inspection etc of documents.

332. Inspection etc of documents.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the following provisions have effect. A tenant<sup>2</sup> may by notice in writing require the landlord<sup>3</sup>:

- 534 (1) to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting accounts, receipts or other documents relevant to the matters which must be dealt with in a statement of account required to be supplied to him<sup>4</sup> and for taking copies of or extracts from them; or
- 535 (2) to take copies of or extracts from any such accounts, receipts or other documents and either send them to him or afford him reasonable facilities for collecting them, as he specifies<sup>5</sup>.

If the tenant is represented by a recognised tenants' association<sup>6</sup> and he consents, the notice may be served by the secretary of the association instead of by the tenant, and in that case any requirement imposed by it is to afford reasonable facilities, or to send copies or extracts, to the secretary<sup>7</sup>.

Such a notice may not be served after the end of the period of six months beginning with the date by which the tenant is required to be supplied<sup>8</sup> with the statement of account<sup>9</sup>; but if:

- 536 (a) the statement of account is not supplied to the tenant on or before that date; or
- 537 (b) the statement of account so supplied does not conform exactly or substantially with the prescribed requirements<sup>10</sup>, the six month period mentioned above does not begin until any later date on which the statement of account, conforming exactly or substantially with those requirements, is supplied to him<sup>11</sup>. Such a notice is duly served on the landlord if it is served on an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or similar document, or on the person who receives the rent on behalf of the landlord; and a person on whom such a notice is so served must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord<sup>12</sup>.

The landlord must comply with a requirement imposed by such a notice within the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he receives the notice<sup>13</sup>. To the extent that such a notice requires the landlord to afford facilities for inspecting documents, he must do so free of charge, but he may treat as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in doing so<sup>14</sup>. The landlord may make a reasonable charge for doing anything else in compliance with a requirement imposed by such a notice<sup>15</sup>.

Until the above provisions are brought into force, however, the provisions set out below apply where a tenant, or the secretary of a recognised tenants' association, has obtained<sup>16</sup> a summary<sup>17</sup> of relevant costs<sup>18</sup>. The tenant, or the secretary with the consent of the tenant, may within six months of obtaining the summary require the landlord in writing to afford him reasonable facilities:

- 538 (i) for inspecting the accounts, receipts and other documents supporting the summary; and
- 539 (ii) for taking copies or extracts from them<sup>19</sup>.

Such a request is duly served on the landlord if it is served on an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or similar document, or on the person who receives the rent on behalf of the landlord; and a person on whom a request is so served must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord<sup>20</sup>. The landlord must make such facilities available to the tenant or secretary for a period of two months beginning not later than one month after the request is made<sup>21</sup>. The landlord:

- 540 (A) where such facilities are for the inspection of any documents, must make them so available free of charge<sup>22</sup>, but this does not preclude him from treating as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in connection with making those facilities so available<sup>23</sup>;
- 541 (B) where such facilities are for the taking of copies or extracts, is entitled to make them so available on payment of such reasonable charge as he may determine<sup>24</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/B. RIGHT TO INFORMATION/333. Information held by superior landlord.

333. Information held by superior landlord.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the following provisions have effect. If a statement of account which the landlord<sup>2</sup> is required to supply<sup>3</sup> relates to matters concerning a superior landlord and the landlord is not in possession of the relevant information:

- 542 (1) he may by notice in writing require the person who is his landlord to give him the relevant information, and so on, if that person is not himself the superior landlord; and
- 543 (2) the superior landlord must comply with the requirement within a reasonable time<sup>4</sup>.

If a notice requiring facilities to be made available for the inspection etc of documents<sup>5</sup> imposes a requirement in relation to documents held by a superior landlord:

- 544 (a) the landlord must immediately inform the tenant<sup>6</sup> or secretary<sup>7</sup> of that fact and of the name and address of the superior landlord; and
- 545 (b) the relevant statutory provisions<sup>8</sup> then apply in relation to the superior landlord as in relation to the landlord<sup>9</sup>.

Until the above provisions are brought into force, however, the provisions set out below apply. If a request for a summary of relevant costs<sup>10</sup> relates in whole or in part to relevant costs incurred by or on behalf of a superior landlord, and the landlord to whom the request is made is not in possession of the relevant information:

- 546 (i) he must in turn make a written request for the relevant information to the person who is his landlord, and so on, if that person is not himself the superior landlord;
- 547 (ii) the superior landlord must comply with that request within a reasonable time; and
- 548 (iii) the immediate landlord must then comply with the tenant's or secretary's<sup>11</sup> request, or that part of it which relates to the relevant costs incurred by or on behalf of the superior landlord, within the time allowed<sup>12</sup> or such further time, if any, as is reasonable in the circumstances<sup>13</sup>.

If a request for facilities to inspect supporting accounts etc<sup>14</sup> relates to a summary of costs incurred by or on behalf of a superior landlord:

- 549 (A) the landlord to whom the request is made must forthwith inform the tenant or secretary of that fact and of the name and address of the superior landlord; and
- 550 (B) the tenant's or secretary's statutory power of inspection<sup>15</sup> applies to the superior landlord as it applies to the immediate landlord<sup>16</sup>.

335. Effect of assignment.

As from a day to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the assignment of a tenancy<sup>2</sup> does not affect any duty imposed by or by virtue of any of the statutory provisions relating to information about service charges<sup>3</sup>; but a person is not required to comply with more than a reasonable number of requirements imposed by any one person<sup>4</sup>.

Similarly, at the date at which this title states the law, the assignment of a tenancy does not affect the validity of a request made under the relevant statutory provisions<sup>5</sup> before the assignment; but a person is not obliged to provide a summary or make facilities available more than once for the same dwelling<sup>6</sup> and for the same period<sup>7</sup>.

C. RIGHT TO APPOINT SURVEYOR TO ADVISE

337. Right to appoint surveyor to advise on matters relating to service charges.

A recognised tenants' association<sup>1</sup> may appoint a surveyor for the purposes of these provisions to advise on any matters relating to, or which may give rise to, service charges<sup>2</sup> payable to a landlord<sup>3</sup> by one or more members of the association<sup>4</sup>. A person may not be so appointed unless he is a qualified surveyor<sup>5</sup>.

The appointment takes effect for these purposes upon notice in writing being given to the landlord<sup>6</sup> by the association stating the name and address of the surveyor, the duration of his appointment and the matters in respect of which he is appointed<sup>7</sup>; and an appointment ceases to have effect for these purposes if the association gives notice in writing to the landlord to that effect or if the association ceases to exist<sup>8</sup>.

A surveyor so appointed has statutory rights of access to documents and premises<sup>9</sup>.

The statutory right to appoint a surveyor for these purposes applies in relation to Crown land<sup>10</sup> as in relation to other land<sup>11</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'recognised tenants' association' has the same meaning as in the provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 relating to service charges (see s 29 (as amended); and PARA 327 ante): Housing Act 1996 s 84(6).

2 For these purposes, 'service charge' means a service charge within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 ante), other than one excluded from s 18 (as amended) by s 27 (as amended) (rent of dwelling registered and not entered as variable: see PARA 325 ante): Housing Act 1996 s 84(6).

3 In the Housing Act 1996, 'lease' and 'tenancy' have the same meaning (s 229(1)); both expressions include (1) a sub-lease or a sub-tenancy; and (2) an agreement for a lease or tenancy (or sub-lease or sub-tenancy) (s 229(2)); and the expressions 'lessor' and 'lessee' and 'landlord' and 'tenant', and references to letting, to the grant of a lease or to covenants or terms, are to be construed accordingly (s 229(3)). Where, however, the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), s 84 (see the text and notes 4-9 infra) and Sch 4 (see PARAS 338-340 post) (apart from Sch 4 para 7: see PARA 340 post) have effect as if references to the landlord were to the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 15(1).

5 Ibid s 84(2). For this purpose 'qualified surveyor' has the same meaning as in the Leasehold Reform, Housing and Urban Development Act 1993 s 78(4)(a) (persons qualified for appointment to carry out management audit: see PARA 406 post): Housing Act 1996 s 84(2).

6 A notice is duly given under ibid s 84 to a landlord of any tenants if it is given to a person who receives on behalf of the landlord the rent payable by those tenants; and a person to whom such a notice is so given must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord: s 84(5). Where, however, the premises are managed by an RTM company, s 84(5) and Sch 4 para 4(5) (see PARA 338 post) apply as if the reference to a person who receives rent were to a person who receives service charges: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 15(2).

8 Ibid s 84(4).

9 See ibid s 84(1), Sch 4 (as amended); and PARA 338 post.

10 For the meaning of 'Crown land' see PARA 24 note 8 ante.

11 See the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 172(1)(g); and PARA 24 ante.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/C. RIGHT TO APPOINT SURVEYOR TO ADVISE/338. Surveyor's rights.

338. Surveyor's rights.

A surveyor appointed for the purposes of advising on matters relating to service charges<sup>1</sup> has the rights conferred by the following provisions<sup>2</sup>.

The surveyor may appoint such persons as he thinks fit to assist him in carrying out his functions<sup>3</sup>.

The surveyor has a right to require the landlord<sup>4</sup> or any other relevant person<sup>5</sup>:

- 553 (1) to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting any documents sight of which is reasonably required by him for the purposes of his functions<sup>6</sup>; and
- 554 (2) to afford him reasonable facilities for taking copies of or extracts from any such documents<sup>7</sup>.

The rights conferred on the surveyor by heads (1) and (2) above are exercisable by him by notice in writing given by him to the landlord or other person concerned<sup>8</sup>. Where a notice is given to a person other than the landlord, the surveyor must give a copy of the notice to the landlord<sup>9</sup>. The landlord or other person to whom notice is given must, within the period of one week beginning with the date of the giving of the notice or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter, either:

- 555 (a) afford the surveyor the facilities required by him for inspecting and taking copies or extracts of the documents to which the notice relates; or
- 556 (b) give the surveyor a notice stating that he objects to doing so for reasons specified in the notice<sup>10</sup>.

Facilities for the inspection of any documents required under head (1) above must be made available free of charge; but this does not mean that the landlord cannot treat as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in connection with making the facilities available<sup>11</sup>. A reasonable charge may be made for facilities for the taking of copies or extracts required under head (2) above<sup>12</sup>.

The surveyor also has the right to inspect any common parts<sup>13</sup> comprised in relevant premises<sup>14</sup> or any appurtenant property<sup>15</sup>. On being requested to do so<sup>16</sup>, the landlord must afford the surveyor reasonable access for the purposes of carrying out such an inspection<sup>17</sup>. Such reasonable access must be afforded to the surveyor free of charge; but this does not mean that the landlord cannot treat as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in connection with affording reasonable access to the surveyor<sup>18</sup>.

If the landlord or other person to whom notice was given requiring the facilities described in heads (1) and (2) above<sup>19</sup> has not, by the end of the period of one month beginning with the date on which notice was given, complied with the notice, the court<sup>20</sup> may, on the application of the surveyor, make an order requiring him to do so within such period as is specified in the order<sup>21</sup>. Similarly, if the landlord does not, within a reasonable period after the making of a request for access<sup>22</sup>, afford the surveyor reasonable access for the purposes of carrying out an inspection<sup>23</sup>, the court may, on the application of the surveyor, make an order requiring the landlord to do so on such date as is specified in the order<sup>24</sup>. An application for an order under these provisions must be made before the end of the period of four months beginning with the date on which notice was given<sup>25</sup> or the request<sup>26</sup> was made<sup>27</sup>. Such an order may be made in general terms or may require the landlord or other person to do specific things, as the court thinks fit<sup>28</sup>.

2 Ibid s 84(1), Sch 4 para 1(1).

3 Ibid Sch 4 para 2(1). References in Sch 4 (paras 1-8) (as amended) to the surveyor in the context of (1) being afforded any such facilities as are mentioned in Sch 4 para 3 (see the text and notes 4-12 infra); or (2) carrying out an inspection under Sch 4 para 4 (as amended) (see the text and notes 13-18 infra), include a person so appointed: Sch 4 para 2(2). For these purposes, the surveyor's 'functions' are his functions in connection with the matters in respect of which he was appointed: Sch 4 para 1(2)(b).

4 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 337 note 3 ante.

5 For these purposes, 'other relevant person' means a person other than the landlord who is or, in relation to a future service charge, will be (1) responsible for applying the proceeds of the service charge; or (2) under an obligation to a tenant who pays the service charge in respect of any matter to which the charge relates: Housing Act 1996 Sch 4 para 3(2). Where a notice under Sch 4 para 3 has been given to a person other than the landlord and, at a time when any obligations arising out of the notice remain to be discharged by him, he ceases to be such a person as is mentioned in Sch 4 para 3(2), then, if he is still in a position to discharge those obligations to any extent he remains responsible for discharging those obligations, and the provisions of Sch 4 (as amended) continue to apply to him, to that extent: Sch 4 para 8. For the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 337 note 2 ante; and for the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 337 note 3 ante.

6 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(1)(a).

7 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(1)(b).

8 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(3). A notice is duly given under Sch 4 para 3 to the landlord of a tenant if it is given to a person who receives on behalf of the landlord the rent payable by that tenant; and a person to whom such a notice is so given must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord: Sch 4 para 3(7).

9 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(3).

10 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(4).

11 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(5).

12 Ibid Sch 4 para 3(6).

13 For these purposes, 'common parts', in relation to a building or part of a building, includes the structure and exterior of the building or part and any common facilities within it: ibid Sch 4 para 4(2).

14 For these purposes, 'relevant premises' means so much of (1) the building or buildings containing the dwellings let to members of the tenants' association; and (2) any other building or buildings, as constitute premises in relation to which management functions are discharged in respect of the costs of which service charges are payable by members of the association; and 'management functions' includes functions with respect to the provision of services, or the repair, maintenance, improvement or insurance of property: ibid Sch 4 para 4(2) (definition of 'management functions' amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 150, Sch 9 para 12). 'The tenants' association' means the association by which the surveyor was appointed: Housing Act 1996 Sch 4 para 1(2)(a).

15 Ibid Sch 4 para 4(1). For these purposes, 'appurtenant property' means so much of any property not contained in relevant premises as constitutes property in relation to which any such management functions as are described in note 14 supra are discharged: Sch 4 para 4(2).

16 A request is duly made under ibid Sch 4 para 4 (as amended) to the landlord of a tenant if it is made to a person appointed by the landlord to deal with such requests or, if no such person has been appointed, to a person who receives on behalf of the landlord the rent payable by that tenant; and a person to whom such a request is made must notify the landlord of the request as soon as may be: Sch 4 para 4(5). This provision is modified where the premises are managed by an RTM company: see PARA 337 note 6 ante.

There must also be brought in a county court any proceedings for determining any question arising under or by virtue of any provision to which s 95 applies: s 95(2). Where, however, other proceedings are properly brought in the High Court, that court has jurisdiction to hear and determine proceedings to which s 95(1) or (2) applies which are joined with those proceedings: s 95(3). Where proceedings are brought in a county court by virtue of s 95(1) or (2), that court has jurisdiction to hear and determine other proceedings joined with those proceedings despite the fact that they would otherwise be outside its jurisdiction: s 95(4). The provisions to which s 95 applies are (1) s 81 (as amended) (restriction on termination of tenancy for failure to pay service charge: see PARA 610 post); and (2) s 84 (see PARA 337 ante) and Sch 4 (as amended) (see the text and notes 1-19 supra, 21-28 infra; and PARAS 339-340 post): s 95(5).

339. Documents held by superior landlord.

Where a landlord<sup>1</sup> is required by a notice<sup>2</sup> to afford the surveyor facilities for inspection or taking copies or extracts in respect of any document which is in the custody or under the control of a superior landlord:

557 (1) the landlord must on receiving the notice inform the surveyor as soon as may be of that fact and of the name and address of the superior landlord; and 558 (2) the surveyor may then give the superior landlord notice in writing requiring him to afford the facilities in question in respect of the document<sup>3</sup>.

The relevant statutory provisions conferring rights of inspection and copying on the surveyor<sup>4</sup> and providing for the enforcement of those rights by the court<sup>5</sup> have effect, with any necessary modifications, in relation to a notice so given to a superior landlord<sup>6</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/C. RIGHT TO APPOINT SURVEYOR TO ADVISE/340. Effect of disposal by landlord.

340. Effect of disposal by landlord.

Where a notice requiring facilities for the inspection or copying of documents<sup>1</sup> has been given or a request for access to carry out an inspection of common parts<sup>2</sup> has been made to a landlord<sup>3</sup>, and at a time when any obligations arising out of the notice or request remain to be discharged by him:

- 559 (1)    he disposes of the whole or part of his interest as landlord of any member of the tenants' association<sup>4</sup>; and
- 560 (2)    the person acquiring that interest ('the transferee') is in a position to discharge any of those obligations to any extent, that person is responsible for discharging those obligations to that extent, as if he had been given the notice<sup>5</sup> or had received<sup>6</sup> the request<sup>7</sup>.

If the landlord is, despite the disposal<sup>8</sup>, still in a position to discharge those obligations, he remains responsible for doing so; but otherwise, the transferee is responsible for discharging them to the exclusion of the landlord<sup>9</sup>.

1    Ie a notice under the Housing Act 1996 s 84(1), Sch 4 para 3: see PARA 338 ante.

2    Ie a notice under ibid Sch 4 para 4 (as amended): see PARA 338 ante.

5    Ie under the Housing Act 1996 Sch 4 para 3.

6    Ie under ibid Sch 4 para 4 (as amended).

7    Ibid Sch 4 para 7(1).

8    For these purposes, 'disposal' means a disposal whether by the creation or transfer of an estate or interest, and includes the surrender of a tenancy; and references to the transferee are to be construed accordingly: ibid Sch 4 para 7(4).

9    Ibid Sch 4 para 7(2). In connection with the discharge of such obligations by the transferee, Sch 4 paras 3-6 (as amended) (see PARAS 338-339 ante) apply with the substitution for any reference to the date on which notice was given under Sch 4 para 3 or the request was made under Sch 4 para 4 (as amended) of a reference to the date of the disposal: Sch 4 para 7(3).

D. LIMITATION OF SERVICE CHARGES

(A) IN GENERAL

341. Reasonableness.

Relevant costs<sup>1</sup> are to be taken into account in determining the amount of a service charge<sup>2</sup> payable for a period:

- 561 (1) only to the extent that they are reasonably incurred<sup>3</sup>; and
- 562 (2) where they are incurred on the provision of services or the carrying out of works, only if the services or works are of a reasonable standard; and the amount payable is limited accordingly<sup>4</sup>.

Where a service charge is payable before the relevant costs are incurred, no greater amount than is reasonable is so payable; and, after the relevant costs have been incurred, any necessary adjustment must be made by repayment, reduction or subsequent charges or otherwise<sup>5</sup>.

<sup>4</sup> Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 19(1). If the services are not of a reasonable standard, the whole of the cost does not have to be disallowed but an appropriate deduction may be made: Yorkbrook Investments Ltd v Batten (1985) 52 P & CR 51, [1985] 2 EGLR 100, CA. However, it has been held that it is not possible to give the statutory words a wide meaning to encompass both the costs actually incurred and the circumstances in which they were incurred (including past disrepair); the reasonableness of incurring costs to remedy disrepair cannot, as a matter of natural meaning, depend upon how the need for remedy arose: Continental Property Ventures Inc v White [2006] 1 EGLR 85, [2006] 16 EG 148, Lands Tribunal, not following dicta to the contrary in Wandsworth London Borough Council v Griffin [2000] 2 EGLR 105 at 110, Lands Tribunal (costs of repair could not be reduced on the basis that the costs would have been less if the landlord had timeously complied with the repairing covenant). But a leasehold valuation tribunal does have jurisdiction to determine the damages for the breach of covenant and such damages may give rise to an equitable set-off which may be applied by the tribunal: see PARA 351 post.

Where relevant costs<sup>1</sup> are incurred or to be incurred on the carrying out of works in respect of which a specified grant<sup>2</sup> has been or is to be paid, the amount of the grant must be deducted from the costs and the amount of the service charge<sup>3</sup> payable must be reduced accordingly<sup>4</sup>.

In any case where:

- 563 (1) relevant costs are incurred or to be incurred on the carrying out of works which are included in the external works specified in a group repair scheme<sup>5</sup>; and
- 564 (2) the landlord<sup>6</sup> participated or is participating<sup>7</sup> in that scheme, the amount which, in relation to the landlord, is the outstanding balance<sup>8</sup> must be deducted from the costs, and the amount of the service charge payable must be reduced accordingly<sup>9</sup>.

343. Time limit on making demands.

If any of the relevant costs<sup>1</sup> taken into account in determining the amount of any service charge<sup>2</sup> were incurred more than 18 months before a demand for payment of the service charge is served on the tenant<sup>3</sup>, the tenant is not liable to pay so much of the service charge as reflects the costs so incurred, unless, within the period of 18 months beginning with the date when the relevant costs in question were incurred, the tenant was notified in writing that those costs had been incurred and that he would subsequently be required under the terms of his lease<sup>4</sup> to contribute to them by the payment of a service charge<sup>5</sup>.

5 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20B(1), (2) (added by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 41(1), Sch 2 para 4). As to the tenancies to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20B (as added) does not apply see PARA 325 ante; and as to the power of a local authority to publish information, for the assistance of landlords and tenants and others, as to their rights and duties under s 20B (as added) see the Rent Act 1977 s 149(1)(a) (i) (as substituted); and PARA 816 post. On its true construction the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20B (as so added) has no application where payments on account are made to the lessor in respect of service charges, the actual expenditure of the lessor does not exceed the payments on account and no request by the lessor for any further payment by the tenant needs to be or is in fact made: see Gilje v Charlegrove Securities Ltd [2003] EWHC 1284 (Ch), [2004] 1 All ER 91, [2004] HLR 1 (where it was said that the policy embodied within the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20B (as so added) is that a tenant should not be faced with a bill for expenditure without proper warning to set aside provision for payment).

344. Application that costs of proceedings are not to be regarded as relevant costs.

A tenant<sup>1</sup> may make an application for an order that all or any of the costs incurred, or to be incurred, by the landlord<sup>2</sup> in connection with proceedings before a court, residential property tribunal<sup>3</sup> or leasehold valuation tribunal, or the Lands Tribunal, or in connection with arbitration proceedings, are not to be regarded as relevant costs<sup>4</sup> to be taken into account in determining the amount of any service charge<sup>5</sup> payable by the tenant or any other person or persons specified in the application<sup>6</sup>. The application must be made:

- 565 (1) in the case of court proceedings, to the court before which the proceedings are taking place or, if the application is made after the proceedings are concluded, to a county court<sup>7</sup>;
- 566 (2) in the case of proceedings before a residential property tribunal, to a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>8</sup>;
- 567 (3) in the case of proceedings before a leasehold valuation tribunal, to the tribunal before which the proceedings are taking place or, if the application is made after the proceedings are concluded, to any leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>9</sup>;

- 569 (5) in the case of arbitration proceedings, to the arbitral tribunal or, if the application is made after the proceedings are concluded, to a county court<sup>11</sup>.

TEXT AND NOTES 6, 10--References to the Lands Tribunal are now to the Upper Tribunal: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20C(1), (2)(c) (amended by SI 2009/1307).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/D. LIMITATION OF SERVICE CHARGES/ (B) Consultation Requirements in respect of Qualifying Works or Long Term Agreements/345. Consultation requirements; in general.

(B) CONSULTATION REQUIREMENTS IN RESPECT OF QUALIFYING WORKS OR LONG TERM AGREEMENTS

345. Consultation requirements; in general.

Where the following provisions apply to any qualifying works<sup>1</sup> or qualifying long term agreement<sup>2</sup>, the relevant contributions<sup>3</sup> of tenants are limited<sup>4</sup> unless the consultation requirements<sup>5</sup> have been either:

- 570 (1) complied with in relation to the works or agreement; or
- 571 (2) dispensed with in relation to the works or agreement by, or on appeal from, a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>6</sup>.

These provisions apply to qualifying works if relevant costs<sup>7</sup> incurred on carrying out the works exceed an appropriate amount<sup>8</sup>. An appropriate amount is an amount set by regulations made by the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister; and the regulations may make provision for either or both of the following to be an appropriate amount:

- 572 (a) an amount prescribed by, or determined in accordance with, the regulations; and
- 573 (b) an amount which results in the relevant contribution of any one or more tenants being an amount prescribed by, or determined in accordance with, the regulations<sup>9</sup>.

The Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister may by regulations provide that these provisions apply to a qualifying long term agreement:

- 574 (i) if relevant costs incurred under the agreement exceed an appropriate amount; or
- 575 (ii) if relevant costs incurred under the agreement during a period prescribed by the regulations exceed an appropriate amount<sup>10</sup>.

Where an appropriate amount is set by virtue of head (a) above, the amount of the relevant costs incurred on carrying out the works or under the agreement which may be taken into account in determining the relevant contributions of tenants is limited to the appropriate amount<sup>11</sup>; and where an appropriate amount is set by virtue of head (b) above, the amount of the relevant contribution of the tenant, or each of the tenants, whose relevant contribution would otherwise exceed the amount prescribed by, or determined in accordance with, the regulations is limited to the amount so prescribed or determined<sup>12</sup>.

Where an application is made to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination to dispense with all or any of the consultation requirements in relation to any qualifying works or qualifying long term agreement, the tribunal may make the determination if satisfied that it is reasonable to dispense with the requirements<sup>13</sup>.

1 For these purposes and the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20ZA (as substituted), 'qualifying works' means works on a building or any other premises: s 20ZA(2) (ss 20, 20ZA substituted by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 151).

2 For these purposes and the purposes of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20ZA (as substituted), 'qualifying long term agreement' means, subject to s 20ZA(3) (as substituted), an agreement entered into, by or on behalf of the landlord or a superior landlord, for a term of more than 12 months: s 20ZA(2) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 325 note 4 ante. The Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister may by regulations provide that an agreement is not a qualifying long term agreement (1) if it is an agreement of a description prescribed by the regulations; or (2) in any circumstances so prescribed: s 20ZA(3) (as so substituted). As to the exercise of this power see PARA 346 post. Regulations under s 20 (as substituted) or s 20ZA (as substituted): (a) may make provision generally or only in relation to specific cases; and (b) may make different provision for different purposes (s 20ZA(6) (as so substituted)); and must be made by statutory instrument subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament (s 20ZA(7) (as so substituted)). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante; and as to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

3 For these purposes, 'relevant contribution', in relation to a tenant and any works or agreement, is the amount which he may be required under the terms of his lease to contribute (by the payment of service charges) to relevant costs incurred on carrying out the works or under the agreement: ibid s 20(2) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 325 note 3 ante; and for the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 ante.

4 Ie in accordance with ibid s 20(6) (as substituted) or s 20(7) (as substituted), or both: see the text and notes 11-12 infra.

5 For these purposes, 'the consultation requirements' means requirements prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, by the Assembly or minister: ibid s 20ZA(4) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). Regulations under s 20ZA(4) (as so substituted) may in particular include provision requiring the landlord: (1) to provide details of proposed works or agreements to tenants or the recognised tenants' association representing them; (2) to obtain estimates for proposed works or agreements; (3) to invite tenants or the recognised tenants' association to propose the names of persons from whom the landlord should try to obtain other estimates; (4) to have regard to observations made by tenants or the recognised tenants' association in relation to proposed works or agreements and estimates; and (5) to give reasons in prescribed circumstances for carrying out works or entering into agreements: s 20ZA(5) (as so substituted). For the meaning of 'recognised tenants' association' see PARA 327 ante. As to the exercise of this power see the Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987 (as amended); the Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684 (as amended); notes 8, 10 infra; and PARA 346 et seq post.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20(1) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

7 For the meaning of 'relevant costs' see PARA 326 ante.

8 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20(3) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). For the purposes of s 20(3) (as so substituted), the appropriate amount is an amount which results in the relevant contribution of any tenant being more than £250: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 6; Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 6.

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 20(5) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

10 Ibid s 20(4) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). Section 20 (as so substituted) applies to a qualifying long term agreement if relevant costs incurred under the agreement in any accounting period exceed an amount which results in the relevant contribution of any tenant, in respect of that period, being more than £100; and for these purposes, 'accounting period' means the period beginning with the relevant date, and ending with the date that falls 12 months after the relevant date: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 4(1), (2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 4(1), (2). Subject to transitional provisions, in the case of the first accounting period, the relevant date is (1) if the relevant accounts are made up for periods of 12 months, the date on which the period that includes the date on which the relevant regulations came into force ends; or (2) if the accounts are not so made up, the date on which those regulations came into force: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 4(3) (amended by SI 2004/2939); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 4(3) (amended by SI 2005/1357). In the case of subsequent accounting periods, the relevant date is the date immediately following the end of the previous accounting period: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 4(4); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI

2004/684, reg 4(4). The relevant regulations came into force on 31 October 2003 in England and on 31 March 2004 in Wales: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 1(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 1(1).

12 Ibid s 20(7) (as substituted: see note 1 supra).

13 Ibid s 20ZA(1) (as substituted: see note 1 supra). A fee is payable for making an application under s 20ZA(1) (as so substituted): see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 3(3)(a), (4), (5); the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 3(3)(a), (4), (5). A fee is also payable for the hearing of the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5; the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5. As to the payment of such fees see further PARA 69 ante.

The application must be accompanied by a copy of the lease: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(3), Sch 1 para 2(a), Sch 2 para 2(3) (reg 3(3) amended by SI 2004/3098); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(3), Sch 1 para 2(a), Sch 2 para 2(3) (reg 3(3) amended by SI 2005/1356). As to the other particulars to be included, and the procedure on such an application, see PARA 59 et seq ante.

346. Agreements that are not qualifying long term agreements.

An agreement is not a qualifying long term agreement<sup>1</sup>:

- 576 (1) if it is a contract of employment; or
- 577 (2) if it is a management agreement<sup>2</sup> made by a local housing authority<sup>3</sup> and a tenant management organisation<sup>4</sup> or a body established under the provisions of the Local Government Act 2000 (known as an arm's length management organisation)<sup>5</sup>;
- 578 (3) if the parties to the agreement are a holding company<sup>6</sup> and one or more of its subsidiaries<sup>7</sup> or two or more subsidiaries of the same holding company;
- 579 (4) if:
- 33 41. (a) when the agreement is entered into, there are no tenants<sup>8</sup> of the building or other premises to which the agreement relates; and
- 42. (b) the agreement is for a term not exceeding five years<sup>9</sup>.
- 34

An agreement entered into, by or on behalf of the landlord<sup>10</sup> or a superior landlord:

- 580 (i) before the coming into force of the relevant regulations<sup>11</sup>; and
- 581 (ii) for a term of more than 12 months, is not a qualifying long term agreement, notwithstanding that more than 12 months of the term remained unexpired on the coming into force of those regulations<sup>12</sup>.

An agreement for a term of more than 12 months entered into, by or on behalf of the landlord or a superior landlord, which provides for the carrying out of qualifying works<sup>13</sup> for which public notice had been given before the date on which the relevant regulations came into force<sup>14</sup>, is not a qualifying long term agreement<sup>15</sup>.

LIMITATION OF SERVICE CHARGES/ (B) Consultation Requirements in respect of Qualifying Works or Long Term Agreements/347. Consultation requirements for qualifying long term agreements other than those for which public notice is required.

347. Consultation requirements for qualifying long term agreements other than those for which public notice is required.

Except where public notice<sup>1</sup> is required to be given of the relevant matters<sup>2</sup> to which a qualifying long term agreement<sup>3</sup> relates, the consultation requirements in relation to such agreements<sup>4</sup> for the statutory purposes<sup>5</sup> are as follows<sup>6</sup>:

- 582 (1) the landlord<sup>7</sup> must give notice in writing of his intention to enter into the agreement to each tenant<sup>8</sup> and, where a recognised tenants' association<sup>9</sup> represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>10</sup>;
- 583 (2) where a notice under head (1) above specifies a place and hours for inspection:
- 35
43. (a) the place and hours so specified must be reasonable; and
44. (b) a description of the relevant matters must be available for inspection, free of charge, at that place and during those hours<sup>11</sup>;
- 36
- 584 (3) where, within the relevant period<sup>12</sup>, observations are made in relation to the proposed agreement by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>13</sup>;
- 585 (4) where, within the relevant period:
- 37
45. (a) a single nomination is made<sup>14</sup> by a recognised tenants' association, whether or not a nomination is made by any tenant, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate<sup>15</sup> from the nominated person<sup>16</sup>;
46. (b) a single nomination is made by only one of the tenants, whether or not a nomination is made by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate from the nominated person<sup>17</sup>;
47. (c) a single nomination is made by more than one tenant, whether or not a nomination is made by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate from the person who received the most nominations, or, if there is no such person, but two or more persons received the same number of nominations, being a number in excess of the nominations received by any other person, from one of those two or more persons, or in any other case, from any nominated person<sup>18</sup>;
48. (d) more than one nomination is made by any tenant and more than one nomination is made by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate from at least one person nominated by a tenant<sup>19</sup> and from at least one person<sup>20</sup> nominated by the association<sup>21</sup>;
- 38
- 586 (5) the landlord must prepare at least two proposals in respect of the relevant matters<sup>22</sup>, at least one of which must propose that goods or services are provided, or works are carried out, as the case may be, by a person wholly unconnected with the landlord<sup>23</sup>; and where an estimate has been obtained from a nominated person, the landlord must prepare a proposal based on that estimate<sup>24</sup>;
- 587 (6) the landlord must give notice in writing of proposals prepared under head (5) above to each tenant and, where a recognised tenants' association represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>25</sup>;
- 588 (7) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the landlord's proposals by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>26</sup>;
- 589 (8) where the landlord enters into an agreement relating to relevant matters, he must, within 21 days of entering into the agreement, by notice in writing to each tenant and the recognised tenants' association, if any:
- 39
49. (a) state his reasons for making that agreement or specify the place and hours at which a statement of those reasons may be inspected; and

50. (b) where he has received observations to which he is required<sup>27</sup> to have regard, summarise the observations and respond to them or specify the place and hours at which that summary and response may be inspected<sup>28</sup>;
- 40
- 590 but this does not apply where the person with whom the agreement is made is a nominated person or submitted the lowest estimate<sup>29</sup>.

In relation to an RTB tenant<sup>30</sup> and a particular qualifying long term agreement, nothing in the above provisions requires a landlord to comply with any of the consultation requirements applicable to that agreement that arise before the thirty-first day of the RTB tenancy<sup>31</sup>.

1 'Public notice' means notice published in the Official Journal of the European Union pursuant to the Public Contracts Regulations 2006, SI 2006/5: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 2(1) (definition substituted by SI 2006/5); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 2(1) (definition as so substituted).

2 'The relevant matters', in relation to a proposed agreement, means the goods or services to be provided or the works to be carried out (as the case may be) under the agreement: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 2(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 2(1).

19 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 4(4) (a); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 4(4)(a).

20 le other than a person from whom an estimate is sought as mentioned in the text to note 19 supra.

21 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 4(4) (b); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 4(4)(b).

22 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(1).

23 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(2).

24 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(3). Each proposal must (1) contain a statement of the relevant matters; (2) contain a statement, as regards each party to the proposed agreement other than the landlord, of the party's name and address and of any connection (apart from the proposed agreement) between the party and the landlord; and for these purposes it must be assumed that there is a connection between a party (as the case may be) and the landlord: (a) where the landlord is a company, if the party is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (b) where the landlord is a company, and the party is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (c) where both the landlord and the party are companies, if any director or manager of one company is, or is to be, a director or manager of the other company; (d) where the party is a company, if the landlord is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; or (e) where the party is a company and the landlord is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(4)-(6); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(4)-(6). 'Close relative', in relation to a person, means a spouse or cohabitee, a parent, parent-in-law, son, son-in-law, daughter, daughter-in-law, brother, brother-in-law, sister, sister-in-law, step-parent, step-son or step-daughter of that person; and 'cohabitee', in relation to a person, means (i) a person of the opposite sex who is living with that person as husband or wife; or (ii) a person of the same sex living with that person in a relationship which has the characteristics of the relationship between husband and wife: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 2(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 2(1).

Where, as regards each tenant's unit of occupation and the relevant matters, it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to estimate the relevant contribution attributable to the relevant matters to which the proposed agreement relates, each proposal must contain a statement of that estimated contribution; and where it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make that estimate, and it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to estimate, as regards the building or other premises to which the proposed agreement relates, the total amount of his expenditure under the proposed agreement, each proposal must contain a statement of that estimated expenditure: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(7)-(8); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI

2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(7)-(8). Where it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make the estimate so mentioned, and it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to ascertain the current unit cost or hourly or daily rate applicable to the relevant matters, each proposal must contain a statement of that cost or rate: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(9); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(9).

Where the relevant matters comprise or include the proposed appointment by the landlord of an agent to discharge any of the landlord's obligations to the tenants which relate to the management by him of premises to which the agreement relates, each proposal must contain a statement: (i) that the person whose appointment is proposed is or, as the case may be, is not, a member of a professional body or trade association and subscribes or, as the case may be, does not subscribe, to any code of practice or voluntary accreditation scheme relevant to the functions of managing agents; and (ii) if the person is a member of a professional body or trade association, of the name of the body or association: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(10); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(10).

Each proposal must contain a statement as to the provisions (if any) for variation of any amount specified in, or to be determined under, the proposed agreement, and a statement of the intended duration of the proposed agreement: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(11)-(12); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(11)-(12). Where the landlord has received observations to which (in accordance with head (3) in the text) he is required to have regard, each proposal must also contain a statement summarising the observations and setting out the landlord's response to them: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 5(13); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 5(13).

25 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 6(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 6(1). The notice must (1) be accompanied by a copy of each proposal or specify the place and hours at which the proposals may be inspected; (2) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to the proposals; and (3) specify (a) the address to which such observations may be sent; (b) that they must be delivered within the relevant period; and (c) the date on which the relevant period ends: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 1 para 6(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 1 para 6(2). ### 348. Consultation requirements for qualifying long term agreements where public notice is required.

591 (1) the landlord<sup>6</sup> must give notice in writing of his intention to enter into the agreement to each tenant<sup>7</sup> and, where a recognised tenants' association<sup>8</sup> represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>9</sup>;

592 (2) where a notice under head (1) above specifies a place and hours for inspection:

51. (a) the place and hours so specified must be reasonable; and

52. (b) a description of the relevant matters must be available for inspection, free of charge, at that place and during those hours<sup>10</sup>;

593 (3) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the proposed agreement by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>11</sup>;

594 (4) the landlord must prepare a proposal in respect of the proposed agreement in accordance with the prescribed requirements<sup>12</sup>;

595 (5) the landlord must give notice in writing of proposals prepared under head (4) above to each tenant and, where a recognised tenants' association represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>13</sup>;

596 (6) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the landlord's proposals by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>14</sup>;

597 (7) where the landlord receives observations to which he is required<sup>15</sup> to have regard, he must, within 21 days of their receipt, by notice in writing to the person by whom the observations were made, state his response to the observations<sup>16</sup>;

598 (8) where a proposal prepared under head (4) above contains a statement that it is not reasonably practicable for him to make the specified estimate<sup>17</sup>, the landlord must, within 21 days of receiving sufficient information to enable him to estimate the specified amount, cost or rate<sup>18</sup>, give notice in writing of the estimated amount, cost or rate, as the case may be, to each tenant and, where a recognised tenants' association represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>19</sup>.

In relation to an RTB tenant<sup>20</sup> and a particular qualifying long term agreement, nothing in the above provisions requires a landlord to comply with any of the consultation requirements applicable to that agreement that arise before the thirty-first day of the RTB tenancy<sup>21</sup>.

9 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 5(2), Sch 2 para 1(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 5(2), Sch 2 para 1(1). The notice must (1) describe, in general terms, the relevant matters or specify the place and hours at which a description of the relevant matters may be inspected; (2) state the landlord's reasons for considering it necessary to enter into the agreement; (3) where the relevant matters consist of or include qualifying works, state the landlord's reasons for considering it necessary to carry out those works; (4) state that the reason why the landlord is not inviting recipients of the notice to nominate persons from whom he should try to obtain an estimate for the relevant matters is that public notice of the relevant matters is to be given; (5) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to the relevant matters; and (6) specify (a) the address to which such observations may be sent; (b) that they must be delivered within the relevant period; and (c) the date on which the relevant period ends: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 1(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 1(2). For the meaning of 'the relevant period' see PARA 347 note 12 ante; and for the meaning of 'qualifying works' see PARA 345 note 1 ante.

10 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 2(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 2(1). If facilities to enable copies to be taken are not made available at the times at which the description may be inspected, the landlord must provide to any tenant, on request and free of charge, a copy of the description: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 2(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 2(2).

11 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 3; Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 3.

12 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(1). The proposal must contain a statement of the name and address of every party to the proposed agreement (other than the landlord); and of any connection (apart from the proposed agreement) between the landlord and any other party; and for these purposes it is to be assumed that there is a connection between the landlord and a party: (1) where the landlord is a company, if the party is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (2) where the landlord is a company, and the party is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (3) where both the landlord and the party are companies, if any director or manager of one company is, or is to be, a director or manager of the other company; (4) where the party is a company, if the landlord is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; or (5) where the party is a company and the landlord is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(2)-(3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(2)-(3). For the meaning of 'close relative' see PARA 347 note 24 ante.

Where, as regards each tenant's unit of occupation, it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to estimate the relevant contribution to be incurred by the tenant attributable to the relevant matters to which the proposed agreement relates, the proposal must contain a statement of that contribution: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(4); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(4). Where (a) it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make that estimate; and (b) it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to estimate, as regards the building or other premises to which the proposed agreement relates, the total amount of his expenditure under the proposed agreement, the proposal must contain a statement of the amount of that estimated expenditure; and where (i) it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make the estimate referred to in head (a) supra or the estimate mentioned in head (b) supra; and (ii) it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to ascertain the current unit cost or hourly or daily rate applicable to the relevant matters to which the proposed agreement relates, the proposal must contain a statement of that cost or rate: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(5)-(6); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(5)-(6). Where it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make the estimate mentioned in head (ii) supra, the proposal must contain a statement of the reasons why he cannot comply and the date by which he expects to be able to provide an estimate, cost or rate: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(7); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(7).

Where the relevant matters comprise or include the proposed appointment by the landlord of an agent to discharge any of the landlord's obligations to the tenants which relate to the management by him of premises to which the agreement relates, each proposal must contain a statement: (A) that the person whose appointment is proposed is or, as the case may be, is not, a member of a professional body or trade association and subscribes or, as the case may be, does not subscribe, to any code of practice or voluntary accreditation scheme relevant to the functions of managing agents; and (B) if the person is a member of a professional body or trade association, of the name of the body or association: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(8); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(8). Each proposal must contain a statement of the intended duration of the proposed agreement; and where the landlord has received observations to which (in accordance with head (3) in the text) he is required to have regard, the proposal must contain a statement summarising the observations and setting out the landlord's response to them: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 4(9)-(10); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 4(9)-(10).

13 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 5(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 5(1). The notice must (1) be accompanied by a copy of each proposal or specify the place and hours at which the proposals may be inspected; (2) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to the proposals; and (3) specify (a) the address to which such observations may be sent; (b) that they must be delivered within the relevant period; and (c) the date on which the relevant period ends: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 5(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 5(2). Head (2) in the text applies to proposals so made available for inspection as it applies to a description of the relevant matters made available for inspection under that head: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 2 para 5(3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 2 para 5(3).

349. Consultation requirements for qualifying works which are the subject of a qualifying long term agreement or similar agreement.

Where qualifying works<sup>1</sup>:

- 599 (1) are the subject, whether alone or with other matters, of a qualifying long term agreement<sup>2</sup> to which the relevant statutory provisions apply<sup>3</sup>; or
- 600 (2) are carried out at any time on or after the date that falls two months after the date on which the relevant regulations came into force<sup>4</sup>, under an agreement entered into, by or on behalf of the landlord<sup>5</sup> or a superior landlord, before the coming into force of those regulations; or
- 601 (3) for which public notice<sup>6</sup> has been given before the date on which the relevant regulations came into force<sup>7</sup> are carried out at any time on or after that date under an agreement for a term of more than 12 months entered into, by or on behalf of the landlord or a superior landlord, the consultation requirements as regards those works for the statutory purposes<sup>8</sup> are as follows<sup>9</sup>:

- 602 (a) the landlord must give notice in writing of his intention to carry out qualifying works to each tenant<sup>10</sup> and, where a recognised tenants' association<sup>11</sup> represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>12</sup>;
- 603 (b) where a notice under head (a) above specifies a place and hours for inspection:
- 43
- 53. (i) the place and hours so specified must be reasonable; and
- 54. (ii) a description of the proposed works must be available for inspection, free of charge, at that place and during those hours<sup>13</sup>;
- 44
- 604 (c) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the proposed works or the landlord's estimated expenditure by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>14</sup>;
- 605 (d) where the landlord receives observations to which he is required<sup>15</sup> to have regard, he must, within 21 days of their receipt, by notice in writing to the person by whom the observations were made, state his response to the observations<sup>16</sup>.

In relation to an RTB tenant<sup>17</sup> and particular qualifying works, nothing in the above provisions requires a landlord to comply with any of the consultation requirements applicable to those works that arise before the thirty-first day of the RTB tenancy<sup>18</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/D. LIMITATION OF SERVICE CHARGES/ (B) Consultation Requirements in respect of Qualifying Works or Long Term

Agreements/350. Consultation requirements for qualifying works not the subject of a qualifying long term agreement or similar agreement.

350. Consultation requirements for qualifying works not the subject of a qualifying long term agreement or similar agreement.

Where qualifying works<sup>1</sup> are not the subject of a qualifying long term agreement<sup>2</sup> or similar agreement<sup>3</sup>, the consultation requirements for the statutory purposes<sup>4</sup> as regards those works are, in a case where public notice<sup>5</sup> of those works is required to be given, those specified in heads (1) to (7) below, and in any other case are those specified in heads (i) to (vi) below<sup>6</sup>.

Where public notice is required to be given:

- 606 (1) the landlord<sup>7</sup> must give notice in writing of his intention to carry out qualifying works to each tenant<sup>8</sup> and, where a recognised tenants' association<sup>9</sup> represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>10</sup>;
- 607 (2) where a notice under head (1) above specifies a place and hours for inspection:
- 45
- 55. (a) the place and hours so specified must be reasonable; and
- 56. (b) a description of the proposed works must be available for inspection, free of charge, at that place and during those hours<sup>11</sup>;
- 46
- 608 (3) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the proposed works by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>12</sup>;
- 609 (4) the landlord must prepare, in accordance with the prescribed requirements, a statement in respect of the proposed contract under which the proposed works are to be carried out<sup>13</sup>;
- 610 (5) the landlord must give notice in writing of his intention to enter into the proposed contract to each tenant and, where a recognised tenants' association represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>14</sup>;
- 611 (6) where, within the relevant period, the landlord receives observations in response to the invitation in the notice under head (5) above, he must, within 21 days of their receipt, by notice in writing to the person by whom the observations were made, state his response to the observations<sup>15</sup>;
- 612 (7) where a proposal prepared under head (4) above sets out the landlord's reasons for being unable to make the specified estimate<sup>16</sup>, the landlord must, within 21 days of receiving sufficient information to enable him to estimate the specified amount, cost or rate<sup>17</sup>, give notice in writing of the estimated amount, cost or rate, as the case may be, to each tenant and, where a recognised tenants' association represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>18</sup>.

Where public notice is not required to be given:

- 613 (i) the landlord must give notice in writing of his intention to carry out qualifying works to each tenant and, where a recognised tenants' association represents some or all of the tenants, to the association<sup>19</sup>;
- 614 (ii) where a notice under head (i) above specifies a place and hours for inspection:
- 47
- 57. (A) the place and hours so specified must be reasonable; and
- 58. (B) a description of the proposed works must be available for inspection, free of charge, at that place and during those hours<sup>20</sup>;

48

615 (iii) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the proposed works by any tenant or recognised tenants' association, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>21</sup>;

616 (iv) where, within the relevant period:

49

59. (A) a nomination is made<sup>22</sup> by a recognised tenants' association, whether or not a nomination is made by any tenant, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate<sup>23</sup> from the nominated person<sup>24</sup>;

60. (B) a nomination is made by only one of the tenants, whether or not a nomination is made by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate from the nominated person<sup>25</sup>;

61. (C) a single nomination is made by more than one tenant, whether or not a nomination is made by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate from the person who received the most nominations, or, if there is no such person, but two or more persons received the same number of nominations, being a number in excess of the nominations received by any other person, from one of those two or more persons, or in any other case, from any nominated person<sup>26</sup>;

62. (D) more than one nomination is made by any tenant and more than one nomination is made by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord must try to obtain an estimate from at least one person nominated by a tenant<sup>27</sup> and from at least one person<sup>28</sup> nominated by the association<sup>29</sup>;

617 (v) where, within the relevant period, observations are made in relation to the estimates by a recognised tenants' association or, as the case may be, any tenant, the landlord must have regard to those observations<sup>30</sup>;

618 (vi) where the landlord enters into a contract for the carrying out of qualifying works, he must, within 21 days of entering into the contract, by notice in writing to each tenant and the recognised tenants' association, if any:

63. (A) state his reasons for awarding the contract or specify the place and hours at which a statement of those reasons may be inspected; and

64. (B) where he has received observations to which he was required<sup>31</sup> to have regard, summarise the observations and set out his response to them<sup>32</sup>;

619 but this does not apply where the person with whom the contract is made is a nominated person or submitted the lowest estimate<sup>33</sup>.

In relation to an RTB tenant<sup>34</sup> and particular qualifying works, nothing in the above provisions requires a landlord to comply with any of the consultation requirements applicable to those works that arise before the thirty-first day of the RTB tenancy<sup>35</sup>.

10 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 7(4), Sch 4 para 1(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 7(4), Sch 4 para 1(1). The notice must (1) describe, in general terms, the works proposed to be carried out or specify the place and hours at which a description of the proposed works may be inspected; (2) state the landlord's reasons for considering it necessary to carry out the proposed works; (3) state that the reason why the landlord is not inviting recipients of the notice to nominate persons from whom he should try to obtain an estimate for carrying out the works is that public notice of the works is to be given; (4) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to the proposed works; and (5) specify (a) the address to which such observations may be sent; (b) that they must be delivered within the relevant period; and (c) the date on which the relevant period ends: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 1(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 1(2). For the meaning of 'the relevant period' see PARA 347 note 12 ante.

11 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 2(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 2(1). If facilities to enable copies to be taken are not made available at the times at which the description may be inspected, the landlord must provide to any tenant, on request and free of charge, a copy of the description: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 2(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 2(2).

12 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 3; Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 3.

13 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 4(1). The statement must set out the name and address of the person with whom the landlord proposes to contract and particulars of any connection between them (apart from the proposed contract); and for these purposes it is to be assumed that there is a connection between a person and the landlord (1) where the landlord is a company, if the person is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (2) where the landlord is a company, and the person is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (3) where both the landlord and the person are companies, if any director or manager of one company is, or is to be, a director or manager of the other company; (4) where the person is a company, if the landlord is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; or (5) where the person is a company and the landlord is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(2), (3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 4(2), (3).

Where, as regards each tenant's unit of occupation, it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to estimate the amount of the relevant contribution to be incurred by the tenant attributable to the works to which the proposed contract relates, that estimated amount must be specified in the statement: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(4); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 4(4). Where (a) it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make that estimate; and (b) it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to estimate, as regards the building or other premises to which the proposed contract relates, the total amount of his expenditure under the proposed contract, that estimated amount must be specified in the statement; and where (i) it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make the estimate referred to in head (a) supra or mentioned in head (b) supra; and (ii) it is reasonably practicable for the landlord to ascertain the current unit cost or hourly or daily rate applicable to the works to which the proposed contract relates, that cost or rate must be specified in the statement: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(5), (6); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 4(5), (6). Where it is not reasonably practicable for the landlord to make the estimate mentioned in head (ii) supra, the reasons why he cannot comply and the date by which he expects to be able to provide an estimated amount, cost or rate must be specified in the statement: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(7); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 4(7).

Where the landlord has received observations to which (in accordance with head (3) in the text) he is required to have regard, the statement must summarise the observations and set out his response to them: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(8); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 4(8).

14 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 5(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 5(1). The notice must (1) comprise, or be accompanied by, the statement prepared in accordance with head (4) in the text ('the paragraph 4 statement') or specify the place and hours at which that statement may be inspected; (2) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to any matter mentioned in the paragraph 4 statement; (3) specify (a) the address to which such observations may be sent; (b) that they must be delivered within the relevant period; and (c) the date on which the relevant period ends: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 5(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 5(2). Where the paragraph 4 statement is made available for inspection, head (2) in the text applies in relation to that statement as it applies in relation to a description of proposed works made available for inspection under that head: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 5(3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 5(3).

16 In his reasons for being unable to comply with the Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(6) or the corresponding provision applying in Wales; see note 13 supra.

17 In the amount, cost or rate referred to in the Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 4(4), (5) or (6) or the corresponding provision applying in Wales; see note 13 supra.

18 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 7; Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 7.

19 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 8(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 8(1). The notice must (1) describe, in general terms, the works proposed to be carried out or specify the place and hours at which a description of the proposed works may be inspected; (2) state the landlord's reasons for considering it necessary to carry out the proposed works; (3) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to the proposed works; and (4) specify (a) the address to which such observations may be sent; (b) that they must be delivered within the relevant period; and (c) the date on which the relevant period ends; and must also invite each tenant and the association (if any) to propose, within the relevant period, the name of a person from whom the landlord should try to obtain an estimate for the carrying out of the proposed works: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 8(2), (3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 8(2), (3).

If facilities to enable copies to be taken are not made available at the times at which the description may be inspected, the landlord must provide to any tenant, on request and free of charge, a copy of the description: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 9(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 9(2).

22 For these purposes, 'nominated person' means a person whose name is proposed in response to an invitation made as mentioned in note 19 supra; and 'nomination' means any such proposal: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, reg 2(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, reg 2(1).

23 VAT must be included in any estimate where applicable: see PARA 347 note 15 ante.

24 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(1); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(1).

25 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(2); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(2).

26 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(3).

27 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(4)(a); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(4)(a).

28 Ie other than a person from whom a nomination is sought as mentioned in the text to note 27 supra.

29 Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(4)(b); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(4)(b).

The landlord must (1) obtain estimates for the carrying out of the proposed works; (2) supply, free of charge, a statement ('the paragraph (b) statement') setting out: (a) as regards at least two of the estimates, the amount specified in the estimate as the estimated cost of the proposed works; and (b) where the landlord has received observations to which (in accordance with head (iii) in the text) he is required to have regard, a summary of the observations and his response to them; and (3) make all of the estimates available for inspection: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(5); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(5). At least one of the estimates must be that of a person wholly unconnected with the landlord; and for these purposes, it is to be assumed that there is a connection between a person and the landlord (i) where the landlord is a company, if the person is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (ii) where the landlord is a company, and the person is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is, or is to be, a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; (iii) where both the landlord and the person are companies, if any director or manager of one company is, or is to be, a director or manager of the other company; (iv) where the person is a company, if the landlord is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager; or (v) where the person is a company and the landlord is a partner in a partnership, if any partner in that partnership is a director or manager of the company or is a close relative of any such director or manager: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(6), (7); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(6), (7). Where the landlord has obtained an estimate from a nominated person, that estimate must be one of those to which the paragraph (b) statement relates: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(8); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(8). The paragraph (b) statement must be supplied to, and the estimates made available for inspection by, each tenant and the secretary of the recognised tenants' association (if any); and the landlord must, by notice in writing to each tenant and the association (if any): (A) specify the place and hours at which the estimates may be inspected; (B) invite the making, in writing, of observations in relation to those estimates; (C) specify the address to which such observations may be sent, that they must be delivered within the relevant period and the date on which the relevant period ends: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(9), (10); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(9), (10). Head (ii) in the text applies to estimates made so available for inspection as it applies to a description of proposed works made available for inspection under that head: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 11(11); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 11(11).

Head (ii) in the text applies to a statement made so available for inspection as it applies to a description of proposed works made available for inspection under that head: Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1987, Sch 4 para 13(3); Service Charges (Consultation Requirements) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/684, Sch 4 para 13(3).

E. LIABILITY TO PAY SERVICE CHARGES; JURISDICTION

351. Determination of liability to pay service charges.

An application may be made to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination whether a service charge<sup>1</sup> is payable and, if it is, as to:

- 620 (1) the person by whom it is payable;
- 621 (2) the person to whom it is payable;
- 622 (3) the amount which is payable;
- 623 (4) the date at or by which it is payable; and
- 624 (5) the manner in which it is payable<sup>2</sup>;

and this applies whether or not any payment has been made<sup>3</sup>.

An application may also be made to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination whether, if costs were incurred for services, repairs, maintenance, improvements, insurance or management of any specified description, a service charge would be payable for the costs and, if it would, as to:

- 625 (a) the person by whom it would be payable;
- 626 (b) the person to whom it would be payable;
- 627 (c) the amount which would be payable;
- 628 (d) the date at or by which it would be payable; and
- 629 (e) the manner in which it would be payable<sup>4</sup>.

No application may, however, be made under any of the above provisions in respect of a matter which:

- 630 (i) has been agreed or admitted by the tenant<sup>5</sup>;
- 631 (ii) has been, or is to be, referred to arbitration pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>6</sup> to which the tenant is a party;
- 632 (iii) has been the subject of determination by a court; or
- 633 (iv) has been the subject of determination by an arbitral tribunal<sup>7</sup> pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>8</sup>;

but the tenant is not to be taken to have agreed or admitted any matter by reason only of having made any payment<sup>9</sup>.

An agreement by the tenant of a dwelling<sup>10</sup>, other than a post-dispute arbitration agreement, is void in so far as it purports to provide for a determination in a particular manner, or on particular evidence, of any question which may be the subject of an application under the above provisions<sup>11</sup>.

The jurisdiction conferred on a leasehold valuation tribunal in respect of any matter by virtue of these provisions is in addition to any jurisdiction of a court in respect of the matter<sup>12</sup>. A leasehold valuation tribunal has jurisdiction to determine a claim for damages for breach of covenant so far as such a claim constitutes a defence to a claim for payment of a service charge and this may extend to determining a claim for loss of amenity or loss of health arising from a breach of a repairing covenant<sup>13</sup>; but the tribunal may decline to exercise this jurisdiction in a matter where the nature of the issues makes a court procedure more appropriate<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 ante.

2 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 27A(1) (s 27A added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 155(1)). There is no justification for implying any restriction into the entirely general words of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 27A (as so added); in most cases the applicant for a determination as to the proper amount of service charge payable will be the party who is liable to pay the service charge the subject of the challenge, and the respondent to the application will be the party who is seeking to levy it on the applicant; but there is no reason why that should inevitably be the case: Ruddy v Oakfern Properties Ltd [2006] EWCA Civ 1389, [2006] All ER (D) 290 (Oct).

A fee is payable for making an application under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 27A (as added): see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 3(1)(a), (2), (5); the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 3(1)(a), (2), (5). A fee is also payable for the hearing of the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5; the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5. As to the payment of such fees see further PARA 69 ante.

The application must be accompanied by the name and address of the secretary of any recognised tenants' association and a copy of the lease: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(3), Sch 1 para 2(b), Sch 2 para 2(1), (3) (reg 3(3) amended by SI 2004/3098); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(3), Sch 1 para 2(b), Sch 2 para 2(1), (3) (reg 3(3) amended by SI 2005/1356). 4 Ibid s 27A(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

351 Determination of liability to pay service charges

NOTE 2--Ruddy, cited, reported at [2007] 1 All ER 337.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/F. MANNER IN WHICH SERVICE CHARGE CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE HELD/352. Service charge contributions to be held in trust.

F. MANNER IN WHICH SERVICE CHARGE CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE HELD

352. Service charge contributions to be held in trust.

The following provisions apply where:

- 634 (1) the tenants<sup>1</sup> ('the contributing tenants') of two or more dwellings<sup>2</sup> may be required under the terms of their leases<sup>3</sup> to contribute to the same costs; or
- 635 (2) the tenant ('the sole contributing tenant') of a dwelling may be required under the terms of his lease to contribute to costs to which no other tenant of a dwelling may be required to contribute, by the payment of service charges<sup>4</sup>. For these purposes, 'tenant' does not, however, include a tenant of an exempt landlord<sup>5</sup>.

Any sums paid to the payee<sup>6</sup> by the contributing tenants or the sole contributing tenant by way of relevant service charges<sup>7</sup>, (and, until a day to be appointed<sup>8</sup>, any investments representing those sums), must, together with any income accruing thereon, be held by the payee either as a single fund or, if he thinks fit, in two or more separate funds<sup>9</sup>.

The payee must hold any trust fund<sup>10</sup>:

- 636 (a) on trust to defray costs incurred in connection with the matters for which the relevant service charges were payable, whether incurred by himself or by any other person; and
- 637 (b) subject thereto, on trust for the persons who are the contributing tenants for the time being or the person who is the sole contributing tenant for the time being<sup>11</sup>; and the contributing tenants are to be treated<sup>12</sup> as entitled by virtue of head (2) above to such shares in the residue of any such fund as are proportionate to their respective liabilities to pay relevant service charges, or the sole contributing tenant is to be treated as so entitled to the residue of any such fund<sup>13</sup>.

On the termination of the lease of any of the contributing tenants, the tenant is not entitled to any part of any trust fund; and any part of any such fund which is attributable to relevant service charges paid under the lease accordingly continues to be held<sup>14</sup> on the statutory trusts<sup>15</sup>. On the termination of the lease of the last of the contributing tenants, or of the lease of the sole contributing tenant, any trust fund must be dissolved as at the date of the termination of the lease; and any assets comprised in the fund immediately before the dissolution must:

- 638 (i) if the payee is the landlord, be retained by him for his own use and benefit; and
- 639 (ii) in any other case, be transferred to the landlord by the payee<sup>16</sup>.

The above provisions prevail<sup>17</sup> over the terms of any express or implied trust<sup>18</sup> created by a lease so far as inconsistent with those provisions, other than an express trust so created before 1 April 1989<sup>19</sup> in the case of a lease of any of the contributing tenants or, in the case of the lease of the sole contributing tenant, before the appointed day<sup>20</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' generally see PARA 53 note 1 ante; and see the text and note 5 infra.

2 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 53 note 2 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 53 note 1 ante.

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(1) (s 42(1)-(4), (6)-(9) amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 157, Sch 10 para 15, with effect from 28 February 2005 in relation to England (see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 (Commencement No 5 and Saving and Transitional Provision) Order 2004, SI 2004/3056, art 3(b)); and with effect from 31 May 2005 in relation to Wales (see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 (Commencement No 3 and Saving and Transitional Provision) (Wales) Order 2005, SI 2005/1353, art 2(b)).

For these purposes, 'service charge' has the meaning given by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 18(1) (as amended) (see PARA 326 ante), except that it does not include a service charge payable by the tenant of a dwelling the rent of which is registered under the Rent Act 1977 Pt IV (ss 62-75) (as amended) (see PARA 909 et seq post), unless the amount registered is, in pursuance of s 71(4) (as amended) (see PARA 922 post), entered as a variable amount: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(1).

5 Ibid s 42(1). For the meaning of 'exempt landlord' see PARA 354 post. Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), this definition of 'tenant' does not apply; and references to a tenant of a dwelling include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises. see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 11(1), (3), (4).

6 For these purposes, 'the payee' means the landlord or other person to whom any such charges are payable by the contributing tenants under the terms of their leases, or by the sole contributing tenant under the terms of his lease: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(1) (as amended: see note 4 supra). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company, references to the payee are to that company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 11(1), (2).

7 For these purposes, 'relevant service charges' means any such charges as are payable by the contributing tenants or the sole contributing tenant under the terms of their leases or of his lease: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(1) (as amended: see note 4 supra). See also note 9 infra.

8 Ie a day to be appointed under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 181(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

9 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(2) (as amended (see note 4 supra); further prospectively amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 180, Sch 14, as from a day to be appointed (see note 8 supra)). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company, the reference in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(2) (as so amended) to sums paid to the payee by the contributing tenants by way of relevant service charges includes payments made to the RTM company under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 94 or s 103 (see PARAS 389, 395 post): Sch 7 para 11(1), (5).

If the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister by order so provides, any sums standing to the credit of any trust fund may, instead of being invested in any other manner authorised by law, be invested in such manner as may be specified in the order; and any such order may contain such incidental, supplemental or transitional provisions as the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister considers appropriate in connection with the order: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(5) (prospectively repealed by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 180, Sch 14, as from a day to be appointed (see note 8 supra)). Any power of the Secretary of State or the Assembly to make an order or regulations under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 is exercisable by statutory instrument and may be exercised so as to make different provision for different cases, including different provision for different areas: s 53(1). A statutory instrument containing (1) an order under s 1(5) (see PARA 1746 post), s 25(6) (see PARA 1783 post), s 42(5) (as so repealed) or s 55 (application to Isles of Scilly); or (2) any regulations made under s 20(4) (see PARA 1752 note 8 post), or 35(2)(g) (as added) (see PARA 149 ante) is subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 53(2) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 180, Sch 14). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante; and as to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

In exercise of the power conferred by s 42(5) (as so repealed) and prior to the transfer of functions in relation to Wales, the Secretary of State made the Service Charge Contributions (Authorised Investments) Order 1988, SI 1988/1284, which came into force on 1 April 1989: art 1. Any sums standing to the credit of any trust fund to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42 (as amended) applies may be (1) deposited at interest with the Bank of England; or (2) deposited in the United Kingdom at interest with (a) a person who has permission under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt IV (ss 40-55) to accept deposits; or (b) an EEA firm of the kind mentioned in Sch 3 para 5(b) (as substituted) who has permission under Sch 3 para 15 (as amended) (as a result of qualifying for authorisation under Sch 3 para 12(1)) to accept deposits; and where a person of a kind mentioned in head (2)(a) supra is a building society within the meaning of the Building Societies Act 1986, any such sums may also be invested in shares in that building society: Service Charge Contributions (Authorised Investments) Order 1988, SI 1988/1284, art 2(1), (2) (amended by SI 2001/3649). Heads (1)-(2) supra must be read with (i) the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22; (ii) any relevant order under s 22; and (iii) Sch 22 (as amended): Service Charge Contributions (Authorised Investments) Order 1988, SI 1988/1284, art 2(3) (added by SI 2001/3649).

10 For these purposes, 'trust fund' means the fund or, as the case may be, any of the funds mentioned in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(2)(as amended): s 42(1).

11 Ibid s 42(3) (as amended: see note 4 supra).

12 Ie subject to ibid s 42(6)-(8) (as amended): see the text and notes 13-16 infra.

13 Ibid s 42(4) (as amended: see note 4 supra). Section 42(4) (as amended) and s 42(6), (7) (as amended) (see the text and notes 14-16 infra) have effect in relation to any of the contributing tenants, or a sole contributing tenant, subject to any express terms of his lease, whenever it was granted, which relate to the distribution, either before or, as the case may be, at the termination of the lease, of amounts attributable to relevant service charges paid under its terms: s 42(8) (as so amended; further prospectively amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 180, Sch 14, as from a day to be appointed (see note 8 supra); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). Until that amendment comes into force, the words 'whenever it was granted' are omitted and the words 'paid under its terms' are followed by the words 'whether the lease was granted before or after the commencement of this section'.

A landlord may establish a reserve fund and apply a year end service charge surplus to it, but only in accordance with the terms of the lease; as such, only such reasonable part of expenses, outgoings and other expenditure as are of a periodically recurring nature may be applied: see St Mary's Mansions Ltd v Limegate Investment Co (Sarruf, Pt 20 defendants) [2002] EWCA Civ 1491, [2003] HLR 319, [2002] All ER (D) 169 (Oct).

14 Ie continues to be held on the trusts referred to in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42(3) (as amended): see the text and notes 10-11 supra.

15 Ibid s 42(6) (as amended: see note 4 supra). See also note 13 supra.

352 Service charge contributions to be held in trust

NOTE 9--Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 53 further amended: Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 12 para 13 (partly in force: SI 2008/3068).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/F. MANNER IN WHICH SERVICE CHARGE CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE HELD/353. Service charge contributions to be held in designated account.

353. Service charge contributions to be held in designated account.

As from a day which, except for the purposes of making relevant regulations, is to be appointed<sup>1</sup>, the following provisions have effect. The payee<sup>2</sup> must hold any sums standing to the credit of any trust fund<sup>3</sup> in a designated account at a relevant financial institution<sup>4</sup>; and an account is a designated account in relation to sums standing to the credit of a trust fund if:

- 640 (1) the relevant financial institution has been notified in writing that sums standing to the credit of the trust fund are to be, or are, held in it; and
- 641 (2) no other funds are held in the account, and the account is an account of a description specified in regulations made by the Secretary of State<sup>5</sup> or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>6</sup>.

Any of the contributing tenants<sup>7</sup>, or the sole contributing tenant<sup>8</sup>, may by notice in writing<sup>9</sup> require the payee:

- 642 (a) to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting documents evidencing that the duty to hold service charge contributions in a designated account is complied with<sup>10</sup> and for taking copies of or extracts from them; or
- 643 (b) to take copies of or extracts from any such documents and either send them to him or afford him reasonable facilities for collecting them, as he specifies<sup>11</sup>.

If the tenant is represented by a recognised tenants' association<sup>12</sup> and he consents, the notice may be served by the secretary of the association instead of by the tenant, and in that case any requirement imposed by it is to afford reasonable facilities, or to send copies or extracts, to the secretary<sup>13</sup>. The payee must comply with a requirement imposed by a notice under these provisions within the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he receives the notice<sup>14</sup>. To the extent that such a notice requires the payee to afford facilities for inspecting documents he must do so free of charge, but he may treat as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in doing so<sup>15</sup>. The payee may make a reasonable charge for doing anything else in compliance with a requirement imposed by such a notice<sup>16</sup>.

Any of the contributing tenants, or the sole contributing tenant, may withhold payment of a service charge<sup>17</sup> if he has reasonable grounds for believing that the payee has failed to comply with the duty imposed on him to hold service charge contributions in a designated account<sup>18</sup>, and any provisions of his tenancy relating to non-payment or late payment of service charges do not have effect in relation to the period for which he so withholds it<sup>19</sup>.

Nothing in the above provisions, however, applies to the payee if the circumstances are such as are specified in regulations made by the Secretary of State or the Assembly or minister<sup>20</sup>.

If a person fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with a duty imposed on him by or by virtue of the above provisions he commits an offence<sup>21</sup> and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale<sup>22</sup>. Where such an offence committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or a person purporting to act in such a capacity, or to be due to any neglect on the part of such an officer or person, he, as well as the body corporate, is guilty of the offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly<sup>23</sup>. Proceedings for an offence under these provisions may be brought by a local housing authority<sup>24</sup>.

1 le partly as from a day to be appointed under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 181(1).

2 For the meaning of 'payee' see PARA 352 note 6 ante (definition applied by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A(11) (s 42A, 42B added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 156(1), partly as from a day to be appointed (see note 1 supra)). At the date at which this title states the law, the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A (as so added) was in force only for the purpose of making regulations (see the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 (Commencement No 1, Savings and Transitional Provisions) (England) Order 2002, SI 2002/1912, arts 1(2), 2(c); the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 (Commencement No 1, Savings and Transitional Provisions) (Wales) Order 2002, SI 2002/3012, arts 1(2), 2(c)); and the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42B (as so added) was not in force.

3 For the meaning of 'trust fund' see PARA 352 note 10 ante (definition as applied: see note 2 supra).

4 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A(1) (as added: see note 2 supra). For these purposes, 'relevant financial institution' has the meaning given by regulations made by the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister: s 42(11) (as so added). As to the transfer of functions so far as exercisable in relation to Wales see PARA 27 note 4 ante.

5 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 27 note 3 ante.

6 Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A(2) (as added: see note 2 supra).

7 For the meaning of 'contributing tenant' see PARA 352 ante (definition as applied: see note 2 supra).

8 For the meaning of 'sole contributing tenant' see PARA 352 ante (definition as applied: see note 2 supra).

9 A notice under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A (as added) is duly served on the payee if it is served on (1) an agent of the payee named as such in the rent book or similar document; or (2) the person who receives the rent on behalf of the payee; and a person on whom such a notice is so served must forward it as soon as may be to the payee: s 42A(5) (as added: see note 2 supra). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), s 42A(5) (as so added) applies as if head (1) supra were omitted and the person referred to in head (2) supra were a person who receives service charges on behalf of the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 11(1), (6).

10 le that the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A(1) (as added) is complied with: see the text and notes 1-4 supra.

11 Ibid s 42A(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

12 For these purposes, 'recognised tenants' association' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 327 ante): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A(11) (as added: see note 2 supra).

13 Ibid s 42A(4) (as added: see note 2 supra).

14 Ibid s 42A(6) (as added: see note 2 supra).

15 Ibid s 42A(7) (as added: see note 2 supra).

16 Ibid s 42A(8) (as added: see note 2 supra).

17 For the meaning of 'service charge' for these purposes see PARA 352 note 4 ante (definition as applied: see note 2 supra).

18 le the duty imposed by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A(1) (as added): see the text and notes 1-4 supra.

19 Ibid s 42A(9) (as added: see note 2 supra).

20 Ibid s 42A(10) (as added: see note 2 supra).

21 Ibid s 42B(1) (as added: see note 2 supra).

22 Ibid s 42B(2) (as added: see note 2 supra). As to the standard scale see PARA 52 note 6 ante.

23 Ibid s 42B(3) (as added: see note 2 supra). Where the affairs of a body corporate are managed by its members, s 42B(3) (as so added) applies in relation to the acts and defaults of a member in connection with his functions of management as if he were a director of the body corporate: s 42B(4) (as so added).

24 Ibid s 42B(5) (as added: see note 2 supra). For these purposes, 'local housing authority' has the same meaning as in the Housing Act 1985 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 1311 note 4 post): Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42B(5) (as so added).

353 Service charge contributions to be held in designated account

TEXT AND NOTES 1-20--Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 42A amended: Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 12 para 12 (partly in force: SI 2008/3068).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/8. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(1) SERVICE CHARGES/(ii) The Statutory Regime relating to Dwellings/F. MANNER IN WHICH SERVICE CHARGE CONTRIBUTIONS TO BE HELD/354. Meaning of 'exempt landlord'.

354. Meaning of 'exempt landlord'.

'Exempt landlord' means<sup>1</sup> a landlord<sup>2</sup> who is one of the following bodies, namely:

- 644 (1) a district, county, county borough<sup>3</sup> or London borough<sup>4</sup> council, the Common Council of the City of London<sup>5</sup>, the London Fire and Emergency Planning Authority<sup>6</sup>, the Council of the Isles of Scilly<sup>7</sup>, a police authority<sup>8</sup> or a joint authority established by Part IV of the Local Government Act 1985<sup>9</sup>;
- 645 (2) the Commission for the New Towns<sup>10</sup> or a development corporation<sup>11</sup>;
- 646 (3) an urban development corporation<sup>12</sup>;
- 647 (4) a housing action trust<sup>13</sup>;
- 648 (5) the Broads Authority<sup>14</sup>;
- 649 (6) a National Park authority<sup>15</sup>;
- 650 (7) the Housing Corporation<sup>16</sup>;
- 651 (8) a housing trust<sup>17</sup> which is a charity<sup>18</sup>;
- 652 (9) a registered social landlord<sup>19</sup> or a fully mutual housing association<sup>20</sup> which is not a registered social landlord; or
- 653 (10) an authority established<sup>21</sup> to exercise waste disposal functions<sup>22</sup>.

Although exempt landlords are not required to hold service charge contributions in trust<sup>23</sup>, in practice many do so. With effect from 6 April 2006, where registered social landlords and other exempt landlords hold such contributions in trust, any income accumulating qualifies for relief from the special rates for income tax normally applicable to trust income and instead is chargeable at no more than the basic rate of tax<sup>24</sup>.

(2) ADMINISTRATION CHARGES IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS

355. Meanings of 'administration charge' and 'variable administration charge'.

For the statutory purposes<sup>1</sup>, 'administration charge' means an amount payable by a tenant<sup>2</sup> of a dwelling<sup>3</sup> as part of or in addition to the rent which is payable, directly or indirectly:

- 654 (1) for or in connection with the grant of approvals under his lease, or applications for such approvals;
- 655 (2) for or in connection with the provision of information or documents by or on behalf of the landlord<sup>4</sup> or a person who is party to his lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant;
- 656 (3) in respect of a failure by the tenant to make a payment by the due date to the landlord or a person who is party to his lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant; or
- 657 (4) in connection with a breach, or alleged breach, of a covenant or condition in his lease<sup>5</sup>.

An amount payable by the tenant of a dwelling the rent of which is registered under Part IV of the Rent Act 1977<sup>6</sup> is not, however, an administration charge, unless the amount registered is entered<sup>7</sup> as a variable amount<sup>8</sup>.

An order amending heads (1) to (4) above may be made by the appropriate national authority<sup>9</sup>.

'Variable administration charge' means an administration charge payable by a tenant which is neither:

- 658 (a) specified in his lease; nor
 659 (b) calculated in accordance with a formula specified in his lease<sup>10</sup>.

The statutory provisions regarding the reasonableness of administration charges<sup>11</sup> apply in relation to Crown land<sup>12</sup> as they apply in relation to other land<sup>13</sup>.

- 1 le for the purposes of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 158, Sch 11: see PARA 356 et seq post.
- 2 For these purposes, 'tenant' includes a statutory tenant; and 'statutory tenant' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 1 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 11 para 6(1)-(3).
- 3 For these purposes, 'dwelling' has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 2 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 11 para 6(3).
- 4 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a statutory tenancy, has the same meaning as in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 (see PARA 52 note 1 ante): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 11 para 6(3). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (as so which see PARA 374 post), Sch 11 has effect as if references to the landlord (or a party to a lease) included the RTM company: s 102(1), Sch 7 para 16.

- 8 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 11 para 1(2).
- 9 Ibid Sch 11 para 1(4). 'The appropriate national authority' means the Secretary of State, as respects England, and the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister, as respects Wales: s 179(1); and see PARA 27 notes 3-4 ante. An order under any provision of Pt 2 (ss 71-179) (as amended) (1) may include incidental, supplementary, consequential and transitional provision; (2) may make provision generally or only in relation to specified cases; and (3) may make different provision for different purposes: s 178(1). Any power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument subject, if made by the Secretary of State, to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 178(3), (5).

356. Notice in connection with demands for administration charges.

A tenant may withhold payment of an administration charge which has been demanded from him if the above requirement is not complied with in relation to the demand<sup>7</sup>. Where a tenant so withholds an administration charge, any provisions of the lease relating to non-payment or late payment of administration charges do not have effect in relation to the period for which he so withholds it<sup>8</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(2) ADMINISTRATION CHARGES IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS/357. Reasonableness of administration charges.

357. Reasonableness of administration charges.

A variable administration charge<sup>1</sup> is payable only to the extent that the amount of the charge is reasonable<sup>2</sup>. Any party to a lease<sup>3</sup> of a dwelling<sup>4</sup> may apply to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order varying the lease in such manner as is specified in the application on the grounds that:

660 (1) any administration charge specified in the lease is unreasonable; or 661 (2) any formula specified in the lease in accordance with which any administration charge is calculated is unreasonable<sup>5</sup>.

If the grounds on which the application was made are established to the satisfaction of the tribunal, it may make an order varying the lease in such manner as is specified in the order<sup>6</sup>. The variation so specified may be:

662 (a) the variation specified in the application; or 663 (b) such other variation as the tribunal thinks fit<sup>7</sup>.

The tribunal may, instead of making an order varying the lease in such manner as is specified in the order, make an order directing the parties to the lease to vary it in such manner as is so specified<sup>8</sup>.

The tribunal may by order direct that a memorandum of any variation of a lease effected by virtue of these provisions is to be indorsed on such documents as are specified in the order<sup>9</sup>.

Any such variation of a lease is binding not only on the parties to the lease for the time being but also on other persons, including any predecessors in title, whether or not they were parties to the proceedings in which the order was made<sup>10</sup>.

A fee is also payable for the hearing of the application: see the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2098, reg 5; the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Fees) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/683, reg 5. SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(2) ADMINISTRATION CHARGES IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS/358. Liability to pay administration charges; jurisdiction.

358. Liability to pay administration charges; jurisdiction.

An application may be made to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination whether an administration charge<sup>1</sup> is payable and, if it is, as to:

- 664 (1) the person by whom it is payable;
- 665 (2) the person to whom it is payable;
- 666 (3) the amount which is payable;

- 667 (4) the date at or by which it is payable; and
- 668 (5) the manner in which it is payable<sup>2</sup>;

and this applies whether or not any payment has been made<sup>3</sup>.

The jurisdiction conferred on a leasehold valuation tribunal in respect of any matter by virtue of the above provisions is in addition to any jurisdiction of a court in respect of the matter<sup>4</sup>; but no such application may be made in respect of a matter which:

- 669 (a) has been agreed or admitted by the tenant<sup>5</sup>;
- 670 (b) has been, or is to be, referred to arbitration pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>6</sup> to which the tenant is a party;
- 671 (c) has been the subject of determination by a court; or
- 672 (d) has been the subject of determination by an arbitral tribunal<sup>7</sup> pursuant to a post-dispute arbitration agreement<sup>8</sup>.

The tenant is not, however, to be taken to have agreed or admitted any matter by reason only of having made any payment<sup>9</sup>.

An agreement by the tenant of a dwelling<sup>10</sup>, other than a post-dispute arbitration agreement, is void in so far as it purports to provide for a determination in a particular manner, or on particular evidence, of any question which may be the subject matter of an application under these provisions<sup>11</sup>.

(3) INSURANCE IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS

359. In general.

In certain circumstances a tenant<sup>1</sup> has the right:

- 673 (1) to request a summary of insurance cover<sup>2</sup>;
- 674 (2) to request to inspect the insurance policy<sup>3</sup>;
- 675 (3) to notify insurers of possible claims<sup>4</sup>; and
- 676 (4) to challenge a landlord's choice of insurers<sup>5</sup>.

Those rights<sup>6</sup> do not apply to a tenant of a local authority<sup>7</sup>, a National Park authority<sup>8</sup> or a new town corporation<sup>9</sup> unless the tenancy is a long tenancy<sup>10</sup>. They do, however, apply in relation to Crown land<sup>11</sup> as in relation to other land; but no failure by the Crown to perform a duty imposed by or by virtue of any of those provisions makes the Crown criminally liable<sup>12</sup>.

It is a summary offence, punishable on conviction by a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, for a person to fail, without reasonable excuse, to perform a duty imposed on him by or by virtue of the statutory provisions conferring the rights described in heads (1) and (2) above<sup>13</sup>.

A tenant of a house under a long lease also has a statutory right to effect the insurance of the house with any authorised insurer, provided that certain conditions are satisfied<sup>14</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'tenant' includes a statutory tenant: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30A, Schedule para 1 (s 30A, Schedule added by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 43(1), (2), Sch 3). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), references to a tenant include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises and has to make payments under the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 103 (see PARA 395 post): s 102(1), Sch 7 para 5(1), (3)). Where the tenancy is a long tenancy, the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 Schedule paras 2-5, 7, 8

(as amended) (see PARA 360 et seq post) apply but Schedule para 6 (as added and amended) (see the text and note 13 infra) does not: Schedule para 9(1) (as so added).

Section 26(2), (3) (as amended) (meaning of 'long tenancy': see PARA 325 ante) applies for the purposes of Schedule para 9(1) (as so added and amended) as it applies for the purposes of s 26(1) (as amended) (see PARA 325 ante): Schedule para 9(2) (as so added).

360. Summary of insurance cover.

Where a service charge<sup>1</sup> is payable by the tenant<sup>2</sup> of a dwelling<sup>3</sup> which consists of or includes an amount payable directly or indirectly for insurance, the tenant may by notice in writing require the landlord<sup>4</sup> to supply him with a written summary of the insurance for the time being effected in relation to the dwelling<sup>5</sup>. If the tenant is represented by a recognised tenants' association<sup>6</sup> and he consents, the notice may be served by the secretary of the association instead of by the tenant and may then be for the supply of the summary to the secretary<sup>7</sup>.

A notice under these provisions is duly served on the landlord if it is served on:

- 677 (1) an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or similar document;
or
- 678 (2) the person who receives the rent on behalf of the landlord;

and a person on whom such a notice is so served must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord<sup>8</sup>.

The landlord must, within the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he receives the notice, comply with it by supplying to the tenant or the secretary of the recognised tenants' association, as the case may require, such a summary as is mentioned above<sup>9</sup>, which must include:

- 679 (a) the insured amount or amounts<sup>10</sup> under any relevant policy<sup>11</sup>;
- 680 (b) the name of the insurer under any such policy; and
- 681 (c) the risks in respect of which the dwelling or, as the case may be, the building containing it is insured under any such policy<sup>12</sup>.

The landlord is taken to have complied with the notice if, within the specified period<sup>13</sup>, he instead supplies to the tenant or the secretary, as the case may be, a copy of every relevant policy<sup>14</sup>.

In a case where two or more buildings are insured under any relevant policy, the summary or copy supplied<sup>15</sup> so far as relating to that policy need only be of such parts of the policy as relate to the dwelling and, if the dwelling is a flat, to the building containing it<sup>16</sup>.

It is an offence for a person to fail without reasonable excuse to perform a duty imposed on him by or by virtue of the above provisions<sup>17</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 359 note 1 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

4 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a tenant by whom a service charge is payable which includes an amount payable directly or indirectly for insurance, includes any person who has a right to enforce payment of that service charge: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30A, Schedule para 1 (s 30A, Schedule added by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 43(1), (2), Sch 3). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), references to the landlord are to that company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 5(1), (2). For the meaning of 'landlord' generally see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

5 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 Schedule para 2(1) (as added (see note 4 supra); Schedule para 2(1)-(4), (6) amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 157, Sch 10 para 8). As to the effect of a change of landlord or of assignment by the tenant see PARA 363 post.

6 For the meaning of 'recognised tenants' association' see PARA 327 ante.

7 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 Schedule para 2(2) (as added and amended: see notes 4-5 supra).

8 Ibid Schedule para 2(3) (as added and amended: see notes 4-5 supra). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq post), Schedule para 2(3) (as added and amended) applies as if head (1) in the text were omitted and the person referred to in head (2) in the text were a person who receives service charges on behalf of the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 5(1), (4).

9 Ie such a summary as is mentioned in the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 Schedule para 2(1) (as added and amended): see the text and notes 1-5 supra.

10 For these purposes, 'the insured amount or amounts', in relation to a relevant policy, means (1) in the case of a dwelling other than a flat, the amount for which the dwelling is insured under the policy; and (2) in the case of a flat, the amount for which the building containing it is insured under the policy and, if specified in the policy, the amount for which the flat is insured under it: ibid Schedule para 2(5) (as added: see note 4 supra). For the meaning of 'relevant policy' see note 11 infra.

11 For these purposes, 'relevant policy', in relation to a dwelling, means any policy of insurance under which the dwelling is insured, being, in the case of a flat, a policy covering the building containing it: ibid Schedule para 1 (as added: see note 4 supra).

12 Ibid Schedule para 2(4) (as added and amended: see notes 4-5 supra).

13 Ie the period mentioned in ibid Schedule para 2(4) (as added and amended).

14 Ibid Schedule para 2(6) (as added and amended: see notes 4-5 supra).

15 Ie under ibid Schedule para 2(4) or (6) (as added and amended): see the text and notes 9-14 supra.

16 Ibid Schedule para 2(7) (as added: see note 4 supra).

17 See ibid Schedule para 6 (as added and amended); and PARA 359 the text and note 13 ante.

361. Inspection of insurance policy etc.

Where a service charge<sup>1</sup> is payable by the tenant<sup>2</sup> of a dwelling<sup>3</sup> which consists of or includes an amount payable directly or indirectly for insurance, the tenant may by notice in writing require the landlord<sup>4</sup>:

- 682 (1) to afford him reasonable facilities for inspecting any relevant policy<sup>5</sup> or associated documents<sup>6</sup> and for taking copies of or extracts from them; or
- 683 (2) to take copies of or extracts from any such policy or documents and either send them to him or afford him reasonable facilities for collecting them, as he specifies<sup>7</sup>.

If the tenant is represented by a recognised tenants' association<sup>8</sup> and he consents, the notice may be served by the secretary of the association instead of by the tenant, and in that case any requirement imposed by it is to afford reasonable facilities, or to send copies or extracts, to the secretary<sup>9</sup>.

A notice under these provisions is duly served on the landlord if it is served on:

- 684 (a) an agent of the landlord named as such in the rent book or similar document;
or
- 685 (b) the person who receives the rent on behalf of the landlord;

and a person on whom such a notice is so served must forward it as soon as may be to the landlord<sup>10</sup>.

The landlord must comply with a requirement imposed by a notice under these provisions within the period of 21 days beginning with the day on which he receives the notice<sup>11</sup>. To the extent that such a notice requires the landlord to afford facilities for inspecting documents he must do so free of charge, but he may treat as part of his costs of management any costs incurred by him in doing so<sup>12</sup>. The landlord may make a reasonable charge for doing anything else in compliance with a requirement imposed by such a notice<sup>13</sup>.

It is an offence for a person to fail without reasonable excuse to perform a duty imposed on him by or by virtue of the above provisions<sup>14</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 ante.

2 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 359 note 1 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'dwelling' see PARA 52 note 2 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 360 note 4 ante.

5 For these purposes, 'relevant policy' includes a policy of insurance under which the dwelling was insured for the period of insurance immediately preceding that current when the notice is served (being, in the case of a flat, a policy covering the building containing it): Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30A (as added), Schedule para 3(7) (Schedule para 3 substituted by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 157, Sch 10 para 9). For the meaning of 'relevant policy' generally see PARA 360 note 11 ante.

6 For these purposes, 'associated documents' means accounts, receipts or other documents which provide evidence of payment of any premiums due under a relevant policy in respect of the period of insurance which is current when the notice is served or the period of insurance immediately preceding that period: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 Schedule para 3(7) (as substituted: see note 5 supra).

7 Ibid Schedule para 3(1) (as substituted: see note 5 supra). As to the effect of a change of landlord or of assignment by the tenant see PARA 363 post.

- 8 For the meaning of 'recognised tenants' association' see PARA 327 ante.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(3) INSURANCE IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS/362. Insurance effected by superior landlord.

362. Insurance effected by superior landlord.

If a notice is served requiring a summary of insurance cover<sup>1</sup> in a case where a superior landlord<sup>2</sup> has effected, in whole or in part, the insurance of the dwelling<sup>3</sup> in question and the landlord on whom the notice is served is not in possession of the relevant information:

- 686 (1) he must in turn by notice in writing require the person who is his landlord to give him the relevant information (and so on, if that person is not himself the superior landlord);
- 687 (2) the superior landlord must comply with the notice within a reasonable time; and
- 688 (3) the immediate landlord must then comply with the tenant's<sup>4</sup> or secretary's notice in the specified manner<sup>5</sup> within the time allowed<sup>6</sup> or such further time, if any, as is reasonable in the circumstances<sup>7</sup>.

If, in a case where a superior landlord has effected, in whole or in part, the insurance of the dwelling in question, a notice requiring facilities for inspection<sup>8</sup> imposes a requirement relating to any policy of insurance effected by the superior landlord:

- 689 (a) the landlord on whom the notice is served must forthwith inform the tenant or secretary of that fact and of the name and address of the superior landlord; and
- 690 (b) the provisions relating to inspection of insurance policies<sup>9</sup> then apply to the superior landlord in relation to that policy as they apply to the immediate landlord<sup>10</sup>.

It is an offence for a person to fail without reasonable excuse to perform a duty imposed on him by or by virtue of the above provisions<sup>11</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(3) INSURANCE IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS/363. Effect of change of landlord or of assignment by tenant.

363. Effect of change of landlord or of assignment by tenant.

Where, at a time when a duty imposed on the landlord<sup>1</sup> or a superior landlord by virtue of any of the statutory provisions relating to the tenant's rights to a summary of insurance cover, the inspection of the insurance policy, or the position where the insurance is effected by a superior landlord<sup>2</sup> remains to be discharged by him, he disposes of the whole or part of his interest as landlord or superior landlord, the following provisions apply<sup>3</sup>. If the landlord or superior landlord is, despite the disposal, still in a position to discharge the duty to any extent, he remains responsible for discharging it to that extent<sup>4</sup>; and if the other person is in a position to discharge the duty to any extent, he is responsible for discharging it to that extent<sup>5</sup>. It is an offence for a person to fail without reasonable excuse to perform a duty imposed on him by or by virtue of the above provisions<sup>6</sup>.

The assignment of a tenancy does not affect any duty imposed by virtue of the above provisions or of any of the statutory provisions referred to therein<sup>7</sup>, but a person is not required to comply with more than a reasonable number of requirements imposed by any one person<sup>8</sup>.

The following provisions apply to any dwelling<sup>1</sup> in respect of which the tenant<sup>2</sup> pays to the landlord<sup>3</sup> a service charge<sup>4</sup> consisting of or including an amount payable directly or indirectly for insurance<sup>5</sup>.

Where:

- 691 (1) it appears to the tenant of any such dwelling that damage has been caused to the dwelling or, if the dwelling is a flat, to the dwelling or to any other part of the building containing it, in respect of which a claim could be made under the terms of a policy of insurance; and
- 692 (2) it is a term of that policy that the person insured under the policy should give notice of any claim under it to the insurer within a specified period, the tenant may, within that specified period, serve on the insurer a notice in writing stating that it appears to him that damage has been caused as mentioned in head (1) above and describing briefly the nature of the damage<sup>6</sup>.

Where:

- 693 (a) any such notice is served on an insurer by a tenant in relation to any such damage; and
- 694 (b) the specified period referred to in head (2) above would expire earlier than the period of six months beginning with the date on which the notice is served, the policy in question has effect as regards any claim subsequently made in respect of that damage by the person insured under the policy as if for the specified period there were substituted that period of six months<sup>7</sup>.

Where the tenancy of such a dwelling is held by joint tenants, a single notice may be given by any one or more of those tenants<sup>8</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(3) INSURANCE IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS/365. Right to challenge landlord's choice of insurers.

365. Right to challenge landlord's choice of insurers.

The following provisions apply where a tenancy of a dwelling<sup>1</sup> requires the tenant<sup>2</sup> to insure the dwelling with an insurer nominated or approved by the landlord<sup>3</sup>.

The tenant or landlord may apply to a county court or leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination whether:

- 695 (1) the insurance which is available from the nominated or approved insurer for insuring the tenant's dwelling is unsatisfactory in any respect; or
- 696 (2) the premiums payable in respect of any such insurance are excessive<sup>4</sup>.

No such application may, however, be made in respect of a matter which:

- 697 (a) has been agreed or admitted by the tenant;
- 698 (b) under an arbitration agreement<sup>5</sup> to which the tenant is a party is to be referred to arbitration; or
- 699 (c) has been the subject of determination by a court or arbitral tribunal<sup>6</sup>.

On such an application the court or tribunal may make:

- 700 (i) an order requiring the landlord to nominate or approve such other insurer as is specified in the order; or
- 701 (ii) an order requiring him to nominate or approve another insurer who satisfies such requirements in relation to the insurance of the dwelling as are specified in the order<sup>7</sup>.

An agreement by the tenant of a dwelling, other than an arbitration agreement, is void in so far as it purports to provide for a determination in a particular manner, or on particular evidence, of any question which may be the subject of such an application<sup>8</sup>.

SERVICE AND ADMINISTRATION CHARGES; INSURANCE/(3) INSURANCE IN RELATION TO DWELLINGS/366. Insurance of house otherwise than with landlord's insurer.

366. Insurance of house otherwise than with landlord's insurer.

The following provisions apply where a long lease<sup>1</sup> of a house<sup>2</sup> requires the tenant<sup>3</sup> to insure the house with an insurer nominated or approved by the landlord<sup>4</sup> ('the landlord's insurer')<sup>5</sup>. The tenant is not required to effect the insurance with the landlord's insurer if:

- 702 (1) the house is insured under a policy of insurance issued by an authorised insurer<sup>6</sup>;
- 703 (2) the policy covers the interests of both the landlord and the tenant;
- 704 (3) the policy covers all the risks which the lease requires be covered by insurance provided by the landlord's insurer;
- 705 (4) the amount of the cover is not less than that which the lease requires to be provided by such insurance; and
- 706 (5) the tenant satisfies the requirements of heads (a) and (b) below<sup>7</sup>.

To satisfy the requirements referred to in head (5) above, the tenant:

- 707 (a) must have given a notice of cover<sup>8</sup> to the landlord before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the relevant date<sup>9</sup>; and
- 708 (b) if, after that date, he has been requested to do so by a new landlord, must have given a notice of cover to him within the period of 14 days beginning with the day on which the request was given<sup>10</sup>.

These provisions apply in relation to Crown land<sup>11</sup> as they apply in relation to other land<sup>12</sup>.

1 For these purposes, 'long lease' has the meaning given by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 ss 76, 77 (see PARA 371 post): s 164(10).

2 For these purposes, 'house' has the same meaning as for the purposes of the Leasehold Reform Act 1967 Pt I (ss 1-37) (as amended) (see PARA 1390 post): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 164(10).

3 For these purposes, 'tenant' has the same meaning as in ibid Pt 2 Ch 1 (ss 71-113) (as amended) (see PARA 369 note 8 post): s 164(10).

4 For these purposes, 'landlord' has the same meaning as in ibid Pt 2 Ch 1 (ss 71-113) (as amended) (see PARA 369 note 8 post): s 164(10).

5 Ibid s 164(1).

6 'Authorised insurer', in relation to a policy of insurance, means a person who may carry on in the United Kingdom the business of effecting or carrying out contracts of insurance of the sort provided under the policy without contravening the prohibition imposed by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 19 (see INSURANCE vol 25 (2003 Reissue) PARA 22): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 164(10).

7 Ibid s 164(2).

8 A notice of cover is a notice specifying (1) the name of the insurer; (2) the risks covered by the policy; (3) the amount and period of the cover; and (4) such further information as may be prescribed: ibid s 164(5). A notice of cover must be in the prescribed form and may be sent by post: s 164(6). If a notice of cover is sent by post, it may be addressed to the landlord at the address specified in s 164(8): s 164(7). That address is (a) the address last furnished to the tenant as the landlord's address for service in accordance with the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 48 (as amended) (notification of address for service of notices on landlord: see PARA 53 ante); or (b) if no such address has been so furnished, the address last furnished to the tenant as the landlord's address in accordance with s 47 (as amended) (landlord's name and address to be contained in demands for rent: see PARA 257 ante); but the tenant may not give a notice of cover to the landlord at the address so specified if he has been notified by the landlord of a different address in England and Wales at which he wishes to be given any such notice: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 164(8), (9). 'Prescribed' means prescribed by regulations made by the appropriate national authority: s 164(10). For the meaning of 'the appropriate national authority' see PARA 355 note 9 ante.

A notice of cover must specify, in addition to the particulars referred to in s 164(5)(a)-(c) (see heads (1)-(3) supra), the following particulars (see the Leasehold Houses (Notice of Insurance Cover) (England) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3097, reg 3; the Leasehold Houses (Notice of Insurance Cover) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1354, reg 2), ie:

- 11 (i) the address of the house insured under the policy;
- 12 (ii) the registered office of the authorised insurer or, if the authorised insurer has no registered office, its head office;
- 13 (iii) the number of the policy;
- 14 (iv) the frequency with which premiums are payable under the policy;
- 15 (v) the amount of any excess payable by the tenant under the policy;
- 16 (vi) where an excess is payable, whether it is payable in respect of every claim made under the policy or only in particular circumstances and, if the latter, a brief description of those circumstances;
- 17 (vii) whether the policy has been renewed and, if so, the date on which it was last renewed;

- 18 (viii) if the policy has not been renewed, the date on which it took effect;
- 19 (ix) that the tenant is satisfied that the policy covers his or her interests; and
- 20 (x) that the tenant has no reason to believe that the policy does not cover the interests of the landlord.

For the prescribed form of notice of cover see the Leasehold Houses (Notice of Insurance Cover) (England) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/3097, reg 4, Schedule (amended by SI 2005/177); the Leasehold Houses (Notice of Insurance Cover) (Wales) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1354, reg 3, Schedule.

9 For these purposes: (1) if the policy has not been renewed the relevant date is the day on which it took effect and if it has been renewed it is the day from which it was last renewed; and (2) a person is a new landlord on any day if he acquired the interest of the previous landlord under the lease on a disposal made by him during the period of one month ending with that day: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 164(4).

UPDATE

367 The right to manage; in general

TEXT AND NOTES--The Land Registration Rules 2003, SI 2003/1417, r 79A applies where a RTM company applies for an entry to be made in an individual register of a registered estate to the effect that the RTM company has acquired the right to manage: r 79A(1) (r 79A added by SI 2008/1919). An application for such an entry must be accompanied by evidence to satisfy the registrar that (1) the applicant is a RTM company; (2) the right to manage is in relation to premises comprised in the registered estate; (3) the registered proprietor of the registered estate is the landlord under a lease of the whole or part of the premises; and (4) the right to manage the premises has been acquired, and remains exercisable, by the RTM company: SI 2003/1417 r 79A(2) (r 79A as so added). If the registrar is so satisfied, he must make an appropriate entry in the proprietorship register of the registered estate: r 79A(3) (r 79A as so added). In r 79A, 'right to manage' and 'RTM company' have the same meanings as in the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 ss 71, 73: SI 2003/1417 r 79A(4) (r 79A as so added).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(i) Introduction/368. Premises to which the right to manage applies.

368. Premises to which the right to manage applies.

The right to manage<sup>1</sup> applies to premises if:

- 709 (1) they consist of a self-contained building or part of a building, with or without appurtenant property<sup>2</sup>;
- 710 (2) they contain two or more flats<sup>3</sup> held by qualifying tenants<sup>4</sup>; and
- 711 (3) the total number of flats held by such tenants is not less than two-thirds of the total number of flats contained in the premises<sup>5</sup>.

A building is a self-contained building if it is structurally detached<sup>6</sup>; and a part of a building is a self-contained part of the building if:

- 712 (a) it constitutes a vertical division of the building;
- 713 (b) the structure of the building is such that it could be redeveloped independently of the rest of the building; and
- 714 (c) the condition set out below applies in relation to it<sup>7</sup>.

That condition applies in relation to a part of a building if the relevant services<sup>8</sup> provided for occupiers of it:

- 715 (i) are provided independently of the relevant services provided for occupiers of the rest of the building; or
- 716 (ii) could be so provided without involving the carrying out of works likely to result in a significant interruption in the provision of any relevant services for occupiers of the rest of the building<sup>9</sup>.

Certain premises are, however, excluded from the right to manage<sup>10</sup>.

The statutory provisions conferring the right to manage<sup>11</sup> apply in relation to premises in which there is a Crown interest<sup>12</sup>; and there is a Crown interest in premises if there is in the premises an interest or estate:

- 717 (A) which is comprised in the Crown Estate;
- 718 (B) which belongs to Her Majesty in right of the Duchy of Lancaster;
- 719 (C) which belongs to the Duchy of Cornwall; or
- 720 (D) which belongs to a government department or is held on behalf of Her Majesty for the purposes of a government department<sup>13</sup>.

1     le the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Pt 2 Ch 1 (ss 71-113) (as amended): see PARA 367 ante, PARA 369 et seq post.

2     For these purposes, 'appurtenant property', in relation to a building or part of a building or a flat, means any garage, outhouse, garden, yard or appurtenances belonging to, or usually enjoyed with, the building or part or flat: ibid s 112(1).

3     For these purposes, 'flat' means a separate set of premises (whether or not on the same floor) (1) which forms part of a building; (2) which is constructed or adapted for use for the purposes of a dwelling; and (3) either the whole or a material part of which lies above or below some other part of the building; and 'dwelling' means a building or part of a building occupied or intended to be occupied as a separate dwelling: ibid s 112(1).

368 Premises to which the right to manage applies

NOTE 7--The requirement for a vertical division of the building is unqualified; it follows that a part of a building does not constitute a self-contained part even where only a comparatively small area falls outside the vertical line, unless the deviation is de minimis: Holding and Management (Solitare) Ltd v Finland Street 1-16 RTM Co Ltd [2008] EGCS 152.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(i) Introduction/369. Premises excluded from the right to manage.

369. Premises excluded from the right to manage.

The right to manage<sup>1</sup> does not apply to premises otherwise meeting the statutory criteria<sup>2</sup>:

- 721 (1) if the internal floor area:
 53
 65. (a) of any non-residential part<sup>3</sup>; or
 66. (b) where there is more than one such part, of those parts, taken together,
 54
 722 exceeds 25 per cent of the internal floor area of the premises<sup>4</sup>, taken as a whole<sup>5</sup>;
 723 (2) where different persons own the freehold of different parts of the premises, if any of those parts is a self-contained part of a building<sup>6</sup>;
 724 (3) if the premises have a resident landlord<sup>7</sup> and do not contain more than four units<sup>8</sup>;
 725 (4) if a local housing authority<sup>9</sup> is the immediate landlord of any of the qualifying tenants<sup>10</sup> of flats contained in the premises<sup>11</sup>;
 726 (5) at any time if:
 55
 67. (a) the right to manage the premises is at that time exercisable by an RTM company<sup>12</sup>; or
 68. (b) that right has been so exercisable but has ceased to be so exercisable<sup>13</sup> less than four years before that time<sup>14</sup>;
 56
 727 but a leasehold valuation tribunal may, on an application made by an RTM company, determine that head (b) above is not to apply in any case if it considers that it would be unreasonable for it to apply in the circumstances of the case<sup>15</sup>.

1 The Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Pt 2 Ch 1 (ss 71-113) (as amended): see PARAS 367-368 ante, PARA 370 et seq post.

2 The premises falling within ibid s 72(1): see PARA 368 ante.

3 A part of premises is a non-residential part if it is neither (1) occupied, or intended to be occupied, for residential purposes; nor (2) comprised in any common parts of the premises; and where in the case of any such premises any part of the premises (such as, eg, a garage, parking space or storage area) is used, or intended for use, in conjunction with a particular dwelling contained in the premises (and accordingly is not comprised in any common parts of the premises), it is to be taken to be occupied, or intended to be occupied, for residential purposes: ibid s 72(6), Sch 6 para 1(2), (3).

4 For the purpose of determining the internal floor area of a building or of any part of a building, the floor or floors of the building or part are to be taken to extend (without interruption) throughout the whole of the interior of the building or part, except that the area of any common parts of the building or part is to be disregarded: ibid Sch 6 para 1(4).

6 Ibid Sch 6 para 2.

7 Premises have a resident landlord if (1) the premises are not, and do not form part of, a purpose-built block of flats (ie, a building which, as constructed, contained two or more flats); (2) a relevant freeholder, or an adult member of a relevant freeholder's family, occupies a qualifying flat as his only or principal home; and ibid Sch 6 para 3(4) or (5) is satisfied: Sch 6 para 3(2). A person is a relevant freeholder, in relation to any premises, if he owns the freehold of the whole or any part of the premises: Sch 6 para 3(3).

Schedule 6 para 3(4) is satisfied if the relevant freeholder, or the adult member of his family, has throughout the last 12 months occupied the flat as his only or principal home; and Sch 6 para 3(5) is satisfied if (a) immediately before the date when the relevant freeholder acquired his interest in the premises, the premises were premises with a resident landlord; and (b) he, or an adult member of his family, entered into occupation of the flat during the period of 28 days beginning with that date and has occupied the flat as his only or principal home ever since: Sch 6 para 3(4), (5). 'Qualifying flat', in relation to any premises and a relevant freeholder or an adult member of his family, means a flat or other unit used as a dwelling which is contained in the premises, and the freehold of the whole of which is owned by the relevant freeholder: Sch 6 para 3(6). Where the interest of a relevant freeholder in any premises is held on trust, the references in Sch 6 para 3(2), (4) and (5)(b) to a relevant freeholder are to a person having an interest under the trust (whether or not also a trustee): Sch 6 para 3(7).

A person is an adult member of another's family for these purposes if he is (i) the other's spouse or civil partner; (ii) a son, daughter, son-in-law or daughter-in-law of the other, or of the other's spouse or civil partner, who has attained the age of 18; or (iii) the father or mother of the other or of the other's spouse or civil partner; and 'son' and 'daughter' include stepson and stepdaughter ('son-in-law' and 'daughter-in-law' being construed accordingly): Sch 6 para 3(8) (amended by the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 81, Sch 8 para 66). For the meaning of 'flat' see PARA 368 note 3 ante; and for the meanings of 'unit' and 'landlord' see note 8 infra.

8 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 6 para 3(1). 'Unit' means (1) a flat; (2) any other separate set of premises which is constructed or adapted for use for the purposes of a dwelling; or (3) a separate set of premises let, or intended for letting, on a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (business tenancies: see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 112(1). For the purposes of the right to manage, 'lease' and 'tenancy' have the same meaning and both expressions include (where the context permits) (a) a sublease or subtenancy; and (b) an agreement for a lease or tenancy (or for a sublease or subtenancy), but do not include a tenancy at will or at sufferance: s 112(2). The expressions 'landlord' and 'tenant', and references to letting, to the grant of a lease or to covenants or the terms of a lease, are to be construed accordingly: s 112(3). Where two or more persons jointly constitute either the landlord or the tenant or qualifying tenant in relation to a lease of a flat, any reference in Pt 2 Ch 1 (as amended) to the landlord or to the tenant or qualifying tenant is (unless the context otherwise requires) a reference to both or all of the persons who jointly constitute the landlord or the tenant or qualifying tenant, as the case may require: s 112(5).

9 'Local housing authority' has the meaning given by the Housing Act 1985 s 1 (as amended) (see PARA 1311 note 4 post): Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 6 para 4(2).

10 For the meaning of 'qualifying tenant' see PARA 370 post.

11 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 6 para 4(1).

12 For the meaning of 'RTM company' see PARA 374 post.

13 Ie unless the right to manage the premises ceased to be exercisable by virtue of the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 73(5) (see PARA 374 post): Sch 6 para 5(2).

14 Ibid Sch 6 para 5(1).

15 Ibid Sch 6 para 5(3). The application must be accompanied by: (1) the name and address for service of the RTM company; (2) the name and address of the freeholder, any intermediate landlord and any manager; (3) a copy of the memorandum and articles of association of the RTM company; and (4) the date and circumstances in which the right to exercise the right to manage has ceased within the past four years: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(5), Sch 1 para 4(f), Sch 2 para 4(1)-(3), (8); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(5), Sch 1 para 4(f), Sch 2 para 4(1)-(3), (8). As to the other particulars to be included, and the procedure on such an application, see PARA 59 et seq ante.

370. Qualifying tenants.

The following provisions specify whether there is a qualifying tenant<sup>1</sup> of a flat<sup>2</sup> for the purposes of the right to manage<sup>3</sup> and, if so, who it is<sup>4</sup>. A person is<sup>5</sup> the qualifying tenant of a flat if he is tenant of the flat under a long lease<sup>6</sup>; but this does not apply where the lease is a business tenancy to which Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954<sup>7</sup> applies<sup>8</sup>. Nor does it apply where:

- 728 (1) the lease was granted by sub-demise out of a superior lease other than a long lease;
 729 (2) the grant was made in breach of the terms of the superior lease; and 730 (3) there has been no waiver of the breach by the superior landlord<sup>9</sup>.

No flat has more than one qualifying tenant at any one time<sup>10</sup>; and where a flat is being let:

- 731 (a) under two or more long leases, a tenant under any of those leases which is superior to that held by another is not the qualifying tenant of the flat<sup>11</sup>;
 732 (b) to joint tenants under a long lease, the joint tenants are, subject to head (a) above, to be regarded as jointly being the qualifying tenant of the flat<sup>12</sup>.

371. Long leases.

The following provisions specify what is a long lease for the purposes of the right to manage<sup>1</sup>.

A lease<sup>2</sup> is<sup>3</sup> a long lease if:

- 733 (1) it is granted for a term of years certain exceeding 21 years, whether or not it is, or may become, terminable before the end of that term by notice given by or to the tenant<sup>4</sup>, by re-entry or forfeiture or otherwise<sup>5</sup>;
 734 (2) it is for a term fixed by law under a grant with a covenant or obligation for perpetual renewal, but is not a lease by sub-demise from one which is not a long lease<sup>6</sup>;

- 735 (3) it takes effect<sup>7</sup> as a lease for 90 years terminable by notice after a death or marriage or the formation of a civil partnership<sup>8</sup>;
- 736 (4) it was granted in pursuance of the right to buy<sup>9</sup> or in pursuance of the right<sup>10</sup> to acquire on rent to mortgage terms<sup>11</sup>;
- 737 (5) it is a shared ownership lease<sup>12</sup> where the tenant's total share is 100 per cent<sup>13</sup>; or
- 738 (6) it was granted in pursuance of the right to acquire<sup>14</sup> conferred by the Housing Act 1996<sup>15</sup>.

A lease terminable by notice after a death, a marriage or the formation of a civil partnership is not, however, a long lease if:

- 739 (a) the notice is capable of being given at any time after the death or marriage of, or the formation of a civil partnership by, the tenant;
- 740 (b) the length of the notice is not more than three months; and
- 741 (c) the terms of the lease preclude both its assignment otherwise than by way of exchange<sup>16</sup> and the subletting of the whole of the demised premises<sup>17</sup>.

Where the tenant of any property under a long lease, on the coming to an end of the lease, becomes or has become tenant of the property or part of it under any subsequent tenancy, whether by express grant or by implication of law, that tenancy is a long lease irrespective of its terms<sup>18</sup>.

A lease:

- 742 (i) granted for a term of years certain not exceeding 21 years, but with a covenant or obligation for renewal without payment of a premium, but not for perpetual renewal; and
- 743 (ii) renewed on one or more occasions so as to bring to more than 21 years the total of the terms granted, including any interval between the end of a lease and the grant of a renewal, is to be treated as if the term originally granted had been one exceeding 21 years<sup>19</sup>.

Where a long lease is or was continued for any period under the specified statutory provisions<sup>20</sup>, it remains a long lease during that period<sup>21</sup>.

Where in the case of a flat<sup>22</sup> there are at any time two or more separate leases, with the same landlord<sup>23</sup> and the same tenant, and:

- 744 (A) the property comprised in one of those leases consists of either the flat or a part of it, in either case with or without appurtenant property<sup>24</sup>; and
- 745 (B) the property comprised in every other lease consists of either a part of the flat, with or without appurtenant property, or appurtenant property only, there is taken to be a single long lease of the property comprised in such of those leases as are long leases<sup>25</sup>.

11 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 76(2)(d).

12 Ie whether granted in pursuance of the Housing Act 1985 Pt V (as amended) or otherwise. There is now no statutory right to be granted a shared ownership lease under Pt V (as amended): see PARA 1795 ante. For these purposes, 'shared ownership lease' means a lease (1) granted on payment of a premium calculated by reference to a percentage of the value of the demised premises or the cost of providing them; or (2) under which the tenant (or his personal representatives) will or may be entitled to a sum calculated by reference, directly or indirectly, to the value of those premises: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 76(3).

13 Ibid s 76(2)(e). 'Total share', in relation to the interest of a tenant under a shared ownership lease, means his initial share plus any additional share or shares in the demised premises which he has acquired: s 76(4).

PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(i) Introduction/372. Powers of trustees in relation to right to manage.

372. Powers of trustees in relation to right to manage.

Where trustees are the qualifying tenant<sup>1</sup> of a flat<sup>2</sup> contained in any premises, their powers under the instrument regulating the trusts include power to be a member of an RTM company<sup>3</sup> for the purpose of the acquisition and exercise of the right to manage the premises<sup>4</sup>; but this does not apply where the instrument regulating the trusts contains an explicit direction to the contrary<sup>5</sup>.

The power so conferred is exercisable with the same consent or on the same direction, if any, as may be required for the exercise of the trustees' powers, or ordinary powers, of investment<sup>6</sup>.

The purposes authorised by the Settled Land Act 1925 for the application of capital money<sup>7</sup> and as purposes for which moneys may be raised by mortgage<sup>8</sup> include the payment of any expenses incurred by a tenant for life<sup>9</sup> or statutory owner<sup>10</sup> as a member of an RTM company<sup>11</sup>.

373. Notices.

Any notice under the provisions conferring the right to manage<sup>1</sup> must be in writing and may be sent by post<sup>2</sup>.

A company which is an RTM company<sup>3</sup> in relation to premises may give a notice under those provisions:

- 746 (1) to a person who is landlord<sup>4</sup> under a lease<sup>5</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises at the address specified<sup>6</sup> for these purposes<sup>7</sup>, unless it has been notified by him of a different address in England and Wales at which he wishes to be given any such notice<sup>8</sup>;
- 747 (2) to a person who is the qualifying tenant<sup>9</sup> of a flat<sup>10</sup> contained in the premises at the flat unless it has been notified by the qualifying tenant of a different address in England and Wales at which he wishes to be given any such notice<sup>11</sup>.

374 Companies which are RTM companies

TEXT AND NOTE 1--Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 73(2) amended: SI 2009/1941.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(ii) RTM Companies/375. Membership; prohibition on contracting out of membership rights.

375. Membership; prohibition on contracting out of membership rights.

The persons who are entitled to be members of a company which is an RTM company<sup>1</sup> in relation to premises are:

- 752 (1) qualifying tenants<sup>2</sup> of flats<sup>3</sup> contained in the premises; and
- 753 (2) from the date on which it acquires the right to manage<sup>4</sup> (referred to as the 'acquisition date'), landlords<sup>5</sup> under leases<sup>6</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises<sup>7</sup>.

Any agreement relating to a lease, whether contained in the instrument creating the lease or not and whether made before the creation of the lease or not, is void in so far as it:

- 754 (a) purports to exclude or modify the right of any person to be, or do any thing as, a member of an RTM company;
- 755 (b) provides for the termination or surrender of the lease if the tenant becomes, or does any thing as, a member of an RTM company or if an RTM company does any thing; or
- 756 (c) provides for the imposition of any penalty or disability if the tenant becomes, or does any thing as, a member of an RTM company or if an RTM company does any thing<sup>8</sup>.

376. Regulations; memorandum and articles.

The appropriate national authority<sup>1</sup> must make regulations<sup>2</sup> about the content and form of the memorandum of association and articles of association of RTM companies<sup>3</sup>; and an RTM company may adopt provisions of the regulations for its memorandum or articles<sup>4</sup>. The regulations may include provision which is to have effect for an RTM company whether or not it is adopted by the company<sup>5</sup>.

A provision of the memorandum or articles of an RTM company has no effect to the extent that it is inconsistent with the regulations<sup>6</sup>; and the regulations have effect in relation to a memorandum or articles:

- 757 (1) irrespective of the date of the memorandum or articles; but
- 758 (2) subject to any transitional provisions of the regulations<sup>7</sup>.

Certain provisions of the Companies Act 1985 relating to the memorandum and articles of a company<sup>8</sup> do not apply to an RTM company<sup>9</sup>.

The memorandum of association of an RTM company, and its articles, must take the form, and include the provisions, prescribed in the relevant regulations<sup>10</sup>; and those prescribed provisions have effect for an RTM company whether or not they are adopted by the company<sup>11</sup>.

- 1 For the meaning of 'the appropriate national authority' see PARA 355 note 9 ante.

NOTE 10--SI 2004/675 Sch 1 Pt 2 further amended, Sch 2 Pt 2 amended: SI 2007/2194.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/377. Notice inviting participation.

(iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage

377. Notice inviting participation.

Before making a claim to acquire the right to manage any premises, an RTM company<sup>1</sup> must give notice<sup>2</sup> to each person who at the time when the notice is given:

- 759 (1) is the qualifying tenant<sup>3</sup> of a flat<sup>4</sup> contained in the premises; but
- 760 (2) neither is nor has agreed to become a member of the RTM company<sup>5</sup>.

A notice so given (a 'notice of invitation to participate') must:

- 761 (a) state that the RTM company intends to acquire the right to manage the premises;
- 762 (b) state the names of the members of the RTM company;
- 763 (c) invite the recipients of the notice to become members of the company; and

- 764 (d) contain such other particulars, if any, as may be required to be contained in notices of invitation to participate by regulations<sup>6</sup> made by the appropriate national authority<sup>7</sup>.

A notice of invitation to participate must also comply with such requirements, if any, about the form of notices of invitation to participate as may be prescribed by regulations so made<sup>8</sup>.

A notice of invitation to participate must either:

- 765 (i) be accompanied by a copy of the memorandum of association and articles of association of the RTM company<sup>9</sup>; or 766 (ii) include a statement about inspection and copying of that company's memorandum of association and articles of association<sup>10</sup>; and that statement must:
- 57
69. (A) specify a place, in England or Wales, at which the memorandum of association and articles of association may be inspected;
70. (B) specify as the times at which they may be inspected periods of at least two hours on each of at least three days, including a Saturday or Sunday or both, within the seven days beginning with the day following that on which the notice is given;
71. (C) specify a place, in England or Wales, at which, at any time within those seven days, a copy of the memorandum of association and articles of association may be ordered; and
72. (D) specify a fee for the provision of an ordered copy, not exceeding the reasonable cost of providing it<sup>11</sup>.

Where a notice given to a person includes such a statement, the notice is to be treated as not having been given to him if he is not allowed to undertake an inspection, or is not provided with a copy, in accordance with the statement<sup>12</sup>.

A notice of invitation to participate is not invalidated by any inaccuracy in any of the particulars required by or by virtue of the above provisions<sup>13</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'RTM company' see PARA 374 ante.

2 As to the giving of notices see PARA 373 ante.

3 For the meaning of 'qualifying tenant' see PARA 370 ante.

4 For the meaning of 'flat' see PARA 368 note 3 ante.

5 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 78(1).

6 As to the making of regulations see ibid s 178; and PARA 59 note 2 ante.

7 Ibid s 78(2). A notice of invitation to participate must contain (in addition to the statements and invitation referred to in heads (a)-(c) in the text), the following particulars (see the Right to Manage (Prescribed Particulars and Forms) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1988, reg 3(1), (2); the Right to Manage (Prescribed Particulars and Forms) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/678, reg 3(1), (2)), ie:

21 (1) the RTM company's registered number, the address of its registered office and the names of its directors and secretary;

22 (2) the names of the landlord and any third party;

23 (3) a statement that, subject to the exclusions mentioned in head (5) infra, if the right to manage is acquired by the RTM company, the company will be responsible for the discharge of the landlord's duties under the lease and the exercise of his powers under the lease, with respect to services, repairs, maintenance, improvements, insurance and management;

- 24 (4) a statement that, subject to the exclusion relating to re-entry or forfeiture mentioned in head (5) infra, if the right to manage is acquired by the RTM company, the company may enforce untransferred tenant covenants;
- 25 (5) a statement that, if the right to manage is acquired by the RTM company, the company will not be responsible for the discharge of the landlord's duties or the exercise of his powers under the lease with respect to a matter concerning only a part of the premises consisting of a flat or other unit not subject to a lease held by a qualifying tenant, or relating to re-entry or forfeiture;
- 26 (6) a statement that, if the right to manage is acquired by the RTM company, the company will have functions under the statutory provisions referred to in the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102, Sch 7;
- 27 (7) a statement that the RTM company intends or, as the case may be, does not intend, to appoint a managing agent within the meaning of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30B(8) (as added) (see PARA 398 note 4 post) and if it does so intend, a statement of the name and address of the proposed managing agent (if known) and, if it be the case, that the person is the landlord's managing agent; or if it does not so intend, the qualifications or experience (if any) of the existing members of the RTM company in relation to the management of residential property;
- 28 (8) a statement that, where the company gives a claim notice, a person who is or has been a member of the company may be liable for costs incurred by the landlord and others in consequence of the notice;
- 29 (9) a statement that, if the recipient of the notice (of invitation to participate) does not fully understand its purpose or implications, he is advised to seek professional help; and
- 30 (10) the information provided in the notes to the prescribed form set out in Sch 1 to the relevant regulations.

8 Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 78(3). For the prescribed form of notice see Right to Manage (Prescribed Particulars and Forms) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1988, reg 8(1), Sch 1; the Right to Manage (Prescribed Particulars and Forms) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/678, reg 8(1), Sch 1.

377 Notice inviting participation

TEXT AND NOTES 9-11--Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 78(4), (5) amended: SI 2009/1941.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/378. Notice of claim to acquire right.

378. Notice of claim to acquire right.

A claim to acquire the right to manage<sup>1</sup> any premises is made by giving notice of the claim (a 'claim notice'); and the 'relevant date', in relation to any claim to acquire the right to manage, means the date on which notice of the claim is given<sup>2</sup>. The claim notice may not be given unless each person required to be given a notice of invitation to participate<sup>3</sup> has been given such a notice at least 14 days before<sup>4</sup>.

The claim notice must be given by an RTM company<sup>5</sup> which complies with either of the following conditions<sup>6</sup>:

- 767 (1) if on the relevant date there are only two qualifying tenants<sup>7</sup> of flats<sup>8</sup> contained in the premises, both must be members of the RTM company<sup>9</sup>;
- 768 (2) in any other case, the membership of the RTM company must on the relevant date include a number of qualifying tenants of flats contained in the premises which is not less than one-half of the total number of flats so contained<sup>10</sup>.

The claim notice must be given to each person who on the relevant date is:

- 769 (a) landlord<sup>11</sup> under a lease<sup>12</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises;
- 770 (b) party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant; or
- 771 (c) a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>13</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises<sup>14</sup>; but this does not require the claim notice to be given to a person who cannot be found or whose identity cannot be ascertained<sup>15</sup>.

A copy of the claim notice must be given to each person who on the relevant date is the qualifying tenant of a flat contained in the premises<sup>16</sup>; and where a manager has been appointed as described in head (c) above, a copy of the claim notice must also be given to the leasehold valuation tribunal or court by which he was appointed<sup>17</sup>.

Where any premises have been specified in a claim notice, no subsequent claim notice which specifies the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, may be given so long as the earlier claim notice continues in force<sup>18</sup>.

Where a claim notice is given by an RTM company it continues in force from the relevant date until the right to manage is acquired by the company unless it has previously been withdrawn or deemed to be withdrawn<sup>19</sup> or has ceased<sup>20</sup> to have effect<sup>21</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/379. Contents of claim notice.

379. Contents of claim notice.

The claim notice must comply with the following requirements<sup>1</sup>. It must:

772 (1) specify the premises and contain a statement of the grounds on which it is claimed that they are premises to which the right to manage<sup>2</sup> applies<sup>3</sup>;

773 (2) state the full name of each person who is both:

59

73. (a) the qualifying tenant<sup>4</sup> of a flat<sup>5</sup> contained in the premises; and

74. (b) a member of the RTM company<sup>6</sup>,

60

774 and the address of his flat<sup>7</sup>;

775 (3) contain, in relation to each such person, such particulars of his lease<sup>8</sup> as are sufficient to identify it, including:

61

75. (a) the date on which it was entered into;

76. (b) the term for which it was granted; and

77. (c) the date of the commencement of the term<sup>9</sup>;

776 (4) state the name and registered office of the RTM company<sup>10</sup>;

777 (5) specify a date, not earlier than one month after the relevant date<sup>11</sup>, by which each person who was given the notice of claim<sup>12</sup> may respond to it by giving<sup>13</sup> a counter-notice<sup>14</sup>;

778 (6) specify a date, at least three months after that specified under head (5) above, on which the RTM company intends to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>15</sup>;

779 (7) also contain such other particulars, if any, as may be required to be contained in claim notices by regulations<sup>16</sup> made by the appropriate national authority<sup>17</sup>;

780 (8) comply with such requirements, if any, about the form of claim notices as may be prescribed by regulations so made<sup>18</sup>.

A claim notice is not invalidated by any inaccuracy in any of the particulars required by or by virtue of the above provisions<sup>19</sup>. Where any of the members of the RTM company whose names are stated in the claim notice was not the qualifying tenant of a flat contained in the premises on the relevant date, the claim notice is not invalidated on that account, so long as a sufficient number of qualifying tenants of flats contained in the premises were members of the company on that date; and for this purpose a 'sufficient number' is a number, greater than one, which is not less than one-half of the total number of flats contained in the premises on that date<sup>20</sup>.

A company which is an RTM company in relation to any premises may give to any person a notice requiring him to provide the company with any information which is in his possession or control, and which the company reasonably requires for ascertaining the particulars required by or by virtue of the above provisions to be included in a claim notice for claiming to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>21</sup>. Where the information is recorded in a document<sup>22</sup> in the person's possession or control, the RTM company may give him a notice requiring him:

- 781 (i) to permit any person authorised to act on behalf of the company at any reasonable time to inspect the document, or, if the information is recorded in the document in a form in which it is not readily intelligible, to give any such person access to it in a readily intelligible form; and
- 782 (ii) to supply the company with a copy<sup>23</sup> of the document containing the information in a readily intelligible form on payment of a reasonable fee<sup>24</sup>.

A person to whom a notice is so given must comply with it within the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which it is given<sup>25</sup>.

In addition to the particulars required by s 80(2)-(7) (see heads (1)-(6) in the text), a claim notice must contain the following prescribed particulars (see the Right to Manage (Prescribed Particulars and Forms) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/1988, reg 4; the Right to Manage (Prescribed Particulars and Forms) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/678, reg 4), ie:

- 31 (1) a statement that a person who does not dispute the RTM's company's entitlement to acquire the right to manage, and is the manager party under a management contract subsisting immediately before the date specified in the claim notice under head (5) in the text, must, in accordance with the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 92 (duties to give notice of contracts: see PARA 387 post), give a notice in relation to the contract to the person who is the contractor party in relation to the contract and to the RTM company;
- 32 (2) a statement that, from the acquisition date, landlords under leases of the whole or any part of the premises to which the claim notice relates are entitled to be members of the RTM company;
- 33 (3) a statement that the notice is not invalidated by any inaccuracy in any of the particulars required by heads (1)-(6) in the text or by reg 4 of the relevant regulations, but that a person who is of the opinion that any of the particulars contained in the claim notice are inaccurate may identify the particulars in question to the RTM company by which the notice was given and indicate the respects in which they are considered to be inaccurate;
- 34 (4) a statement that a person who receives the notice but does not fully understand its purpose, is advised to seek professional help; and
- 35 (5) the information provided in the notes to the form set out in Sch 2 to the relevant regulations.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/380. Right of access.

380. Right of access.

Where an RTM company<sup>1</sup> has given a claim notice<sup>2</sup> in relation to any premises, each of the persons specified below has a right of access to any part of the premises if that is reasonable in connection with any matter arising out of the claim to acquire the right to manage<sup>3</sup>. Those persons are:

- 783 (1) any person authorised to act on behalf of the RTM company;
 784 (2) any person who is landlord<sup>4</sup> under a lease<sup>5</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises and any person authorised to act on behalf of any such person;
 785 (3) any person who is party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>6</sup> and any person authorised to act on behalf of any such person; and 786 (4) any manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>7</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, and any person authorised to act on behalf of any such manager<sup>8</sup>.

The right so conferred is exercisable, at any reasonable time, on giving not less than ten days' notice to the occupier of any premises to which access is sought, or, if those premises are unoccupied, to the person entitled to occupy them<sup>9</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/381. Counter-notices.

381. Counter-notices.

A person who is given a claim notice<sup>1</sup> by an RTM company<sup>2</sup> may give a notice (a 'counter-notice') to the company no later than the date specified<sup>3</sup> in the claim notice<sup>4</sup>. A counter-notice is a notice containing a statement either:

- 787 (1) admitting that the RTM company was on the relevant date<sup>5</sup> entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises specified in the claim notice; or 788 (2) alleging that, by reason of a specified statutory provision<sup>6</sup>, the RTM company was on that date not so entitled, and containing such other particulars, if any, as may be required to be contained in counter-notices, and complying with such requirements, if any, about the form of counter-notices, as may be prescribed by regulations<sup>7</sup> made by the appropriate national authority<sup>8</sup>.

Where the RTM company has been given one or more counter-notices containing a statement such as is mentioned in head (2) above, the company may apply to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination that it was on the relevant date entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>9</sup>. Such an application must be made not later than the end of the period of two months beginning with the day on which the counter-notice, or, where more than one, the last of the counter-notices, was given<sup>10</sup>. Where the RTM company has been given one or more counter-notices containing such a statement, that company does not acquire the right to manage the premises unless:

- 789 (a) on an application under the above provisions it is finally determined<sup>11</sup> that the company was on the relevant date entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises; or
- 790 (b) the person by whom the counter-notice was given agrees, or the persons by whom the counter-notices were given agree, in writing that the company was so entitled<sup>12</sup>.

If on an application under the above provisions it is finally determined that the company was not on the relevant date entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises, the claim notice ceases to have effect<sup>13</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/382. Withdrawal or deemed withdrawal of claim notice.

382. Withdrawal or deemed withdrawal of claim notice.

A RTM company<sup>1</sup> which has given a claim notice<sup>2</sup> in relation to any premises may, at any time before it acquires the right to manage the premises, withdraw the claim notice by giving a notice to that effect (a 'notice of withdrawal')<sup>3</sup>. A notice of withdrawal must be given to each person who is:

- 791 (1) landlord<sup>4</sup> under a lease<sup>5</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises;
- 792 (2) party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>6</sup>;
- 793 (3) a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>7</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises; or
- 794 (4) the qualifying tenant<sup>8</sup> of a flat<sup>9</sup> contained in the premises<sup>10</sup>.

If an RTM company has been given one or more counter-notices<sup>11</sup> containing a statement alleging that, by reason of a specified statutory provision, that company was not on the relevant date<sup>12</sup> entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>13</sup> but either:

- 795 (a) no application for a determination as to its entitlement<sup>14</sup> is made within the specified period<sup>15</sup>; or
- 796 (b) such an application is so made but is subsequently withdrawn, the claim notice is deemed to be withdrawn<sup>16</sup>. The withdrawal is taken to occur:

- 797 (i) if head (a) above applies, at the end of the period specified in that head; and
- 798 (ii) if head (b) above applies, on the date of the withdrawal of the application<sup>17</sup>.

The claim notice is not, however, so deemed to be withdrawn<sup>18</sup> if the person by whom the counter-notice was given has, or the persons by whom the counter-notices were given have, before the time when the withdrawal would be taken to occur, agreed in writing that the RTM company was on the relevant date entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>19</sup>.

The claim notice is also deemed to be withdrawn if:

- 799 (A) a winding-up order is made, or a resolution for voluntary winding up is passed, with respect to the RTM company, or the RTM company enters administration;
- 800 (B) a receiver or a manager of the RTM company's undertaking is duly appointed, or possession is taken, by or on behalf of the holders of any debentures secured by a floating charge, of any property of the RTM company comprised in or subject to the charge;
- 801 (C) a voluntary arrangement proposed in the case of the RTM company for the purposes of Part I of the Insolvency Act 1986<sup>20</sup> is approved<sup>21</sup>; or
- 802 (D) the RTM company's name is struck off<sup>22</sup> the register<sup>23</sup>.

382 Withdrawal or deemed withdrawal of claim notice

TEXT AND NOTES 22-23--Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 87(4) amended: SI 2009/1941.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/383. Costs.

383. Costs.

An RTM company<sup>1</sup> is liable for reasonable costs incurred by a person who is:

- 803 (1) landlord<sup>2</sup> under a lease<sup>3</sup> of the whole or any part of any premises;
- 804 (2) party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>4</sup>; or
- 805 (3) a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>5</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, in consequence of a claim notice<sup>6</sup> given by the company in relation to the premises<sup>7</sup>. Any costs incurred by such a person in respect of professional services rendered to him by another are to be regarded as reasonable only if and to the extent that costs in respect of such services might reasonably be expected to have been incurred by him if the circumstances had been such that he was personally liable for all such costs<sup>8</sup>. Further, an RTM company is liable for any costs which such a person incurs as party to any proceedings<sup>9</sup> before a leasehold valuation tribunal only if the tribunal dismisses an application by the company for a determination that it is entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>10</sup>.

Where a claim notice given by an RTM company is at any time withdrawn or deemed to be withdrawn<sup>11</sup>, or at any time ceases to have effect<sup>12</sup>, the liability of the RTM company under the above provisions for costs incurred by any person is a liability for costs incurred by him down to that time<sup>13</sup>. Each person who is or has been a member of the RTM company is also liable for those costs, jointly and severally with the RTM company and each other person who is so liable<sup>14</sup>; but this does not make a person liable if:

- 806 (a) the lease by virtue of which he was a qualifying tenant<sup>15</sup> has been assigned to another person<sup>16</sup>; and
- 807 (b) that other person has become a member of the RTM company<sup>17</sup>.

Any question arising in relation to the amount of any costs payable by an RTM company must, in default of agreement, be determined by a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>18</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/ (iii) Claim to Acquire the Right to Manage/384. Position where landlords etc not traceable.

384. Position where landlords etc not traceable.

The following provisions apply where an RTM company<sup>1</sup> wishing to acquire the right to manage premises:

- 808 (1) complies with the statutory requirements as to membership<sup>2</sup>; and
- 809 (2) would not have been precluded from giving a valid claim notice<sup>3</sup> with respect to the premises, but cannot find, or ascertain the identity of, any of the persons to whom the claim notice would be required<sup>4</sup> to be given<sup>5</sup>.

The RTM company may apply to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order that the company is to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>6</sup>. Such an order may be made only if the company has given notice of the application to each person who is the qualifying tenant<sup>7</sup> of a flat<sup>8</sup> contained in the premises<sup>9</sup>.

Before an order is made the company may be required to take such further steps by way of advertisement or otherwise as is determined proper for the purpose of tracing the persons who are:

- 810 (a) landlords<sup>10</sup> under leases<sup>11</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises; or
- 811 (b) parties to such leases otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>12</sup>.

If any of those persons is traced after an application for an order is made, but before the making of an order, no further proceedings may be taken with a view to the making of an order<sup>13</sup>. Where that happens:

- 812 (i) the rights and obligations of all persons concerned are to be determined as if the company had, at the date of the application, duly given notice<sup>14</sup> of its claim to acquire the right to manage the premises; and
- 813 (ii) the leasehold valuation tribunal may give such directions as it thinks fit as to the steps to be taken for giving effect to their rights and obligations, including directions modifying or dispensing with any of the statutory<sup>15</sup> requirements<sup>16</sup>.

An application for an order may be withdrawn at any time before an order is made and, after it is withdrawn, head (i) above does not apply<sup>17</sup>; but where any step is taken for the purpose of giving effect to head (i) above in the case of any application, the application may not afterwards be withdrawn except with the consent of the person or persons traced, or by permission of the leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>18</sup>. Permission is to be given only where it appears just that it should be given by reason of matters coming to the knowledge of the RTM company in consequence of the tracing of the person or persons traced<sup>19</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'RTM company' see PARA 374 ante.

2 It complies with the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 79(4) or (5): see PARA 378 ante.

4 It is by ibid s 79(6): see PARA 378 ante.

385. Power to prescribe procedure.

Where a claim to acquire the right to manage any premises is made by the giving of a claim notice<sup>1</sup>, except as otherwise provided<sup>2</sup>:

- 814 (1) the procedure for giving effect to the claim notice; and
- 815 (2) the rights and obligations of all parties in any matter arising in giving effect to the claim notice, are to be such as may be prescribed by regulations<sup>3</sup> made by the appropriate national authority<sup>4</sup>. Regulations so made may, in particular, make provision for a person to be discharged from performing any obligations arising out of a claim notice by reason of the default or delay of some other person<sup>5</sup>.

(iv) Acquisition of the Right to Manage

386. The acquisition date.

The following provisions have effect about the date which is the acquisition date where an RTM company<sup>1</sup> acquires the right to manage any premises<sup>2</sup>.

Where there is no dispute about entitlement, the acquisition date is the date specified<sup>3</sup> in the claim notice<sup>4</sup>; and for these purposes there is no dispute about entitlement if:

- 816 (1) no counter-notice is given under the relevant statutory provision<sup>5</sup>; or
- 817 (2) the counter-notice so given<sup>6</sup>, or, where more than one is so given, each of them, contains a statement<sup>7</sup> admitting that the RTM company was, on the relevant date<sup>8</sup>, entitled to acquire the right to manage the specified premises<sup>9</sup>.

Where the right to manage the premises is acquired by the company by virtue of a determination by a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>10</sup>, the acquisition date is the date three months after the determination becomes final<sup>11</sup>.

Where the right to manage the premises is acquired by the company by virtue of the person or persons who gave counter-notices agreeing that the company was entitled to acquire the right to manage on the relevant date<sup>12</sup>, the acquisition date is the date three months after the day on which the person, or the last person, by whom a counter-notice containing a statement alleging that the company was not so entitled<sup>13</sup> was given agrees in writing that the company was on the relevant date entitled to acquire the right to manage the premises<sup>14</sup>.

Where an order is made in circumstances where any of the persons to whom the claim notice was required to be given are not traceable<sup>15</sup>, the acquisition date is, subject to any appeal, the date specified in the order<sup>16</sup>.

387. Duties to give notice of contracts.

The following provisions<sup>1</sup> apply where:

- 818 (1) the right to manage premises is to be acquired by an RTM company<sup>2</sup>, otherwise than by virtue of an order made in circumstances where any of the persons to whom the claim notice was required to be given are not traceable<sup>3</sup>; and
- 819 (2) there are one or more existing management contracts<sup>4</sup> relating to the premises<sup>5</sup>.

The person who is the manager party<sup>6</sup> in relation to an existing management contract must give a notice in relation to the contract:

- 820 (a) to the person who is the contractor party<sup>7</sup> in relation to the contract (a 'contractor notice'); and
- 821 (b) to the RTM company (a 'contract notice')<sup>8</sup>.

A contractor notice and a contract notice must be given:

- 822 (i) in the case of a contract subsisting immediately before the determination date<sup>9</sup>, on that date or as soon after that date as is reasonably practicable; and
- 823 (ii) in the case of a contract entered into during the period beginning with the determination date and ending with the acquisition date<sup>10</sup>, on the date on which it is entered into or as soon after that date as is reasonably practicable<sup>11</sup>.

A contractor notice must:

- 824 (A) give details sufficient to identify the contract in relation to which it is given;
- 825 (B) state that the right to manage the premises is to be acquired by an RTM company;
- 826 (C) state the name and registered office of the RTM company;
- 827 (D) specify the acquisition date; and
- 828 (E) contain such other particulars, if any, as may be required to be contained in contractor notices by regulations<sup>12</sup> made by the appropriate national authority<sup>13</sup>, and must also comply with such requirements, if any, about the form of contractor notices as may be prescribed by regulations so made<sup>14</sup>. Where a person who receives a contractor notice<sup>15</sup> is party to an existing management sub-contract<sup>16</sup> with another person (the 'sub-contractor party'), the person who received the notice must send a copy of the contractor notice to the sub-contractor party, and give to the RTM company a contract notice in relation to the existing management sub-contract<sup>17</sup>. This duty must be complied with, in the case of a contract entered into before the contractor notice is received, on the date on which it is received or as soon after that date as is reasonably practicable, and, in the case of a contract entered into after the contractor notice is received, on the date on which it is entered into or as soon after that date as is reasonably practicable<sup>18</sup>.

A contract notice must give particulars of the contract in relation to which it is given and of the person who is the contractor party, or sub-contractor party, in relation to that contract, and contain such other particulars, if any, as may be required to be contained in contract notices by regulations made by the appropriate national authority<sup>19</sup>. It must also comply with such requirements, if any, about the form of contract notices as may be prescribed by such regulations so made<sup>20</sup>.

Where the right to manage premises is to be acquired by an RTM company<sup>1</sup>, the company may give notice to a person who is;

- 829 (1)     landlord<sup>2</sup> under a lease<sup>3</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises;
- 830 (2)     party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>4</sup>; or
- 831 (3)     a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>5</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, requiring him to provide the company with any information which is in his possession or control and which the company reasonably requires in connection with the exercise of the right to manage<sup>6</sup>.

Where the information is recorded in a document<sup>7</sup> in his possession or control the notice may require him:

- 832 (a) to permit any person authorised to act on behalf of the company at any reasonable time to inspect the document or, if the information is recorded in the document in a form in which it is not readily intelligible, to give any such person access to it in a readily intelligible form; and
- 833 (b) to supply the company with a copy<sup>8</sup> of the document containing the information in a readily intelligible form<sup>9</sup>.

A notice may not require a person to do anything under these provisions before the acquisition date<sup>10</sup> but, subject to that, a person who is required by a notice to do anything under these provisions must do it within the period of 28 days beginning with the day on which the notice is given<sup>11</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(iv) Acquisition of the Right to Manage/389. Duty to pay accrued uncommitted service charges.

389. Duty to pay accrued uncommitted service charges.

Where the right to manage premises is to be acquired by an RTM company<sup>1</sup>, a person who is:

- 834 (1) landlord<sup>2</sup> under a lease<sup>3</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises;
- 835 (2) party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>4</sup>; or
- 836 (3) a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>5</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, must make to the company a payment equal to the amount of any accrued uncommitted service charges<sup>6</sup> held by him on the acquisition date<sup>7</sup>.

The amount of any accrued uncommitted service charges is the aggregate of:

- 837 (a) any sums which have been paid to the person by way of service charges in respect of the premises; and 838 (b) any investments which represent such sums, and any income which has accrued on them, less so much, if any, of that amount as is required to meet the costs incurred before the acquisition date in connection with the matters for which the service charges were payable<sup>8</sup>. The person or the RTM company may make an application to a leasehold valuation tribunal to determine the amount of any payment which so falls to be made<sup>9</sup>.

The duty imposed by these provisions must be complied with on the acquisition date or as soon after that date as is reasonably practicable<sup>10</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(v) Exercising the Right to Manage/391. Management functions under leases.

391. Management functions under leases.

The following provisions apply<sup>1</sup> in relation to management functions<sup>2</sup> relating to the whole or any part of the premises<sup>3</sup>.

Management functions which a person who is landlord<sup>4</sup> under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises has under the lease are instead functions of the RTM company<sup>5</sup>; and where a person is party to a lease of the whole or any part of the premises otherwise than as landlord or tenant, management functions of his under the lease are also instead functions of the RTM company<sup>6</sup>. Accordingly, any provisions of the lease making provision about the relationship of:

- 844 (1) a person who is landlord under the lease; and 845 (2) a person who is party to the lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant, in relation to such functions do not have effect<sup>7</sup>.

Any obligation owed by the RTM company by virtue of these provisions<sup>8</sup> to a tenant under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises is also owed to each person who is landlord under the lease<sup>9</sup>.

A person who is:

- 846 (a) landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises;
- 847 (b) party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant; or
- 848 (c) a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>10</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, is not entitled to do anything which the RTM company is required or empowered to do under the lease by virtue of the above provisions<sup>11</sup>, except in accordance with an agreement made by him and the RTM company<sup>12</sup>; but this does not prevent any person from insuring the whole or any part of the premises at his own expense<sup>13</sup>.

So far as any function of a tenant under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises:

- 849 (i) relates to the exercise of any function under the lease which is a function of the RTM company by virtue of the above provisions; and
- 850 (ii) is exercisable in relation to a person who is landlord under the lease or party to the lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant, it is instead exercisable in relation to the RTM company<sup>14</sup>; but this does not require or permit the payment to the RTM company of so much of any service charges<sup>15</sup> payable by a tenant under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises as is required to meet costs incurred before the right to manage was acquired by the RTM company in connection with matters for which the service charges are payable<sup>16</sup>.

1    Ie in the circumstances described in the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 95: see PARA 390 ante.

2    'Management functions' are functions with respect to services, repairs, maintenance, improvements, insurance and management; but ibid s 96 (see the text and notes 3-7 infra) does not apply in relation to (1) functions with respect to a matter concerning only a part of the premises consisting of a flat or other unit not held under a lease by a qualifying tenant; or (2) functions relating to re-entry or forfeiture: s 96(5), (6). An order amending s 96(5) or (6) may be made by the appropriate national authority: s 96(7). At the date at which this title states the law, no such order had been made. As to the making of orders generally see PARA 355 note 9 ante. For the meaning of 'flat' see PARA 368 note 3 ante; for the meanings of 'unit', 'lease' and 'tenant' see PARA 369 note 8 ante; for the meaning of 'qualifying tenant' see PARA 370 ante; and for the meaning of references to leases held by such tenants see PARA 379 note 8 ante. For the meaning of 'the appropriate national authority' see PARA 355 note 9 ante.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(v) Exercising the Right to Manage/392. Functions relating to approvals.

392. Functions relating to approvals.

The following provisions apply<sup>1</sup> in relation to the grant of approvals<sup>2</sup> under long leases<sup>3</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises; but nothing in them applies in relation to an approval concerning only a part of the premises consisting of a flat<sup>4</sup> or other unit<sup>5</sup> not held under a lease by a qualifying tenant<sup>6</sup>.

Where a person who is:

- 851 (1) landlord<sup>7</sup> under a long lease of the whole or any part of the premises; or
- 852 (2) party to such a lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant<sup>8</sup>, has functions in relation to the grant of approvals to a tenant under the lease, the functions are instead functions of the RTM company<sup>9</sup>. Accordingly, any provisions of the lease making provision about the relationship of a person who is landlord under the lease and a person who is party to the lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant in relation to such functions do not have effect<sup>10</sup>.

The RTM company must not grant an approval by virtue of the above provisions<sup>11</sup> without having given:

- 853 (a) in the case of an approval relating to assignment, underletting, charging, parting with possession, the making of structural alterations or improvements or alterations of use, 30 days' notice; or
- 854 (b) in any other case, 14 days' notice<sup>12</sup>, to the person who is, or each of the persons who are, landlord under the lease<sup>13</sup>. If a person to whom notice is so given objects to the grant of the approval<sup>14</sup> before the time when the RTM company would first be entitled to grant it, the RTM company may grant it only:

- 855 (i) in accordance with the written agreement of the person who objected; or
- 856 (ii) in accordance with a determination of, or on an appeal from, a leasehold valuation tribunal<sup>15</sup>.

So far as any function of a tenant under a long lease of the whole or any part of the premises:

- 857 (A) relates to the exercise of any function which is a function of the RTM company by virtue the above provisions; and 858 (B) is exercisable in relation to a person who is landlord under the lease or party to the lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant, it is instead exercisable in relation to the RTM company<sup>16</sup>.

1 le in the circumstances described in the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 95: see PARA 390 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'approval' includes consent or licence and 'approving' is to be construed accordingly; and an approval required to be obtained by virtue of a restriction entered on the register of title kept by the Chief Land Registrar is, so far as relating to a long lease of the whole or any part of any premises, to be treated for the purposes of ibid Pt 2 Ch 1 (ss 71-113) (as amended) (see PARA 367 et seq ante, PARA 393 et seq post) as an approval under the lease: s 98(7). For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 369 note 8 ante.

10 Ibid s 98(3).

11 le by virtue of ibid s 98(2): see the text and notes 7-9 supra.

12 Regulations increasing the period of notice to be given under ibid s 98(4)(b) (see head (b) in the text) in the case of any description of approval may be made by the appropriate national authority: s 98(5). As to the making of regulations generally see s 178; and PARA 59 note 2 ante; and for the meaning of 'the appropriate national authority' see PARA 355 note 9 ante. At the date at which this title states the law, no such regulations had been made.

13 Ibid s 98(4). As to the giving of notices see PARA 373 ante.

14 An objection to the grant of the approval may not be made by a person unless he could withhold the approval if the function of granting it were exercisable by him (and not by the RTM company); and a person may not make an objection operating only if a condition or requirement is not satisfied unless he could grant the approval subject to the condition or requirement being satisfied if the function of granting it were so exercisable: ibid s 99(2), (3). An objection to the grant of the approval is made by giving notice of the objection (and of any condition or requirement which must be satisfied if it is not to operate) to the RTM company and the tenant, and, if the approval is to a tenant approving an act of a subtenant, to the subtenant: s 99(4).

15 Ibid s 99(1). An application to a leasehold valuation tribunal for a determination under s 99(1)(b) may be made by (1) the RTM company; (2) the tenant; (3) if the approval is to a tenant approving an act of a subtenant, the subtenant; or (4) any person who is landlord under the lease: s 99(5).

An application under s 99(1) must be accompanied by: (1) the name and address for service of the RTM company; (2) the name and address of the freeholder, any intermediate landlord and any manager; (3) a copy of the memorandum and articles of association of the RTM company; and (4) a description of the approval sought and a copy of the relevant lease: Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099, reg 3(5), Sch 1 para 4(e), Sch 2 para 4(1)-(3), (7); Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681, reg 3(5), Sch 1 para 4(e), Sch 2 para 4(1)-(3), (7). MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(v) Exercising the Right to Manage/393. Enforcement of tenant covenants.

393. Enforcement of tenant covenants.

These provisions apply<sup>1</sup> in relation to the enforcement of untransferred tenant covenants<sup>2</sup> of a lease of the whole or any part of the premises<sup>3</sup>. Untransferred tenant covenants are enforceable by the RTM company, as well as by any other person by whom they are otherwise enforceable<sup>4</sup>, in the same manner as they are enforceable by any other such person<sup>5</sup>. The RTM company may not, however, exercise any function of re-entry or forfeiture<sup>6</sup>.

Any power under a lease of a person who is:

- 859 (1) landlord<sup>7</sup> under the lease; or
- 860 (2) party to the lease otherwise than as landlord or tenant, to enter any part of the premises to determine whether a tenant is complying with any untransferred tenant covenant is exercisable by the RTM company, as well as by the landlord or party<sup>8</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(v) Exercising the Right to Manage/394. Monitoring and reporting in relation to tenant covenants.

394. Monitoring and reporting in relation to tenant covenants.

These provisions apply<sup>1</sup> in relation to failures to comply with tenant covenants<sup>2</sup> of leases<sup>3</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises<sup>4</sup>. The RTM company<sup>5</sup> must:

- 861 (1) keep under review whether tenant covenants of leases of the whole or any part of the premises are being complied with; and
- 862 (2) report to any person who is landlord<sup>6</sup> under such a lease any failure to comply with any tenant covenant of the lease<sup>7</sup>.

The report must be made before the end of the period of three months beginning with the day on which the failure to comply comes to the attention of the RTM company<sup>8</sup>; but the RTM company need not report to a landlord a failure to comply with a tenant covenant if:

- 863 (a) the failure has been remedied;
- 864 (b) reasonable compensation has been paid in respect of the failure; or
- 865 (c) the landlord has notified the RTM company that it need not report to him failures of the description of the failure concerned<sup>9</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(v) Exercising the Right to Manage/395. Landlord contributions to service charges.

395. Landlord contributions to service charges.

These provisions apply<sup>1</sup> where:

- 866 (1) the premises contain at least one flat<sup>2</sup> or other unit<sup>3</sup> not subject to a lease held by a qualifying tenant<sup>4</sup> (an 'excluded unit');
- 867 (2) the service charges<sup>5</sup> payable under leases of flats contained in the premises which are so subject fall to be calculated as a proportion of the relevant costs<sup>6</sup>; and
- 868 (3) the proportions of the relevant costs so payable, when aggregated, amount to less than the whole of the relevant costs<sup>7</sup>.

Where the premises contain only one excluded unit, the person who is the appropriate person in relation to the excluded unit<sup>8</sup> must pay to the RTM company<sup>9</sup> the difference between:

- 869 (a) the relevant costs; and 870 (b) the aggregate amount payable in respect of the relevant costs under leases of flats contained in the premises which are held by qualifying tenants<sup>10</sup>.

Where the premises contain more than one excluded unit, each person who is the appropriate person in relation to an excluded unit must pay to the RTM company the appropriate proportion of that difference<sup>11</sup>; and the appropriate proportion in the case of each such person is the proportion of the internal floor area of all of the excluded units which is internal floor area of the excluded unit in relation to which he is the appropriate person<sup>12</sup>.

(vi) Enforcement of Obligations

396. County court's power to enforce obligations.

A county court may, on the application of any person interested, make an order requiring a person who has failed to comply with a requirement imposed on him by, under or by virtue of any statutory provision relating to the right to manage<sup>1</sup> to make good the default within such time as is specified in the order<sup>2</sup>. An application may not be made under this provision unless:

871 (1) a notice has been previously given<sup>3</sup> to the person in question requiring him to make good the default; and 872 (2) more than 14 days have elapsed since the date of the giving of that notice without his having done so<sup>4</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(1) MANAGEMENT BY RTM COMPANIES/(vii) Cessation of Management/397. Cessation of management by RTM company.

(vii) Cessation of Management

397. Cessation of management by RTM company.

The following provisions apply with regard to the circumstances in which, after an RTM company<sup>1</sup> has acquired the right to manage any premises, that right ceases to be exercisable by it<sup>2</sup>.

Provision may be made by an agreement made between:

873 (1)     the RTM company; and

874 (2)     each person who is landlord<sup>3</sup> under a lease<sup>4</sup> of the whole or any part of the premises, for the right to manage the premises to cease to be exercisable by the RTM company<sup>5</sup>.

The right to manage the premises ceases to be exercisable by the RTM company:

875 (a)     if:

78. (i)     a winding-up order is made, or a resolution for voluntary winding up is passed, with respect to the RTM company, or the RTM company enters administration;

79. (ii)     a receiver or a manager of the RTM company's undertaking is duly appointed, or possession is taken, by or on behalf of the holders of any debentures secured by a floating charge, of any property of the RTM company comprised in or subject to the charge;

80.     (iii)     a voluntary arrangement proposed in the case of the RTM company<sup>6</sup> is approved<sup>7</sup>; or

81.     (iv)     the RTM company's name is struck off<sup>8</sup> the register<sup>9</sup>;

64

876 (b)     if a manager appointed under Part II of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987<sup>10</sup> to act in relation to the premises, or any premises containing or contained in the premises, begins so to act or an order under that Part of that Act that the right to manage the premises is to cease to be exercisable by the RTM company takes effect<sup>11</sup>;

877 (c)     if it ceases to be an RTM company in relation to the premises<sup>12</sup>.

397 Cessation of management by RTM company

NOTES 8, 9--Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 105(3) amended: SI 2009/1941.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(i) Appointment of Managing Agents/398. Consultation about appointment.

(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS

(i) Appointment of Managing Agents

398. Consultation about appointment.

A recognised tenants' association<sup>1</sup> may at any time serve a notice on the landlord<sup>2</sup> requesting him to consult the association<sup>3</sup> on matters relating to the appointment or employment by him of a managing agent<sup>4</sup> for any relevant premises<sup>5</sup>.

Where, at the time when any such notice is served by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord does not employ any managing agent for any relevant premises, the landlord must, before appointing such a managing agent, serve on the association a notice specifying:

- 878 (1) the name of the proposed managing agent;
- 879 (2) the landlord's obligations to the tenants represented by the association which it is proposed that the managing agent should be required to discharge on his behalf; and 880 (3) a period of not less than one month beginning with the date of service of the notice within which the association may make observations on the proposed appointment<sup>6</sup>.

Where, at the time when a notice is so served by a recognised tenants' association, the landlord employs a managing agent for any relevant premises, the landlord must, within the period of one month beginning with the date of service of that notice, serve on the association a notice specifying:

- 881 (a) the landlord's obligations to the tenants represented by the association which the managing agent is required to discharge on his behalf; and
- 882 (b) a reasonable period within which the association may make observations on the manner in which the managing agent has been discharging those obligations, and on the desirability of his continuing to discharge them<sup>7</sup>.

A landlord who has been so served with a notice by an association must, so long as he employs a managing agent for any relevant premises:

- 883 (i) serve on that association at least once in every five years a notice specifying:
65
  - 82. (A) any change occurring since the date of the last notice served by him on the association in the obligations which the managing agent has been required to discharge on his behalf; and
  - 83. (B) a reasonable period within which the association may make observations on the manner in which the managing agent has discharged those obligations since that date, and on the desirability of his continuing to discharge them;
- 66
884 (ii) serve on that association, whenever he proposes to appoint any new managing agent for any relevant premises, a notice specifying the matters mentioned in heads (1) to (3) above<sup>8</sup>.

Where a recognised tenants' association has so served a notice with respect to any relevant premises and the interest of the landlord in those premises becomes vested in a new landlord, that notice ceases to have effect with respect to those premises, without prejudice to the service by the association on the new landlord of a fresh notice<sup>9</sup> with respect to those premises<sup>10</sup>.

Any notice served by a landlord under the above provisions must specify the name and the address in the United Kingdom<sup>11</sup> of the person to whom any observations made in pursuance of the notice are to be sent; and the landlord must have regard to any such observations that are received by that person within the period specified in the notice<sup>12</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'recognised tenants' association' see PARA 327 ante.

2 For these purposes, 'landlord', in relation to a recognised tenants' association, means the immediate landlord of the tenants represented by the association or a person who has a right to enforce payment of service charges payable by any of those tenants: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30B(8) (s 30B added by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 44). 'Tenant' includes a statutory tenant: Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30B(8) (as so added). For the meaning of 'statutory tenant' see PARA 52 note 1 ante; and for the meaning of 'service charge' see PARA 326 ante.

Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), s 30B (as so added) has effect as if references to the landlord were to the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 6.

3 ie in accordance with the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30B (as added: see note 2 supra).

4 For these purposes, 'managing agent', in relation to any relevant premises, means an agent of the landlord appointed to discharge any of the landlord's obligations to the tenants represented by the recognised tenants' association in question which relate to the management by him of those premises; and any premises, whether a building or not, are relevant premises in relation to a recognised tenants' association if any of the tenants represented by the association may be required under the terms of their leases to contribute by the payment of service charges to costs relating to those premises: ibid s 30B(8) (as added: see note 2 supra). For the meaning of 'lease' see PARA 52 note 1 ante.

5 Ibid s 30B(1) (as added: see note 2 supra).

6 Ibid s 30B(2) (as added: see note 2 supra).

7 Ibid s 30B(3) (as added: see note 2 supra).

8 Ibid s 30B(4) (as added: see note 2 supra). A landlord is not, however, by virtue of a notice served by an association under s 30B(1) (as so added), required to serve on the association a notice under s 30B(4)(a) or (b) (as so added) if the association subsequently serves on the landlord a notice withdrawing its request under s 30B(1) (as so added) to be consulted by him: s 30B(5) (as added: see note 2 supra).

9 Ie under ibid s 30B(1) (as added: see note 2 supra).

10 Ibid s 30B(6) (as added: see note 2 supra). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company, s 30B(6) (as so added) is omitted: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 6.

11 For the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 25 note 18 ante.

12 Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 s 30B(7) (as added: see note 2 supra).

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(ii) Appointment of Manager/399. Tenant's right to apply to leasehold valuation tribunal for appointment of manager.

(ii) Appointment of Manager

399. Tenant's right to apply to leasehold valuation tribunal for appointment of manager.

The tenant<sup>1</sup> of a flat<sup>2</sup> contained in any premises consisting of the whole or part of a building where the building or part contains two or more flats may apply<sup>3</sup> to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order<sup>4</sup> appointing a manager to act in relation to those premises<sup>5</sup>. Such an application may not be made at a time when:

885 (1) the interest of the landlord<sup>6</sup> in the premises is held:

84. (a) by an exempt landlord<sup>7</sup>; or

85. (b) a resident landlord<sup>8</sup>, unless at least one-half of the flats contained in the premises are held on long leases<sup>9</sup> which are not business tenancies<sup>10</sup>; or

68

886 (2) the premises are included within the functional land<sup>11</sup> of any charity<sup>12</sup>.

An application for such an order may be made:

887 (i) jointly by tenants of two or more flats if they are each entitled<sup>13</sup> to make such an application<sup>14</sup>; and 888 (ii) in respect of two or more premises to which these provisions<sup>15</sup> apply<sup>16</sup>.

Where the tenancy of a flat contained in any such premises is held by joint tenants, an application for such an order in respect of those premises may be made by any one or more of those tenants<sup>17</sup>.

An application to the court for it to exercise, in relation to any premises, any jurisdiction to appoint a receiver or manager may not be made by a tenant, in his capacity as such, in any circumstances in which an application could be made by him to a leasehold valuation tribunal for an order appointing a manager to act in relation to those premises<sup>18</sup>.

1 For the meaning of 'tenant' see PARA 53 note 1 ante. For these purposes, however, references to a tenant do not include references to a tenant under a tenancy to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (ss 23-46) (as amended) (see PARA 701 et seq post) applies: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 21(7). Further, where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), references to a tenant of a flat contained in the premises include a person who is landlord under a lease of the whole or any part of the premises: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 102(1), Sch 7 para 8(1), (3).

2 For the meaning of 'flat' see PARA 149 note 2 ante.

3 Ie subject to the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 ss 21(2)-(7), 22-24 (as amended): see the text and notes 4-18 infra; and PARAS 400-403 post.

4 Ie under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as amended): see PARA 402 post.

5 Ibid s 21(1), (2) (amended by the Housing Act 1996 s 86). The Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 21(2) (as so amended) is subject to s 21(3) (see heads (1)-(2) in the text): s 21(2).

6 For the meaning of 'landlord' see PARA 53 note 1 ante. Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), references in ibid Pt II (ss 21-24) (as amended) to the landlord are to the RTM company: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 8(1), (2).

7 For the meaning of 'exempt landlord' see PARA 354 ante.

8 For these purposes, the landlord of any premises consisting of the whole or part of a building is a resident landlord of those premises at any time if (1) the premises are not, and do not form part of, a purpose-built block of flats; and (2) at that time the landlord occupies a flat contained in the premises as his only or principal residence; and (3) he has so occupied such a flat throughout a period of not less than 12 months ending with that time: Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 ss 58(2), 60(1). 'Purpose-built block of flats' means a building which contained as constructed, and contains, two or more flats: s 58(3).

9 For the meaning of 'long lease' see PARA 149 note 1 ante.

10 Ie long leases which are not tenancies to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 Pt II (as amended) applies: see the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 21(3A) (added by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 s 161).

11 For these purposes, 'functional land', in relation to a charity, means land occupied by the charity, or by trustees of it, and wholly or mainly used for charitable purposes: Landlord and Tenant 1987 s 60(1). 'Charitable purposes', in relation to a charity, means charitable purposes whether of that charity or of that charity and other charities: s 60(1). For the meaning of 'charity' see PARA 354 note 18 ante.

12 Ibid s 21(3). Where the premises are managed by an RTM company (see PARA 367 et seq ante), s 21(3) does not apply: Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 Sch 7 para 8(1), (4).

13 Ie by virtue of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 21 (as amended).

14 In relation to any such joint application, references in ibid Pt II (as amended) to a single tenant are to be construed accordingly: s 21(4).

15 Ie ibid Pt II (as amended): see the text and notes 1-14 supra; and PARAS 400-403 post.

16 Ibid s 21(4).

17 Ibid s 21(5).

18 Ibid s 21(6) (amended by the Housing Act 1996 s 86). There is no limitation on the prohibition in this provision, which confers on the leasehold valuation tribunal exclusive jurisdiction over matters affecting the appointment of a receiver over blocks of flats: see Stylli v Hamberton Properties Inc [2002] EWHC 394 (Ch), [2002] All ER (D) 28 (Mar).

399 Tenant's right to apply to leasehold valuation tribunal for appointment of manager

TEXT AND NOTE 12--Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 21(3) amended: Housing and Regeneration Act 2008 Sch 8 para 38.

Halsbury's Laws of England/LANDLORD AND TENANT (VOLUME 27(1) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1-700; VOLUME 27(2) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 701-1385; VOLUME 27(3) (2006 REISSUE) PARAS 1386-2000)/9. MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(ii) Appointment of Manager/400. Preliminary notice by tenant.

400. Preliminary notice by tenant.

Before an application for an order appointing a manager<sup>1</sup> is made in respect of any premises<sup>2</sup> by a tenant<sup>3</sup> of a flat<sup>4</sup> contained in those premises, a notice must be served<sup>5</sup> by the tenant on the landlord<sup>6</sup> and on any person, other than the landlord, by whom obligations relating to the management of the premises or any part of them are owed to the tenant under his tenancy<sup>7</sup>. Such a notice must:

- 889 (1) specify the tenant's name, the address of his flat and an address in England and Wales, which may be the address of his flat, at which any person on whom the notice is served may serve notices, including notices in proceedings<sup>8</sup>, on him in connection with such an appointment<sup>9</sup>;
- 890 (2) state that the tenant intends to make an application for an order appointing a manager<sup>10</sup> to be made by a leasehold valuation tribunal in respect of such premises as are specified in the notice but, if head (4) below is applicable, that he will not do so if the requirement specified in pursuance of that head is complied with;
- 891 (3) specify the grounds on which the tribunal would be asked to make such an order and the matters that would be relied on by the tenant for the purpose of establishing those grounds;
- 892 (4) where those matters are capable of being remedied by any person on whom the notice is served, require him, within such reasonable period as is specified in the notice, to take such steps for the purpose of remedying them as are so specified; and
- 893 (5) contain such information, if any, as the Secretary of State or, in relation to Wales, the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister may prescribe by regulations<sup>11</sup>.

A leasehold valuation tribunal may, whether on the hearing of an application for such an order or not, by order dispense with the requirement to serve a notice under the above provisions on a person in a case where it is satisfied that it would not be reasonably practicable to serve such a notice on the person; but the tribunal may, when doing so, direct that such other notices are served, or such other steps are taken, as it thinks fit<sup>12</sup>.

In a case where a notice has been so served on the landlord and his interest in the premises specified in pursuance of head (2) above is subject to a mortgage<sup>13</sup>, the landlord must, as soon as is reasonably practicable after receiving the notice, serve on the mortgagee a copy of the notice<sup>14</sup>.

401. Application to leasehold valuation tribunal for appointment of manager.

No application for an order appointing a manager<sup>1</sup> may be made to a leasehold valuation tribunal unless:

- 894 (1)    in a case where a preliminary notice has been served by the tenant<sup>2</sup> either:

86. (a) the specified period<sup>3</sup> has expired without the person required to take steps to remedy the specified matters having taken the steps that he was required to take<sup>4</sup>; or
87. (b) no person was required to take such steps<sup>5</sup>; or
- 70 895 (2) in a case where the requirement to serve such a notice has been dispensed with by an order<sup>6</sup> of the tribunal, either:
- 71 88. (a) any notices required to be served, and any other steps required to be taken by virtue of the order have been served or, as the case may be, taken; or
89. (b) no direction was given by the tribunal when making the order<sup>7</sup>.
- 72

An application for such an order must, unless the service of such a notice has been dispensed with, be accompanied by a copy of the preliminary notice served<sup>8</sup>. A fee is payable for the application<sup>9</sup>.

MANAGEMENT OF PREMISES/(2) TENANTS' OTHER MANAGEMENT RIGHTS/(ii) Appointment of Manager/402. Appointment of manager by leasehold valuation tribunal.

402. Appointment of manager by leasehold valuation tribunal.

A leasehold valuation tribunal may, on an application for an order appointing a manager<sup>1</sup>, by order<sup>2</sup> appoint a manager to carry out in relation to any premises<sup>3</sup> such functions in connection with the management of the premises<sup>4</sup> or such functions of a receiver, or both, as the tribunal thinks fit<sup>5</sup>. A leasehold valuation tribunal may, however, make such an order only in the following circumstances, namely:

896 (1) where the tribunal is satisfied:

73

90. (a) that any relevant person<sup>6</sup> either is in breach of any obligation owed by him to the tenant<sup>7</sup> under his tenancy and relating to the management of the premises in question or any part of them or, in the case of an obligation dependent on notice, would be in breach of any such obligation but for the fact that it has not been reasonably practicable for the tenant to give him the appropriate notice; and

91. (b) that it is just and convenient to make the order in all the circumstances of the case<sup>8</sup>;

897 (2) where the tribunal is satisfied:

75

92. (a) that unreasonable service charges<sup>9</sup> have been made, or are proposed or likely to be made; and

93. (b) that it is just and convenient to make the order in all the circumstances of the case<sup>10</sup>;

76

898 (3) where the tribunal is satisfied:

77

94. (a) that unreasonable variable administration charges<sup>11</sup> have been made, or are proposed or likely to be made; and

95. (b) that it is just and convenient to make the order in all the circumstances of the case<sup>12</sup>;

78

899 (4) as from a day to be appointed<sup>13</sup>, where the tribunal is satisfied:

79

96. (a) that there has been a failure to comply with a duty imposed by or by virtue of the statutory provisions regarding the manner in which service charge contributions are to be held<sup>14</sup>; and

97. (b) that it is just and convenient to make the order in all the circumstances of the case<sup>15</sup>;

80

900 (5) where the tribunal is satisfied:

81

98. (a) that any relevant person has failed to comply with any relevant provision of a code of management practice approved<sup>16</sup> by the Secretary of State<sup>17</sup> or, in relation to Wales, by the National Assembly for Wales or the relevant Welsh minister<sup>18</sup>; and

99. (b) that it is just and convenient to make the order in all the circumstances of the case<sup>19</sup>; or

901 (6) where the tribunal is satisfied that other circumstances exist which make it just and convenient for the order to be made<sup>20</sup>.

The premises in respect of which an order is so made may, if the tribunal thinks fit, be either more or less extensive than the premises specified in the application on which the order is made<sup>21</sup>.

Such an order may make provision with respect to such matters relating to the exercise by the manager of his functions under the order and such incidental or ancillary matters as the tribunal thinks fit; and, on any subsequent application made for the purpose by the manager, the tribunal may give him directions with respect to any such matters<sup>22</sup>. Such an order may provide:

- 902 (i) for rights and liabilities arising under contracts to which the manager is not a party to become rights and liabilities of the manager;
- 903 (ii) for the manager to be entitled to prosecute claims in respect of causes of action, whether contractual or tortious, accruing before or after the date of his appointment;
- 904 (iii) for remuneration to be paid to the manager by any relevant person, or by the tenants of the premises in respect of which the order is made or by all or any of those persons;
- 905 (iv) for the manager's functions to be exercisable by him<sup>23</sup> either during a specified period or without limit of time<sup>24</sup>.

Any such order may be granted subject to such conditions as the court thinks fit; and in particular its operation may be suspended on terms fixed by the tribunal<sup>25</sup>.

In a case where an application for an order was preceded by the service of a preliminary notice by the tenant<sup>26</sup>, the tribunal may, if it thinks fit, make such an order notwithstanding that any period specified<sup>27</sup> in the notice was not a reasonable period or that the notice failed in any other respect to comply with any statutory requirement<sup>28</sup> or any requirement contained in any regulations applying<sup>29</sup> to the notice<sup>30</sup>.

1    le an order under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as amended): see the text and notes 2-30 infra.

2    The statutory wording is 'by order, whether interlocutory or final', but the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (England) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2099 (as amended) and the Leasehold Valuation Tribunals (Procedure) (Wales) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/681 (as amended) make no mention of interlocutory (interim) orders. An interim order under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 s 24 (as originally enacted) was made by the court in Howard v Midrome Ltd [1991] 1 EGLR 58, [1991] 03 EG 135, where the roof was leaking and the landlords were in breach of their repairing covenants.

3    le any premises to which the Landlord and Tenant Act 1987 Pt II (ss 21-24) (as amended) (see PARA 399 et seq ante) applies.

4    For these purposes, references to the management of any premises include references to the repair, maintenance, improvement or insurance of those premises: ibid s 24(11) (amended by the Commonhold and Leasehold Reform Act 2002 ss 150, 160(1), (4)(e), Sch 9 para 8).
